Hussein Names Palestinian Prime Minister

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — King Hussein of Jordan formed a new government today under a civilian, Amman Radio reported.

The new cabinet replaces the military government formed Sept. 16, a day before the king's tanks rolled into Amman to try to crush the Palestinian guerrillas. The military premier, Brig. Mohammed Daoud, resigned Friday.

The king's mandate to Toukan, a Palestinian, charged him to do everything possible to return life in the country to normal after nine days of fighting between royal troops and guerrillas and to heal regional differences between East Bank Jordanians and the Palestinians.

Toukan also will be foreign minister in the 13-man cabinet, which includes at least five soldiers.

At least five cabinet members, including the premier himself, are Palestinians.

IN FORMER CABINET

Five of the soldiers in the new cabinet were in the former military cabinet, which has been denounced by the Palestinian commandos and for whose replacement the Arab heads of state in Cairo had been pressing.

They are Brig. Mazen Ajlouni, who also is deputy to Field Marshal Habis Majali, military governor; Brig. Saleh Al-Shari, Col. Abu Ghosh, Maj. Mukley Al-Awdatallah and Maj. Adnan Abu Odeh.

Gen. Akkash al-Zabin, a former chief of staff who replaces Maj.-Gen. Mutlaq Eid as defence minister, is new to the cabinet.

Toukan, the new prime minister, is a former deputy premier. He was chief of Hussein's royal court.

Meanwhile, Palestinian guerrillas said today they released 16 of their 54 air-hijack hostages Friday because the food and water they were using was needed for Palestinian children.

U.S. Plans To Rearm Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP) —The United States will replace the arms and ammunition that the Jordanian army lost battling guerrillas and Syrians, deputy secretary of defence David Packard said Friday.

Packard said the Pentagon was encouraged by the success of King Hussein's army, equipped largely with American and British tanks and planes, and that the arms replenishment would be made "to make sure they have a continuing military capability."

Assessing the aftermath of a week of bitter fighting in Jordan, Packard told newsmen at a breakfast meeting Friday that the Pentagon had come to "two or three rather important conclusions."

● "Though there is lots of speculation about why the Syrians pulled out," Packard said "in my judgment one of the most important reasons was the Jordanian army's ability to give them a rough time."

DEMONSTRATORS in St. Jerome, Que., hold up effigy representing United States interests and placards denouncing the "sale of Quebec" to American business interests. About 400 persons Friday marched through the city, throwing Molotov cocktails and smashing windows, but no arrests were made. Demonstrators gathered a short distance from where Premier Robert Bourassa and Jean Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, were speaking to businessmen.

IDENTITY POSITIVE

Suspect Urged To 'Face Music'

Citizenship Unclear

United States authorities say they are encouraging a young suspect in the robbery Thursday of a Victoria bank and the wounding of two city police officers to "face the music in Canada."

The young man, apprehended in U.S. waters early Friday morning, has been positively identified by Victoria RCMP as Berkhard Bateman, 19, of Ontario.

His citizenship, however, has not been established. RCMP say he has resided in Ontario for the past nine years, possibly in Belleville, but is believed to be originally from Hamburg, West Germany.

SEATTLE COURT

Bateman, who identified himself to U.S. authorities as Rory Shayne, appeared in King County Court at Seattle Friday on a charge of kidnapping Roger Smith of Vancouver, one of three hostages held aboard a sailboat in Thursday's chase following the bank robbery.

Bateman is expected to be returned to Victoria next week to be charged with armed robbery. City police Friday signed an information before a justice of the peace, serving notice of the charge.

If the suspect does not resist deportation, and if he is a Canadian citizen, he will be returned here, and the kidnapping charge would be dropped, U.S. Attorney Stan Pitkin said Friday.

"I would expect to stand aside in favor of the Canadian charges, Pitkin said.

"We're encouraging him to face the music in Canada."

California Home Toll Reaches 150

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dry, hot winds fanned fires on tinder-dry brush and forest land today and flames raged out of control on the fringes of this sprawling city, driving hundreds of persons from their homes.

Two major fires broke out to the west and north of the downtown area 25-30 miles away, destroying expensive homes in the Malibu area near the Pacific Ocean and sweeping through mountain passes in the northern and western parts of the populous San Fernando Valley.

One major fire started at a public dump in the Santa Monica mountains along Las Virgenes Road Friday just about the same time another blaze erupted on the northern side of the mountain ridge in the San Fernando Valley.

A third major fire broke in the Simi Valley of Ventura County.

By noon today, the flames charred more than 50,000 acres and destroyed at least 150 homes. See earlier story Page 3.

Arbitration Invoked In Mill Strike

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday invoked compulsory arbitration in the dispute between 55 electricians and the Port Alberni pulp and paper division of MacMillan Bloedel.

Peterson sent telegrams to the union and the company following an emergency cabinet meeting and passage of an order-in-council invoking compulsory sections of the provincial Mediation Commission Act.

The electricians, members of Local 230 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, called their strike and set up picket lines Friday afternoon.

FIRST TIME

It was the first time compulsory arbitration has been invoked on a union following mediation. The union rejected a settlement offer Wednesday.

Earlier this summer, the Teamsters Union agreed to go into mediation and to accept the settlement as binding. Compulsory arbitration was also used in a police dispute last year in Saanich.

It was also the first time the government has invoked compulsion against a union affiliated with the British Columbia Federation of Labor, a bitter foe of compulsory sections of the act.

The union later said it would obey the order even though it did not agree with it. "But we would like to see Mr. Peterson and have him justify the government's decision and listen to our arguments."

TO COMBAT VIET CONG PRESSURE

Saigon Arming Peasants

SAIGON (Reuters) — Arming South Vietnamese peasants to fight the Viet Cong would have been considered madness a few years ago.

But the Saigon government has already handed out 500,000 weapons and plans to distribute another million next year to a vast segment of the population traditionally considered most susceptible to Viet Cong pressure and recruitment.

The arms are going to a loosely controlled 3.5 million-strong army called the People's Self-Defence Forces. A type of militia, its members are pledged to defend their own homes and hamlets.

United States Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker has called the peasant army an increasingly important and psychological force in the search for peace in Vietnam.

"When the people take and bear arms publicly, they openly commit themselves to the government," he said. "It also shows, incidentally, that the government of Vietnam has faith in the people that it is arming."

But what the move really means is that the war here has changed course, with the Viet Cong and Saigon competing for popular support in the countryside rather than trying to win on the battlefield.

Some Americans here are so confident that Saigon is on the right path that they see no reason why U.S. troop withdrawals cannot be speeded up.

Certainly South Vietnam's regular troops appear to be showing a new aggressiveness ever since operations in Cambodia started in March.

This may be responsible for the Viet Cong's apparent switch in recent weeks to selective and small-scale guerrilla attacks instead of the large battles waged a few months ago.

Or it could be — as many observers here believe — that the Viet Cong is so understrength that it has to be more economical with manpower than in the past. Still others suggest the guerrillas are merely giving the Americans the chance to pull out gracefully.

The Americans have seen comparatively little action in the last two months and their casualties are down to new low levels.

The United States now has fewer than 400,000 soldiers in this country, a drop of 143,000 in 18 months.

Ky Speech Off

PARIS (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam has decided not to address a win-the-war rally in Washington in October, it was learned today.

His decision removes a potential point of irritation between Saigon and the Nixon administration. U.S. officials had been lobbying quietly to convince Ky to change his mind.

Hickel Raps Agnew 'Rhetoric'

WASHINGTON (WP) — In what appeared to be a critical slap at Vice-President Spiro Agnew, Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel told college students and administrators Friday night that he rejects the "rhetoric of polarization" just as he rejects rioting and violence.

"As hard as we try, we cannot tear the nation together," Hickel said in a speech Friday night to college and student body presidents from some 325 schools.

I don't ask the youth of America to be quiet," Hickel told the Association of Student Governments conference. "I ask you to be committed — committed in terms of a lifetime."

Life Terms Ordered For Grim Reapers

CALGARY (CP) — An immediate appeal will be launched against the non-capital murder conviction of 13 men charged following the death of a motorcycle gang president, defence lawyers said Friday.

The men, all but two members of the Grim Reapers motorcycle club, were the largest group ever convicted in a single murder case in Canada, a justice department source said.

They were brought to trial in Alberta Supreme Court after Ronald George Hartley, 23, leader of the Outcasts motorcycle club, died March 7.

Evidence during the five-day trial indicated he died after one of the accused hit him on the head with a length of chain during a confrontation between the gangs on a rural road southeast of the city.

The jury was out for almost nine hours before they returned their guilty verdict Friday and Mr. Justice Neil Primrose passed the mandatory life sentences.

JUROR SHAKES HEAD

As he passed sentence one of the 11 jurors shook his head and the judge asked him why he had done so.

"My Lord, I just don't understand this. What was the charge?"

"The charge was murder," the judge replied.

"No, I mean the sentence, Your Lordship."

As the member continued to shake his head the jury was polled and the judge said:

"You were polled . . . guilty as charged. You know the charge, you saw the indictment. Is there some mistake? Mr. Foreman, what do you say?"

The foreman answered:

"The only . . . there is no dissension within the group,

'NO RIGHT TO COMPLAIN'

PM Raps Demonstrators

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday that people who demonstrate in public have no right to complain if their names and pictures appear in newspapers.

The prime minister had been questioned at the annual meeting of l'Association des Hebdos de Canada — the association of French-language weekly newspapers of Canada — about journalists being asked to testify in court.

Reporters' notes on demonstrations and protestors were also being subpoenaed, the publishers said.

Trudeau replied that violent demonstrations "are a social phenomenon which has taken on a strength that it didn't have 20 years ago."

"I don't know why they (demonstrators) would complain if their pictures are taken and if journalists are called into court to present them as evidence."

Obviously they were not hidden during the protest.

The prime minister added that it seems demonstrators "have the right to hit the police, but the police don't have the right to hit them back."

DEMONSTRATED ONCE

Trudeau said he personally demonstrated against conscription during the Second World War "but I knew that if I rioted in the streets I ran the risk of getting a boot on the tail from the police."

Discussing the 1968 St. Jean Baptiste Day parade in Montreal when a violent demonstration was staged in front of the reviewing stand where he was sitting, Trudeau said:

"If you demonstrators have the courage to do that, you should have the courage to take it if the police rough you up a bit."

He said he understands professional secrecy when it concerns protection of the individual but added he "understands it less" when it involves people who break the law during demonstrations.

The Whole Mess Is Your Fault, Dr. Spock!

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Vice-President Spiro Agnew read from the baby care book of Dr. Benajmin Spock Friday night and blamed its advice to parents for helping foster a "pervasive policy of permissiveness."

Agnew told a $150-a-plate fund-raising dinner the book has sold more than 25 million copies. "Don't knock it," he said, and then read:

"You have to compromise. Overlook some of his (the child's) less irritating bad habits, realizing that they are not permanent."

Spock's book, Agnew said, advocates careful avoidance of "bossiness."

"Who do you suppose is to blame when, 10 years later, that child comes home from college and sits down at the table with dirty, bare feet and a disorderly faceful of hair?" Agnew asked.

"As much as sociological soreheads hate to admit it," the vice-president said, the recent "pervasive policy of permissiveness has turned out to be a tragic mistake. The age of indulgence, has eroded personal responsibility and corrupted discipline. It has replaced respect for authority with fear of repression."

Police arrested at least four persons outside the auditorium when a small group left a peaceful protest march and smashed about a dozen windows.

Earlier about 300 young persons passed out bologna sandwiches to passers by with leaflets asking, "Why pay $150 for balogna inside when you can get it free outside?"

Agnew told the audience of about 2,000 persons his recent campaign trips have a double mission: "Specifically, to help elect men to public office who will lean hard against the trend toward permissiveness;" and, in general, to mobilize a silent majority which has been "bulldozed for years" into thinking their values are "embarrassingly out of style."

But, the vice-president said, "the age of indulgences is at long last coming to an end. The time of individual responsibility is at hand."

Searchers Spot Balloon Debris

NEW YORK (AP) — The cutter Dallas searched in the North Atlantic today for debris spotted from the air that may be part of the missing baloon, The Free Life.

The Dallas had steamed all night to the spot 300 to 400 miles south of Newfoundland to investigate the sighting, while another cutter, the Ingham, ran down a false lead in the same general area, the United States Coast Guard said.

The Ingham reported recovering a piece of the top of a styrofoam container, but the flotsam was judged to be part of an ammunition container and not an article from the missing balloon.

The coast guard and the Ingham was released from the search, leaving the Dallas and five planes—three U.S. Air Force, one coast guard and one Canadian forces—still active in the search, the coast guard said.

The balloon, with which the three persons aboard hoped to achieve the first unpowered transatlantic crossing, was orange and yellow. It took off Sunday from eastern Long Island and last reported itself going down in the North Atlantic during a storm Monday night.

The U.S. Attorney said if Bateman chooses to exhaust every avenue of appeal, deportation proceedings could take a long time.

A city police spokesman said what happens next is up to Bateman.

"If he admits to Canadian domicile and citizenship, he could be deported to Canada immediately," an officer said.

"But if he says he is not a Canadian but a German citizen, he could ask to be deported to Germany."

Lawyer James McAteer, who is representing the suspect, said Bateman has not stated his citizenship.

Bateman was identified through fingerprints which were sent to RCMP headquarters in Ottawa.

The prints showed the bank suspect was not William Lawrence Olenik, 26, who escaped from William Head jail earlier this month and who is still at large.

Vancouver insurance salesman Roger Smith, 49, who Bateman is charged with kidnapping, was asked today if his offer of $6,000 for the suspect's defense is still good.

"It's a hypothetical question — I don't know," Smith said.

He said the offer "would have to be worked out."

Lawyer McAteer said he is not at liberty to comment on Smith's offer.

The $7,091 taken in the robbery at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Yates and Government is now in the hands of the U.S. Customs Department.

Einar Hemstad and Douglas Sleivert, the two city policemen who were shot in the bank, were reported in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Canada Base For ABM?

TORONTO (CP)—The Star says Defence Minister Donald Macdonald has suggested that the United States could move its anti-ballistic missile system into Canada's North.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper quotes Macdonald as saying Friday the North American Air Defence agreement should be reviewed with the U.S. because it was designed for protection against Russian-manned bombers which may no longer pose a threat to North Ameria.

But it would be better to have any nuclear missiles aimed at North America intercepted over James Bay than over Toronto or Montreal. A study should be made on whether this might occur if the anti-ballistic missiles were fired from the U.S.

The Star says Macdonald said Canada would accept the U.S. anti-ballistic missile program on Canadian soil only with "deep regret" but that he stressed this was an alternative that would probably have to be considered in his term as defence minister.

Captain and Mates Blamed for Sinking

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — A public inquiry into the sinking of the laker Eastcliffe Hall in the St. Lawrence seaway last July ended Friday with a strong suggestion by a federal transport department lawyer that the tragedy, with its loss of nine lives, could have been averted.

There was no indication when the findings of the inquiry will be released.

Raynald Langlois, counsel for the marine division of the department, said the captain, Richard Groulx, first mate Julien Marchand, and the third mate, Joseph Dupuis, were all to blame.

Early on July 14, the 4,000-ton freighter, carrying pig-iron from Sorel, Que., to Saginaw, Mich., hit a submerged light standard after it had grounded on a sandbar.

The ship went down in minutes, taking with it—among others—Captain Groulx, and his 16-year-old son Alain. Twelve of the 21 aboard were rescued.

IMPAIRMENT INDICATED

At Friday's hearing, Mr. Langlois mentioned previous evidence that the captain's blood alcohol level was .36 per cent, and that the mates should have recognized the captain's incapacity and taken over command of the ship.

Jean-Paul Dufour, who represented the two mates, said they both knew that to forcibly usurp command of a ship would be illegal unless the captain was totally incapacitated or showed signs of insanity.

He noted that even Samuel Young, the wheelsman, who was impartial, testified that the captain acted normally. Mr. Dufour suggested Captain Groulx was one of the 10 per cent of humans who show a great tolerance for alcohol.

Mr. Justice Francois Chevalier, who headed the inquiry, interrupted Mr. Dufour to say he had heard "uncontradicted evidence" that the captain had consumed enough alcohol to make him "extremely intoxicated."

Mr. Dufour said the captain had piloted the ship from 9:45 p.m. until 3 a.m. EDT when it hit a sandbar.

. . . JORDAN

ried out the hijacking of three Western airliners to Jordan earlier this month, said the hostages had been released by the Front and not liberated by Jordanian troops as reported by Radio Amman.

A Swiss embassy official, meanwhile, confirmed that a 16th hostage, Max Jost, had been found by troops in Amman's Wahdat refugee camp Friday. This leaves 38 hostages—all Americans but some of them with dual Israeli nationality—still in guerrilla hands.

Hadaf said:

"The fact that the hostages have remained alive in the sea of death and destruction experienced by our people means that the Popular Front has exerted every effort to protect their lives in the midst of indiscriminate shelling by the royal troops."

The newspaper said that the confirmation by the International Committee of the Red Cross that the hostages were in good health "indicated the kind of treatment given them in the midst of conditions similar to famine."

PATROLS NEARBY

It added that because the food and water allotted to the hostages were needed for Palestinian children, the hostages had been left in a house within range of army patrols.

The newspaper added:

"This does not free Britain, Switzerland for West Germany from their responsibility for releasing the Arab guerrillas detained in these countries and this does not indicate a change in the previous conditions of the Front."

The guerrillas have asked for the freedom of seven Palestinians detained in West Germany, Switzerland and Britain in return for the release of the European hostages.

They also demand the freedom of an unspecified number of guerrillas, 10 Lebanese soldiers, two Algerians and a Swiss commando sympathizer from Israeli detention in exchange for the release of the others.

Hadaf concluded by saying that responsibility for the safety of the remaining hostages rested on King Hussein's troops. It did not say where they were being held.

A Middle East Airline plane carrying the 15 released hostages arrived at the RAF base at Akrotiri, 65 miles southwest of Nicosia, Cyprus.

A spokesman for the British embassy said the 15 persons, including eight Britons, would be transferred to an RAF Britannia leaving for London.

Meanwhile, the guerrillas accused the Jordanian army of murdering Palestinian wounded with machine-guns and axes in an Amman hospital, and a former Jordanian ally, Libya, broke diplomatic relations with the beleaguered monarchy.

The Jordanian army has been standing still around Ramtha and Irbid, 50 miles north of Amman, for the last three days, Hussein said in a radio broadcast. The situation in Amman was calm, he added, "except for scattered incidents where the armed forces were attacked."

ACCUSES GUERRILLAS

He charged that a number of guerrilla groups were opposed to the ceasefire and were trying to sabotage it.

A charge that Jordan had broken the ceasefire agreement was made by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser in a cable sent to Hussein and broadcast over Radio Amman. It was sent in the names of nine Arab countries whose leaders have been holding an emergency summit in Cairo.

News reports from Jordan Friday night said the fighting had ended. The round-the-clock curfew which had been in effect in Amman for more than a week was lifted for five hours daily, Radio Amman said.

However, the Al Fatah information office in Beirut, Lebanon, said violent fighting broke out at dawn outside Amman today. A spokesman reported an attack by royal troops on guerrilla positions at Zarqa.

He said the fighting was for control of a bridge on the road from Amman to Zarqa, 15 miles northeast of the capital.

The royal troops retreated after having suffered heavy losses, he said. But Amman radio reported earlier that the curfew in Zarqa would be lifted today, implying that the area was in Jordanian army hands.

Sudanese President Jaafar Al-Nimeiry publicly accused Hussein of personal responsibility for civil strife and bloodshed in his ravaged kingdom.

Nimeiry, head of the Arab leaders' peace mission which arranged a ceasefire in Amman early Friday, returned to Cairo with allegations that Hussein had quickly violated the truce. He made the charge at a news conference in the headquarters of Egypt's government party.

Nimeiry said that on the basis of what his delegation observed, "We are convinced there is a plot by the Jordanian authorities to liquidate the Palestinian Liberation Movement."

"We did not anticipate however, that a ruling as severe as life imprisoment for all concerned would be the ultimate ruling."

EXPLAINS LAW

Mr. Justice Primrose explained that under the Criminal Code he was bound to impose the mandatory life sentences and as he was dismissing the jury A. M. Harradence, one of six defence lawyers, interjected:

"Under those circumstances, sir, I wonder if the verdict does represent the feeling of the entire jury."

The justice replied the jury had given a unanimous verdict and adjourned the court.

- That government forces prevailed "without our having to really consider seriously intervention or other steps" was seen by Packard as supporting a key provision of the Nixon doctrine: the substituting of military equipment aid to friendly nations for direct involvement by American troops.

At the same time, Packard said, the Pentagon was "greatly troubled" by the trend of the Soviet naval buildup in the Mediterranean.

If Russia's naval construction program continues as it has, Packard said the U.S. navy "four to five years from now would find it difficult to put a carrier into the Mediterranean" and protect it. Though the U.S. sixth fleet still has the upper hand, Packard said Soviet ships were already inhibiting U.S. polity and that for the first time "we had to look carefully at what we would do if the situation got out of hand.

Eat! Eat! Eat! 12 lbs. Of Fat Off In 1 Week

TORONTO—At last, a really new breakthrough in the battle of the bulge. Throw away calorie charts, carbohydrate counters, grapefruit juice, white wine, drinkers diets and other reducing fads. If you want to experience the exciting prospect of immediately losing weight effortlessly and with pure pleasure, heed the advice of a former fatty who has tried them all. After years of failing to permanently lose weight he evolved an extremely simple method of selecting foods regardless of how much you eat. Called "The Remarkable Ratio Diet"—A Super Speed Slimming and Rejuvenating System of Food Selection—it can be learned by anyone in a minute or two. In fact, the whole secret is confined to three or four pages contained in a trim pocket size booklet. Fed up to the teeth after wading through volume upon volume of heavy tomes devoted to the mysteries of nutrition and weight control, the author picked the collective brains of former heavyweights and finally hit on a method which has probably been under the noses of the experts all along. Hacking away at all the doubletalk and gobbledegook shrouding the simple facts of why most people find it difficult to lose weight, he reduced the complex columns of vitamins, calories, fats, proteins and carbohydrates down to a single factor number for each food. All you do is make your selection from those everyday foods which have a factor below the magic number of 10 and you lose weight extremely fast. So fast that you can practically see the dial of the scale move! Two to three pounds a day from the start! With this system of food selection (hardly fair to call it a diet) the results are even more remarkable when you consider no attempt is made to limit the quantity of food eaten. Now anyone who wants to get rid of excess fat permanently should forget about previous failures and write off for their copy of "The Remarkable Ratio Diet". It costs $2 from Datonic Press, Dept. 173 257 Adelaide St. West, Toronto 2b, Ont. (Send remittance with order). All you stand to lose is your blubber. In the unlikely event you don't shed 10 to 12 pounds in the first week, you get your money back. The author says he will personally guarantee the refund if the system doesn't work for you as it did for him. (He dropped a swift 40 pounds).

REST HOME DICTATORSHIP

The B.C.R.H.A. is requesting $185.00 per month for the care of elderly or indigent citizens in lieu of the Government's specified $135.00. Our increase for this care has been 2½% per year since 1965. Welfare guests contribute $111.41 of the $135.00 paid.

Through refusal of Rest Homes to accept them, there are at present, many people under the jurisdiction of the Welfare Department who are occupying beds in the general hospitals in this area at a cost of $51.00 per day. These could be placed in Rest Homes at 6.25 per day of taxpayers' money. The Department of Welfare does not own Rest Homes. They are purchased by private individuals and operated by them under Government Regulations.

One-third of Rest Home guests are to be Welfare placements at the Government rate of $135.00 per month. Where can you get room, board and care anywhere in Canada for $4.50 per day? The Y.W.C.A. rate is $4.50 per day for bed only. We have no complaint with regard to the one-third, but we do not agree with the $135.00 per month. NO other private business is subject to such dictatorial regulations.

We have tried to negotiate a fair rate since April. However, typical of our Government, legislation at lower dollar value was implemented without regard for negotiations.

Very shortly, because of dictatorship, there will be no more licensed Rest Homes able to operate and take care of senior citizens in this area. FUTURE LICENSES?

FIREMEN FIGHT 'DEVIL WINDS'

Flames Lick at California Homes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fires blazed through tinder-dry brush in Southern California today, leaving tens of thousands of acres charred and expensive homes in ashes.

Firemen faced more of the fire-fanning "devil winds," hot and dry seaward blasts from the desert which whipped the dozens of fires into fast-moving infernoes after they started Friday.

More than 57,000 acres were blackened, an estimated 140 homes destroyed and as many as 400 homes damaged.

There were numerous reports of burns and other injuries to firemen and residents but no deaths.

Actor Dale Robertson's home was destroyed, fire officials said, and blazes damaged Gov. Ronald Reagan's ranch and the Spahn movie ranch, one-time residence of Charles Manson, who is on trial with three of his hippie-style clan members in the slaying of actress Sharon Tate and six others.

Firemen said the flames damaged several of the abandoned movie-set buildings, where some of Manson's "family" members still live.

HIT MALIBU CANYON

The two most destructive blazes crackled in Malibu Canyon, a fashionable scenic area on the Pacific coast about 30 miles northwest of Los Angeles, and in western San Fernando Valley, a largely-residential area about 25 miles northwest.

It was the worst series of fires in California, officials said, since Nov. 6, 1961, when 484 houses in the exclusive Bel Air and Brentwood sections of Los Angeles were destroyed.

The cause of the blazes was unknown, fire officials said.

Firefighters battled through the night, aided by a drop in the temperature, which reached near 100 degrees Friday afternoon, and a lessening of the winds, which reached 82 miles an hour in gusts Friday.

Thousands of residents who fled the flames in the two areas and in scores of other fire-ravaged regions throughout Southern California spent the night in evacuation centres set up by the Red Cross and other groups.

Numbers Drop in Armed Forces

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian armed forces are well into their descent toward the reduced manpower levels set by the government last year.

Figures released Friday by the defence department show that the strength of the regular services at July 31 was 91,721 compared with 97,044 on Sept. 30, 1969.

The drop of 5,323 in 10 months represented a fast start on the department's goal of cutting the number of servicemen to 82,000 in three years, announced Sept. 19, 1969, by former defence minister Leo Cadieux.

The new defence minister, Donald Macdonald, takes over a department with the smallest active service roll since 1951. At that point—early in the Korean War buildup—total strength of the regulars was 68,427.

The following year it had jumped to 95,394.

PEAK IN 1962

A post-war peak of 126,474 was reached in 1962—a year after the Berlin crisis—and since then there has been a steady decline.

When integration of the armed forces began in August, 1964, service strength was 119,098.

Canada hit its all-time peak in military strength in 1944 when active servicemen numbered some 788,000.

The post-war trough was in 1948: 34,000 men.

In the First World War, the number of enlisted men reached 331,000. The low point between the wars was 3,959 in 1923.

Canada's defence budget has been frozen by the government at $1,800,000 for a total of four years ending with the 1972-73 fiscal year.

LOW IN 1947-48

The post-war low in expenditures was $196,000,000 in 1947-48, the post-war high $1,882,418,467 in 1952-53.

The all-time peak in expenditures was $2,938,377,688 in fiscal year 1944-45.

Compare this with the halcyon year 1924-25 when the defence budget was $13,320,037, lowest in the post-First World War period.

Not just the regular forces are being hit by current defence cuts. The reserves, which also had been declining steadily for a number of years, are in process of being cut to 19,000 from 23,000 last year.

Defence Reputation Extinct—Publisher

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's previously proud reputation in the fields of defence and foreign policy is almost extinct, members of the Canadian Infantry Association were told Friday night.

"Indeed it is rather ridiculed in many quarters," said R. S. Malone, publisher and editor-in-chief of the Winnipeg Free Press.

"Seemingly we are trying to isolate ourselves now from the world and walk out on our NATO allies at a critical time."

Malone said Canadians surely must ask themselves why the Soviet Union is building up a great new military strength so quickly, and about its naval expansion in the Mediterranean, the Middle East and its divisions facing NATO.

Asking whether we are indeed back in the appeasement days of Chamberlain and Munich, the wartime Canadian army brigadier added:

"In my view, this is precisely what we may face if NATO is weakened in the next five years and collective security is abandoned.

"The American and British withdrawals from Asia and Africa will be painful and humilitating but they will not be fatal.

"But if NATO, the core of Western defences, collapses or is lacking in strength and purpose, we may well sacrifice world peace and see another generation committed to the tragedy of an even greater war or enslavement."

French Star Bourvil Dies

PARIS (Reuters) — Bourvil, the French film star, has died in a Paris clinic of an undisclosed illness. He was 53.

For nearly 30 years he delighted French and international movie audiences with his portrayals of the bewildered peasant who somehow usually manages to win through by a combination of simplicity and earthy cunning.

His real name was Andre Raimbourg and he took his film name from the Normandy village of Bourville where he once was a farmer.

He started his theatrical career in 1938 as a radio singer and musical comedy actor.

The Interim Phase

DISCLOSURE THAT B.C. HYdro plans to have ten power substations in the Greater Victoria area, doubling the present number, within the next ten years is clear evidence that there must be a showdown very soon on the issue of human versus technological needs.

The main concern is not that substations cannot be made more or less attractive, or screened from view, so much as Hydro's insistence that they be connected by overhead transmission lines strung on high towers. This unsightly industrial encroachment on existing residential areas and on future sites for homes is a form of visual pollution which is becoming increasingly unacceptable to a public awakening to rebellion against the traditional technical approach.

Hydro's management more and more finds itself in conflict with what the people want, yet because of the wide powers conferred on it as a government-owned utility it can impose its will on municipalities and the general public. The real crunch of the situation lies in Hydro's insistence on practices which are being superseded and improved on in many other places.

The power authority follows the orthodox, and logical, process of determining the ostensibly cheapest means of transporting power from one site to another. But it fails to include in its costs the losses which the transmission line will impose on the land, on possible alternative uses, on the people's enjoyment of their environment. These hidden losses can be very large although they may never show on cost sheets. The cost of avoiding them by utilizing a different route or method of transmission may be much less than the eventual depreciation inflicted on the area.

We have seen Hydro's reasoning employed in the recent Interurban Road controversy, as well as in the dispute over the Quadra-Beckwith site for a substation. A still larger confrontation has arisen on the mainland, where Hydro plans a transmission line along the north side of the Fraser Valley to the consternation of residents and their regional and municipal representatives. The 600-foot swath would run from Ruby Creek to Pitt River and cover 3,500 acres. An alternative proposal was to run the line through provincial parkland and the experimental forest of the University of B.C. north of Haney. Public spokesman want the line taken through wilderness territory, but Hydro objects on the grounds of cost.

Giant smokestacks belching smoke and fumes were, a comparatively short time ago, regarded as the inescapable accompaniments of industrial progress. Now the public sees them as wasteful destroyers of a healthful environment and takes steps to eliminate their objectionable features. Soon the transmission lines for electrical power, both the main cross-country lines and the local distribution facilitities, will also come under public control in response to an enlightened approach to our use of the earth's surface. The physical utilities designed to serve man will not be permitted to dominate and displace him. This will not be a rejection of engineering science, merely the adoption of a better, advanced form.

Who Is Responsible for Logs?

THE STATEMENT BY REsources Minister Ray Williston that the government is considering plans for log removal from drift-laden beaches is promising. But until something better is done than has been accomplished by other public agencies in the past, it can remain only promising, nothing more. It will be a significant advance, however, if possible legislation at the next session fixes a degree of responsibility for the ownership of logs — and makes the responsibility stick even when owners cease to want the logs.

Certain protection is given to those to whom the timber belongs when it breaks away from booms. An identifiable log cannot be taken without authority by anyone who wants it. By the time it has lost value, either through age, rock and sand encrustation, or by lodging itself through high tide and storm in an inaccessible place, there appears to be no means by which the owner can be forced to remove it.

A survey of log-choked beaches on the south end of Vancouver Island as in other parts of the coast close to dense population — reveals that the majority of them have been felled commercially. The implication is that they rest unwanted following escape from booms. There are, occasionally, trees uprooted by flood or erosion, with roots attached, in the piles found on beaches, but these are few and far between.

If logs are a nuisance, a hazard to boats, or an impediment to public enjoyment of beaches following escape from their owners, why should the public be required to pay for their removal? Legislation should determine to what degree responsibilty can be wedded to ownership. There seems to be no legitimate argument to support the case that escaped logs are private property as long as the private interests want them, but can be disowned so easily when they do not.

Sergeant Pepper Gets Busted

UNITED STATES ELECTIONeering is often mystifying to Canadians used to a lower key of rhetoric and less hysterical pronouncements by candidates for office. But when Vice President Spiro Agnew flies out in all directions supporting Republican candidates in the forthcoming United States Congressional elections, feathers are bound to get ruffled.

And so it was in that bastion of the gambling majority, Las Vegas, when Mr. Agnew singled out some rock groups which he charged with singing "blatant drug-culture propaganda." What the top 40 has to do with United States elections was never made clear by Mr. Agnew. One of the tunes to which the vice-president took exception first appeared three years ago in the Beatles' Sergeant Pepper album. It, and other Beatle albums, had such a salutary effect on the then back-sliding British balance of payments that a grateful government awarded the group Orders of the British Empire. Since each of the Beatles is said to be earning about $8 millions in residuals annually, the British government must still be doing very well by the Liverpool lads.

Attempts by Mr. Agnew to discredit the group might lessen United States sales of Beatle gear and the British government frowns on chaps who impede the flow of United States dollars into the hard-pressed British treasury. Thus, Mr. Agnew's statements are fraught with danger for Anglo-American relations. And the spectre of the vice-president of the United States jousting with Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band adds a new dimension to Don Quixote's battles against the windmills of Molina.

Letters

Contrast

The young people from the University of Victoria who were active in the Shinerama deserve commendation for their efforts on behalf of the victims of cystic-fibrosis. Their public demeanor and positive awareness are in clear contrast to the extreme vulgarity and negativism of the campus paper "The Martlet." While making vague pretensions to intellectual and enlightened journalism the September 1 issue of this paper is riddled with coarseness and obscenity and dedicated to the cause of mediocrity.

The hundreds of fine and decent scholars who walk in the Miles for Millions and participate in the annual Shinerama have their causes and their persons discredited by a university paper masquerading as the voice of Uvic.—R. Groves, 1730 Richardson.

Diluting the Savings on Prescription Drugs

Greer

PARCOST, the Ontario government's answer to the high price of prescription drugs, sounds great. But will it really lower the cost of prescriptions? Health Minister Thomas Wells predicted the scheme will effect consumer savings of 10 to 15 per cent in the cost of drugs. This would be a modest enough achievement, considering the markups and profit margins now obtained. But even if PARCOST is modestly successful, it will succeed in spite of itself: Mr. Wells has taken a basically good idea and almost ruined it with concessions to the druggists and the doctors, not to mention an unhealthy dose of good old-fashioned Tory propaganda.

The good idea in PARCOST is the "Comparative Drug Index", a compilation by a blue-ribbon committee of experts headed by Dr. W. T. Clark of the University of Toronto's division of therapeutics which lists drug products of comparable quality according to price, so that doctors and dentists will be able to tell at a glance when writing their prescriptions which is the cheapest product.

Sorely Needed

Nothing like this now exists in the professions and it is sorely needed, because the basic argument of the higher-priced drug manufacturers is that their products are better and safer and there has been nobody to say them nay. The fact that no drug can be sold to the public without the approval of the federal government's Food and Drug Directorate has been only so-so protection: the Directorate satisfies itself as to purity of ingredients and so on by analyzing samples submitted by manufacturers seeking approval, but it does very little on-going rechecking after approval and its approval implies no statement that the product is therapeutically effective for the purpose prescribed. Now doctors have the assurance of Dr. Clark's quality control committee that if a product is in the Comparative Drug Index, it meets this requirement. Indeed, some 60 products, some of them well-known, have failed to do so.

Avoids Listing Quality

Even so, the Index carefully avoids stating that the products listed under any particular generic group are of equal quality. The claim made is that they are all of high quality, of "comparable" quality, and they will do the job intended. The layman may conclude this means one is as good as another and there is no reason why the doctor shouldn't prescribe the cheapest — indeed, it is difficult to see what else it could mean. But the Index does not spell it out, which leaves ample room for the high-price drug companies to continue to propagandize the doctors through their promotional literature and "detail men" with claims that their penicillin, for example, is better, and therefore the higher price is justified. Which probably explains why the Index requires "knowledgeable interpretation" and will not be available to the public.

Nor is there any assurance that doctors will consult the Index. It is too big — running to some 150 letter-size pages when completed — to be carried about and is intended as an office item. Mr. Wells said that patients are becoming more sophisticated and they can ask the doctor to consult it before he makes out the prescription: it is hardly a thought which fits with the common conception of medical practice. The government could have assured the use of the Index by enlisting members of the profession as "participating physicians", as it has done with the pharmacists, but that would have smacked of government regulation and interference with the right of the physician to prescribe as he pleases.

A "participating pharmacy" is one that agrees — by contract with the Ontario Pharmacists' Association, not with the government — to fill prescriptions at the prices listed in the Index, plus a maximum $2.00 dispensing fee. In return, it gets a Decal window insignia identifying it as a PARCOST ("prescriptions at reasonable cost") pharmacy, plus the value of a government advertising program.

Cheaper Prescriptions?

The hitch here, in respect of cheaper prescriptions, is that $2.00 is 15 cents more than the current average cost of dispensing a prescription, which statistics gathered by the Pharmacists Association itself show to be $1.85. Mr. Wells' contention, supported by spokesmen for the Association, is that this is neither here nor there in view of the savings which become possible when physicians start prescribing the cheaper-priced drugs. But this is true of only the expensive prescriptions, which form only a small percentage of sales; the average price of a prescription, according to the Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal, appears to be less than $4.00 and in this range there is not much difference in product cost. So for the great majority of prescriptions they fill, pharmacists will be making more money and consumers will be paying more.

Indeed, the arrival at a $2.00 professional dispensing fee represents a great victory for the Pharmacists' Association, which has been trying for years to get druggists to realize that, according to some rather curious accounting arguments, they are losing money on the lower-cost drugs by using a mark-up system rather than a flat professional fee of $2.00.

Seems Strange

Under the circumstances, it may seem strange that only about half of the province's pharmacies have signed up so far as participants in PARCOST. The reason is two-fold: the discount drug stores are still not sure they can't sell cheaper than PARCOST prices, and many druggists have been incensed by the government's proposed advertising program, which leaves the impression, not incorrectly perhaps but rather stupidly, that druggists are the cause of high drug prices. The advertising is being hurriedly rewritten.

The greatest short-fall in PARCOST, however, is that the Pharmacy Act is not being changed (as has geen done in Alberta) to permit pharmacists to substitute one product for another unless the doctor prescribes no substitution. This would allow the druggist to select a lower-priced product from the Index if the doctor has not prescribed generically or has not consulted the Index.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Nixon Visit to Tito to Nudge the Kremlin

Frye

PRESIDENT Nixon sets out tomorrow on a quick, multi-purpose trip to Europe, expecting that sometime within the following 30 days, he will sit down at the summit with Premier Alexei Kosygin of the Soviet Union. The two events are, of course, inter-related. Summitry with the allies has frequently preceded summitry with the adversary, and has contributed meaningfully to preparations for it.

Moreover, Nixon's trip includes a stop in Yugoslavia to see Marshal Josip Broz Tito, the maverick Communist who has been in and out of Moscow's good graces for the past 25 years. This, too, is — in its way — a preparation for Soviet-American summitry.

It contributes to American bargaining power at the summit. Like Nixon's visit to Romania in August, 1969, it reminds the Kremlin that American influence can still be projected behind the Iron Curtain if Soviet influence is unhelpfully projected outside it.

The Romanian visit last year elicited sharp grumbling from the Kremlin, and was followed by a period in which the Russians appeared to co-operate in several important fields, notably the limitation of nuclear-weapon delivery systems (the SALT talks) and the Middle East.

Soviet Influence

In recent weeks, however, Soviet influence in the Mideast has been distinctly less than helpful.

The full story of Egypt's missile deployment has yet to surface; but at the very least the Kremlin exercised no effective restraint on Egypt. The presumption must be, and is, that Moscow either acquiesced or connived in Cairo's violation of the standstill cease-fire.

Again, in the Jordanian upheaval, the Soviet Union has done less to help than the West believes it could have done. No one knows just how much real influence Moscow possesses in Syria. But what influence there is has at best been exerted only belatedly in the direction of restraint.

It is, therefore, highly important that President Nixon should be giving the Russians occasion to pause and reconsider. An era of East-West detente cannot be based on one-sided co-operation, nor on fitful contributions to a more peaceful world which subsequently are negated by self-serving manoeuvres.

What the West wants of Moscow in the Middle East is a consistent policy aimed at co-existence of Soviet and Western influence in conditions of stability and peace. To that end, it would be in the interest of both great powers that the Palestinian guerrillas should be brought under control.

For a time, the Russians seemed to recognize this fact. But their policies and actions did not spring consistently from that premise.

The truth is that, with the Arab world profoundly and virulently divided, the Kremlin sought to work both sides of the street, cultivating alike the extremists and the moderates, the pro-Palestinians and the pro-Husseinists, the pro-Chinese and the pro-Westerners. This is quite a trick, and the effort has contributed to the general confusion.

There is no opportunity (or inclination) for the West to reply in kind in Europe. But the West is not without leverage.

The Russians have shown themselves highly sensitive to American bridge-building in Eastern Europe. The Kremlin still feels insecure there, and jealous of its control.

Yugoslavia has been a leading exponent of resistence to Soviet control. For Nixon to visit Yugoslavia will be for him to embrace and strengthen the spirit of independence.

It will be to imply a friendly Western haven for any new mavericks who succeed in breaking away. To a limited extent, it will encourage such breakaway efforts.

This runs directly counter to the tendency of the West German ostpolitik, which implies acceptance of a Soviet sphere of influence in Eastern Europe. It is a warning that the ostpolitik is not a free gift which Moscow can accept without full reciprocation.

In the semaphore by which diplomacy often is conducted, Nixon is signalling that if Moscow wishes co-existence, it can have it both in the Soviet sphere and outside that area. If, however, Moscow wants a contest for influence, that contest will be waged in both arenas.

Policy Testing Grounds

Nor is the Middle East the only testing ground of Soviet policy. Berlin will soon be on the front burner. Vietnam is highly relevant. The SALT talks resume in November.

In the last analysis, what the Soviet Union really wants is a quiet European front so that it can devote its full attention to the quarrel with China. Throughout modern history, Russians have sought to avoid a two-front war.

A quiet European front is a commodity of such value to Moscow that the West can reasonably expect a price to be paid. If it is not paid, Washington can do more than merely imply overtures to Eastern Europe. It can do the one thing the Russians fear most: it can seek a rapproachement with Russia's great enemy, China.

That would presuppose receptivity in Peking. But of late, there have been hints that receptivity may not forever be withheld.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

The old leaves of the cottonwood close to the road where the Fish and Game Club quarters stand by the Goldstream salt marshes, have turned to silver underneath. Already, sharply-pointed new buds have formed on the twigs and, pinched between thumb and finger, release a pleasant fragrance.

Nearby the rose bushes are covered with their yellow-red hips — a plentiful supply for those who wish to collect them for rose hip jelly or tea. The hips are full of vitamin C and can be carefully picked to avoid hurting the plant.

As a visitor wanders off the road to the open flats, he may see the seedpods of the pigweed, formed in clusters like nutlets with tiny spikes. In the area, a keen eye can locate orb-like spiders, which seem to change color to fit into their surroundings, where they build webs strong enough to hold a grasshopper.

Crickets will scatter from the path of the visitor, along with grasshoppers which also blend their coloring into the shades of the immediate environment.

An abundance of glasswort grows here — a plant which though inclined to saltiness can make a tasty addition to a salad. Frequently attached to the glasswort will be found the clasping yellow rumners of the doddar, a parasite on the larger growth.

Among the tangle of growth there can be found the leaves of the marsh plantain, now devoid of the tall seed spike, and usuable, also, as an ingredient in salads.

Small, dark mud crabs can frequently be found in the brackish tidal pools and, occasionally where there are rocks, a native oyster that survives in the partially fresh water.

Also in the area are the bodies of a little blue jellyfish brought in on the tide and left to perish, without food, on the ebb.

Bird-watchers may sometimes enjoy a fine view of a pair of bald eagles soaring over the top of Mt. Finlayson from their nest up the inlet by McKenzie Bay, and frequently see and hear ravens protesting the invasion of their territory.

In the rose bush thickets, Savannah sparrows flit, and beside the stream the dipper can frequently be seen.

A visitor, looking up the steep hillsides can note the form in which the ice of long ago scored the rocks differently on either side of the inlet.

Let's Demand Equal Time For Reality

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

The measure of the American ruling elite's worry over the growing contempt for things once held sacred isn't Spiro Agnew, who's only good for speaking to the saved. Where you can really see how jittery the boys are getting is TV. A number of the new fall shows represent a major propaganda effort to get the kiddies back to believing discredited truths.

First off NBC is giving us "The Senators" as part of the infinitely revolving "Bold Ones" trilogy. The object is to make you believe that real senators are like the nice Kennedyesque Hal Holbrook, the actor who plays the clean-cut, slightly literate chap who walks around with an expression on his face which is meant to convey he's absorbed with thoughts about Abraham Lincoln and his immortal soul.

Real Senators

What kind of program will NBC put on when one of its transmission towers is blown up by a kid who went through junior high believing that's what real senators are like until he meets up with a Russell Long or a George Murphy or a Robert Dole?

More mendacious because it's more convincing to people who don't know the score is CBS' "The Storefront Lawyers," a legal mod squad which works for a fat-cat law firm with such a bleeding heart that they rent a storefront office in a poor district where the three young and glamorous vindicators of justice dispense free legal services to the poor.

The point here for the tender and gullible is that our social mechanisms will work and that, "the only thing confrontation ever led to was polarization," as one of the lawyers remarks in the show's opening scene.

In fact it's only on television that rich law firms give anything away, and even there CBS' storefront office is located in the only slum in America where three mod, mod barristers can park their new, red, imported convertible car. See how easy it is to make the system work, if you'll only believe in it? We even supply the parking.

'Deserving Poor'

In the first instalment an old man shoots a millionaire because he says the millionaire stole his house. He is depicted as a member of the deserving poor, having been a hard working, devoted husband all his life whose only mistake was to sign up for a roofing job with a crooked company which sells his note to another crooked company, which passes it on to still another.

All these small, crooked companies owned by the murdered man and his brother-in-law, who is put on the stand and told by one of our mod-ish crusaders, "You are on trial here . . . you are publicly exposed as a liar, a thief and a cheat." So CBS is suggesting that all young'uns with righteous urges be good and get law degrees where they can use the courts to vindicate the weak and exploited.

Took Safest Way

Since the show is shot with the techniques of cinematographic realism, it looks very convincing. How is the viewer to know that no judge in America would let such things happen in his courtroom? The system that CBS is inviting its viewers to support and enlist in doesn't exist. The legal system is designed to prevent what CBS presented from happening.

This is the classic recurring difficulty that lawyers who defend the poor come against; nine times out of ten the underlying questions of social and economic justice are inadmissable.

When CBS decided to use a housing issue for the plot of its first instalment there were a number of ways open to do it. It took the safest and most reactionary one by concentrating on a repair fraud case. Instead, the network might have chosen a black client who lost his house through a sales contract. This is the more frequent and serious problem for poor people, especially blacks.

'NANCY' AND BEAU
. . . cudly in the White House

People who can't get up the money for a down payment buy houses under the sales contract arrangement, which permits an owner to evict a buyer if he misses one payment. It doesn't matter that the buyer may have met every instalment for 12 years, if he misses once, he's out without a cent of equity money.

The real storefront lawyers with real parking problems are trying to fight this in the courts, and if they ultimately win, they will have accomplished a serious measure of social change.

That's not what CBS wants. Which is okay, too. Why should CBS with its money want any kind of social change?

NBC's "Nancy" is less insidious. The 1954-type situation comedy is built on a princess and pauper theme; the daughter of the president of the United States and a veterinarian. At first this suprising choice of profession for the hero is mystifying, but then it becomes clear. The intention is to associate the White House with everything that's warm and cuddly. Instead of aircraft carriers, high taxes, Black Panthers, when we think of the White House we're to imagine baby lambs, puppies, and tiny, weeny little kitty cats.

The real unmarried White House daughter vanishes and is replaced by a sweet, two-legged Bambi who plants sapling trees and loves her real and stuffed animals as well as all the glutzes at the country club.

All Disappears

The real everything disappears in this program, the real city, the real suburbs and we're given WASP small-town America circa 1938, with our hero saying, "My family founded this town," and Bambi replies, "It must be wonderful to have roots like this I've never really had a home. My father (that's the president) was in the diplomatic service."

If the networks are going to propagandize this way, there ought to be equal time for reality. In Bambi's case, the results aren't likely to be serious. Anybody who accepts that view of the White House will coast through life undisturbed by truth in any form, but this isn't so for the first two programs.

Here the documentary form, the techniques of realism, invite you to believe that what you are seeing is a fair representation of reality, when it's a hoax.

It will work on some people who'll accept it because they're politically motivated to accept it; it may work for a while on junior high schoolers, but then they'll hit the age when they lose interest in TV watching and begin to get their information through alternate media.

We've seen enough of that in the last decade with pot, politics and race so that we — the networks, too — should be forewarned as to the unpredictable, and possibly explosive disillusionment which comes when young people realize they've been deceived.

THE GOOD LIFE JUST FOR SOME

The UBYSSEY
The Editorial

How can you lose several hundred high school graduates? Somehow the B.C. educational system managed to do it.

The increase in registration at UBC this year is the huge quantity of 80 students. The adminstration says it is deliberately keeping registration from climbing at UBC in order to relieve the already overcrowded conditions.

That's all very nice for those of us who are already here, but what happens to everyone else?

Despite what anyone says, they can't go to SFU and the University of Victoria, which will now face even worse overcrowding and will probably limit enrolment the same way UBC has done.

The regional colleges, most of which are still operating out of high school basements and under high school conditions of education, are not to be taken seriously as an alternative to university.

What it all boils down to is large numbers of qualified students being denied access to higher education, such as it is.

In all probability, those short-changed will be those from lower-income families, the same people who already have limited access to university.

Surveys last year showed that UBC was an overwhelmingly middle-class institution. The majority of the taxpayers who support it know their children will never get here.

Not a pleasant situation in a province that supposedly offers the good life for all, and now the university has decided to make things worse.

THIS IS SOUTHEAST ASIA—7

Magic Beating Out Marx

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

The Chinese Communists have repeatedly admitted that the supernatural has been among their most stubborn ideological foes. Most people in the East are poor and ignorant, and therefore cling to the habits and superstitions of their venerated ancestors.

In Laos 17 out of 20 cannot write. In Filipino villages only five men in every thousand buy a newspaper.

Dress may deceive in such matters. A smartly turned-out Lao, sipping his Scotch in the bar of the Georges Cinq in Paris, may be observed with some surprise to be wearing several frayed and rather soiled threads of cotton around his wrist in place of the platinum watch one might expect. They keep his 32 souls inside his body and out of mischief.

Last of a Series

It was not until 1960 that the first Dyak from the longhouses of Sarawak began to study modern medicine. He had been introduced to this strange science when a visiting English missionary had given him a dose of castor oil seven years before. His regular family doctor had been a bomoh, whose stock remedy was to paint his face and chant ferocious incantations.

The Malay bomoh is a versatile fellow who, like Lloyds of London, will insure you against anything. In Malaysia the general practitioner will undertake to locate missing corpses, drive off ghosts, heal the sick, supply love potions, put spells on a customer's enemy, and much else besides. To him the supernatural and natural are all one, and he shows it in his contempt for both, to which headlines in the English language Press bear witness — "School Ghosts Told: Keep Off Students," one before me reads, and another: "Spirit in Tree Served Quit Notice."

Bomohs have been involved in crimes from confidence tricks to robbing the Treasury, but their real speciality is rape. In 1969 the Malaysian Education Minister specifically advocated sex lessons in school to protect pupils because "we have all heard of those bomohs and religious teachers who have been brought to court for molesting girls."

Our Malaysian medium took away and violated a 15-year-old after telling her mother that he was going to perform a ritual which would remove eight lethal needles hidden in her body, and an 18-year-old wife was ravished on a beach by a bomoh who assured her that this treatment would "cure her husband's stomach-ache."

Another told his victim that he had to see a mole under her left breast in order to forecast her future, and a third raped three 15-year-old schoolgirls who were under the impression he was making sure they passed their examinations.

Not all bomohs are bad, however. The magical healers of Indonesia and Malaysia are often careful herbalists who will charge no fee for their services — they were, incidentally, the first to use quinine as a cure for malaria.

Today bomohs in the backwoods of Central Malaya are being given a smattering of Western medicine and a compendium of pills to increase their powers. Many of them are turning towards antibiotics rather than arrowroot plucked by the light of a gibbous moon.

Still, in 1968, an opposition MP tabled a written question in the Malaysian Parliament asking the government if it would appoint a national bomoh, and also seek the services of other reliable witch doctors to stop the annual floods in the peninsula. There was nothing odd about his suggestion.

When the King of Malaysia (they are elected every five years) paid a State visit to Sabah a 70-year-old bomoh was flown over from Kuala Lumpur to keep the sun shining, for it had been raining steadily for about a month in North Borneo. His timing was perfect. Everywhere His Majesty went, the weather smiled upon him, but within 48 hours of his departure storms were lashing the streets of the state capital.

Among educated Malaysians to whom Oxford, Cambridge, or the Middle Temple are intellectual homes, and whose tastes run to Jaguar cars, the stock market and golf, far more than would care to admit call in the family witch doctor to cure suffering — or sometimes to inflict it on others.

Politicians hire bomohs as they hire bodyguards — to protect them against the bomohs of their opponents. An attempt to liquidate President Suharto of Indonesia in mid-1968 was ascribed to a witch in the pay of the equivocal ex-Foreign Minister, Dr. Subandrio. Sihanouk consults soothsayers, and so did Sukarno.

▣

Numerology and astrology wield an incalculable influence over public events throughout South-East Asia, where even house numbers may be chosen for luck rather than location, and do not always follow each other consecutively. When Sukarno set 270 experts the task of drawing up a National Overall Development Plan he was not so much concerned with the content of its 5,000 pages as with its form: it has to be divided into 17 volumes, eight parts, and 1,945 clauses, because Indonesia had declared independence from the Dutch on August 17th, 1945.

It is now possible to graduate in astrology in Thailand after a four-year course, and it is certainly desirable that this occupation, which regulates the very tempo of life, should be confided to the hands of properly qualified experts and not left, like politics and government, to a haphazard collection of amateurs.

Many believe that Mrs. Bandaranaike lost the general elections in Ceylon in 1965 because her astrologers goofed over the choice of polling day. In 1968 the King of Laos was advised to open the country's new radio station — a gift of the British under the Colombo Plan — on the first of August. At the last moment it was discovered that astrologers had been using the wrong calendar, and the inauguration had to be switched to the following day.

Does Prince Boun Oum promise democracy as the antidote for Communism? No one cares. For a Lao villager who knows that there are sixteen hours in the day and the world is flat the most powerful antidote for Communism is not democracy but Boun Oum's magical amulet, which enables the prince to become invisible at will in spite of his aristocratic corpulence.

The ease with which magic can beat Marx in the myth-laden lands of South-East Asia must never be underestimated.

Collision Looming Over Trade

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — Buried in the back of the Economic Council of Canada's annual review, published this week, is a brief chapter with an explosive political message.

At a time of rising Canadian nationalism, the Council surveys the changing patterns of world trade in the Seventies and leaves the reader to conclude that in grim fact we are likely to be driven into closer ties with the United States.

★ ★ ★

While there is growing concern about the penetration of Canada by foreign capital, the Council looks at the extraordinary growth of multinational business corporations and suggests that if we do not want to play their game, they may simply move their resources elsewhere—leaving Canada as an economic backwater.

Thus the Council indicates in its analysis of commercial policy problems that economic forces are moving toward a collision with political promises.

★ ★ ★

While the spokesmen of all parties are emphasizing Canadian independence, world pressures are forcing us toward greater dependence on the United States.

The key to the Council's forecast of trade patterns is its expectations that Britain and some other countries will join the European Common Market during the Seventies, forcing world-wide economic adjustment.

Canada is already about the only advanced industrial country without free access to consumer market of 100 million, the Council notes, and it says: "There is the more fundamental issue of how Canada will respond to the 'new generation' of big industrial markets, big international firms, and the acceleration of technological change. Access to a large market for industrial products will undoubtedly be even more important in the future than it has been in the past."

The Council sees three ways in which world commercial policy may develop:

Western countries may decide to resume the pattern of 1947-67 when there was a gradual reduction of tariffs and trade barriers. This move toward free trade, if it happens, would be a "minimum condition" for Canada's continued economic health;

The United States and the European Common Market may get together in a new Kennedy-Round of major tariff cuts, which would open doors to Canadian goods; but there is wide pessimism about this possibility of progress.

★ ★ ★

Or there may be a turn toward protectionist policies on both sides of the Atlantic — probably forcing Canada to seek special arrangements with the United States.

Reading this analysis in the light of rising protectionist propaganda in Washington, the conclusion is unavoidable that the third course is most likely, and that there is a real danger Canada will have to pay for markets in the United States.

The Council examines the different ways in which Canada may be able to get better access to the vast U.S. market.

Many economists believe that free trade with the United States would benefit Canada, it says. But this would also have far reaching political, social and cultural implications.

It would be better, therefore, if Canada could participate in some larger free-trade area in which it would not be alone with the mighty United States. But there are serious questions, warns the Council, whether this is now practicable.

★ ★ ★

This leaves the Council toying with the idea of special trade agreements with the United States to create continental markets for some industries on the lines of the present auto pact, defence-production sharing and regulation of oil sales.

The Council notes that there is already talk of a continental energy market, but it warns if Canada seeks special deals, "the United States might want to broaden the arrangements to include industries and products of special interest to them."

The Council is not enthusiastic about asking Washington for special access to the U.S. market, but it has no doubt that it would be unavoidable in some circumstances: "If the United States were ever to adopt significantly more protective measures adversely affecting the Canadian economy, we believe that it would be essential for Canada, in its own interests, to press for special exemption on the basis of the high degree of economic interdependence between the two countries. This would be analogous to the exemption sought by Canada when the United States imposed controls on capital exports in the 1960s."

★ ★ ★

The Council is less frank but just as bleak in a brief section on the impact of the multi-national corporation.

It quotes one of its own background studies to make the startling forecast that these international businesses may account for half of the entire output of the free world by 1990.

The multi-national giants have a significant advantage, says the Council, because they can combine plentiful capital, competent management, professional skills and advanced technology, and can move these resources to the most economic locations.

★ ★ ★

One of the questions for Canada, warns the Council, is how to make these corporations serve Canadian goals "when their future development and even their present activities can perhaps be readily shifted elsewhere."

As can be seen, this Council commentary on world trends manages to step on almost every nationalist toe.

Consumer Debt Shows Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian consumers increased their debt to banks, stores and finance companies by less than six cents on the dollar in the year to midsummer, although the pace of borrowing picked up sharply in July.

By contrast, consumer credit had expanded between the summers of 1968 and 1969 at a rate of about 17 cents on the dollar.

About one-fifth of the growth during the most recent 12-month stretch took place in July alone.

Figures published Friday by Dominion Bureau of Statistics show that the expansion of consumer credit in the year to the end of July came through personal bank loans, borrowing on life-insurance policies and individual loans of $1,500 or more from finance and loan companies.

Debts for purchases of family cars declined. So did small cash borrowings from loan companies. Credit for furniture and appliances was unchanged.

The consumer debt in all categories tallied monthly, which makes up about four-fifths of all such debt in Canada, amounted to $8,875 million at the end of July.

That was an increase of 5.7 per cent from the $8,400 million at the end of July, 1969, but it was up by more than one per cent in the month of July alone from $8,778 million in June. A year earlier, the total debt held steady in July.

Fasteller Service Adopted

A leading Canadian bank's solution to the noon-hour wicket jam reached Victoria this week and was being eyed by other branches eager to speed up the flow of customers at peak banking hours.

Fasteller Service, marked by a green carpet and roped off with a gold cord, was instituted by the Douglas and Pandora branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

So simple it should have been conceived years ago, the idea merely separates the wicket area from the waiting area, with all persons wishing a teller's services queuing in a single line along the green carpet.

As quickly as one customer leaves any of the open wickets, the person at the head of the line moves into his place. At no time does the one being served have anyone breathing down his neck.

And best of all, the persons waiting get served at the fastest moving wickets.

Those customarily prone to picking the shortest queus (invariably the slowest moving) are thus saved the agony of making the wrong choice.

Buying Spree Marks Week on Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — Moments before the closing bell in last Thursday's session, a cheer went up from some 2,000 men on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

They had good reason to cheer: turnover that day soared to 21,340,000 shares — second only to the 21,350,000 shares traded June 13, 1968.

The swollen volume that session plus a turnover Friday of 20,470,000 shares — the fifth highest volume in exchange history — provided fresh evidence that investors have shaken off the despair that gripped them after the market's 18-month decline.

"Before August, no matter how good news was, it wouldn't lift the market," commented John Smith, analyst for Fahnestock and Co. "Now it's the other way around."

Thursday, encouraging news from the Middle East, and a labor department report of progress in the fight against inflation combined to lift the industrial average almost five points.

Investors went on a buying spree, purchasing particularly many of the so-called glamor issues that had suffered such a beating last spring. Institutions — mutual funds, pension funds, banks and insurance companies — waded deeply into the market. The result of all this activity, of course, was a breathtaking volume of 21,340,000 shares.

Friday's modest gain in stock prices, well reflected in a 2½-point gain in the industrial average, was attributed primarily to news that opposing forces in the Jordanian war had reached a ceasefire agreement.

Of the 1,774 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange this week, 1,128 advanced while 519 declined. New lows were touched by 98 issues and highs by 20.

Big board volume this week rose to 83,420,550 shares from 65,274,270 shares the previous week.

During the week, the Dow Jones' average of 30 industrials rose 3.28 points to 761.77. The Associated Press 60-stock average advanced 2.5 to 257.1. Standard and Poor's 500-stock index climbed 1.35 to 83.97 while the New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks rose 0.78 to 22.26.

The American Stock Exchange index advanced .49 to 22.34.

Of the week's 20 most-active issues on the New York Stock Exchange, 15 advanced, four declined and one was unchanged.

12% INTEREST

Now Offered on Sinking Fund Debentures

The Slegg Acceptance Corporation Ltd., a subsidiary of Slegg Brothers Lumber Ltd., can pay its Debenture holders this attractive rate of interest because the money derived from the sale of these Debentures is used to purchase time payment contracts and to factor accounts arising from retail sales of the parent company. Operating in this manner we can effectively reduce the overhead expense as no costs are incurred in the investment of funds. We are able to pass on the resulting savings to our Debenture holders. Economy of operation always results in higher revenues to the investor.

Interest is paid on our Debentures every quarter, giving the investor an even flow of income throughout the year.

Our Personal Note of Thanks to:

MERON (RON) SIMPSON of J. H. Whittome & Co. Ltd.
JIM BEN-OLIEL of Coast Claims Services
GERRY MARTIN of Restoration Services Ltd.

For their wonderful, immediate assistance and service following our fire on Sept. 11, 1970.

Within one hour after my telephone call to our insurance agent Ron Simpson, Mr. Ben-Oliel and Mr. Martin were on the scene to completely take over. Our grateful thanks to these fine men.

Trojan

A proposal to distribute 50 per cent of its Valley Copper shareholdings will be placed before stockholders of Trojan Consolidtee Mines Ltd. at a meeting in Vancouver next Wednesday.

Trojan proposes an issue of 700,000 non-cumulative preferred shares bearing interest at 3 per cent and with a par value of $10 be created. A preferred stock dividend would be issued on a pro-rated basis to common shareholders, which would be equal to market value of 252,800 Valley Copper shares.

Redemption of the preferred shares for debentures would be another aspect, with provision for converting debentures to Valley Copper shares on a basis varying with the length of time debentures are held.

Pathfinder

Drilling on its 250 claims in Howson Basin area, 25 miles south of Smithers, should start next week, reports Pathfinder Resources Ltd.

The company has an agreement to explore and develop with Norcan Mines Ltd., which will grant up to 60 per cent interest in the property in return for exploration to a value of $100,000 by Sept. 30, 1972.

Some drilling has been done on two zones and a drill grid has been laid out for further work.

Loomis

Negotiations for the acquisition of a Hartford, Conn., armored car service have broken off, reports Loomis Corp., of Seattle.

Loomis and its subsidiary Loomis Armored Car Service, Inc., had been planning the purchase of Mercer and Dunbar Armored Car Service, Inc., and Dunbar Guard Security, Inc., of Hartford.

Termination of negotiations was by mutual arrangement, Loomis president Charles W. Loomis said.

GAS EXPORT RULING DUE NEXT WEEK

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is expected to announce next week a long-awaited decision on exports of natural gas in a ruling that will reflect new policy on Canada's energy resources.

Together, the applications by five main companies involve a total increase in exports by almost nine trillion cubic feet of gas valued at more than $3 billion in the next 20 to 25 years. Also involved is potential construction of more than $250 million worth of pipeline facilities in Western Canada.

Consumers To Be More Demanding

MONTREAL (CP) — Prof. Peter F. Drucker of New York University said this week the sales industry will face a more demanding consumer in the next five years and money lenders must become informed buyers for the public.

A new wave of consumerism — the reaction of consumers against the inadequate performance of goods or services — always comes to life during a period of inflation, Drucker said.

This will give industrial bankers and finance companies an opportunity to become the informed buyer for the public at a time when the consumer is so much more loud and demanding.

"The demand for your services is sky-rocketing and your services are going to become even more important. The importance of what you do is going to go up."

Drucker spoke at a joint Industrial Bankers Association and the Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies.

Drucker forecast a period of great opportunity for the sales finance industry because the increased birth rate between 1946 and 1953 will play an important role in the growth of the market.

There was a 40-per cent increase in the birth rate in the United States during this period, he said, and these people now are in the late teens or early 20s.

"This should result in 40-per cent expansion in the market in the next few years."

Equality On Routes CP Air Aim

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's privately-owned airline should have full equality in domestic and international flying, H. B. Main, CP Air assistant vice-president, says.

Speaking to a service club, he said CP Air pioneered northern and international aviation at no capital risk to the taxpayer and half of any profits of its operations go to the public through taxes.

"We feel that in Canada's interest the government might reconsider permitting full competition on the transcontinental service, compensating CP Air for its lean international routes by allowing it to fly some high-density routes, particularly where a second carrier is permitted by foreign agreement, and looking into the international effect of U.S. route allocations," he said.

LOW IN REVENUE

Government policy has permitted CP Air to be extended to areas of the world important to the Canadian trade but low in airline revenue "at no cost to the Canadian public treasury."

On the other hand, he said, transcontinental air competition is of rather recent origin. From 1937 to 1959, Air Canada had a monopoly.

"No doubt exists in our minds that the principle of increasing competition is good for Canada and Canadians. What we do question is the degree of competition permitted."

Canadian Pacific Airlines' pioneering history in Canada and its northern route transfer to regional carriers in order to co-operate with the government's regional air policy, should by now have won CP Air the right of equality with government-owned Air Canada' he said.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

All Levies Should Be Disclosed

The controversy over Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford's recent Boston speech continues. The gist of his remarks was that the business community frequently produce unnecessary products and by the power of pervasive advertising sells them to the public.

To combat this unworthy practice, he suggests that business should voluntarily restrain the amount of advertising it injects into the cost of consumer goods. The Minister then warned that if business didn't voluntarily limit its advertising push, the government might step in and legislate the amount that one can spend on product promotion.

The technique suggested by Basford was that the tax rules might be amended to prohibit the deduction of certain advertising costs. That would have the effect of doubling the cost of advertising, and would likely act as an effective deterrent for most companies; unless they were poor sports and passed the extra cost occasioned through the tax penalty on to the consumer, in higher prices.

PROTECT CONSUMER

In the present situation Basford isn't aiming his tax proposal at assisting an industry; rather, his object is to protect the Canadian consumer. While his goal may be laudable, his comments have already attracted considerable fire from those who fear that in his zeal to correct the things that are wrong he may also destroy the things that are right with the non-government economic system.

It is not a new debate, nor is it the purpose of this commentary to evaluate the pros and cons of the big brother syndrome. Nevertheless, it's difficult to reconcile Basford's ardour in compelling business to be frank and open in its dealings with the public, as it should, with an apparent disregard of the same high principle by government in its taxing policies.

HIDDEN TAXES

Each year the federal and provincial governments collect many billions in indirect (hidden) taxes which are buried in the price of goods bought by consumers. Few are even aware of the size of the tax component in the price of those goods. In fact, most consumers don't realize the existence of the mamoth hidden tax system.

If the consumer affairs department principle of full disclosure were applied to the tax system, the 12 per cent manufactureres' sales tax, the tobacco, liquor, customs, gasoline and a host of other hidden taxes would be disclosed as part of the cost of each item bought. These taxes are, for the most part, paid unknowingly by the taxpayer. Because they now produce almost as much revenue as the direct income taxes, there is no valid reason that they should continue to be hidden from public view.

SECRET LEVY

Governments are not moving toward the full disclosure principle in taxation. In the U.S., Congress recently increased its airline ticket tax by 60 per cent — from five to eight per cent. Not only is the tax hidden, it is a secret tax. Airlines are legally forbidden to disclose the tax by showing the air fare-plus-tax breakdown on billings to customers.

In Canada, the federal government has agreed that as part of constitutional reform, the provinces will be given the right to levy indirect (hidden) taxes, a right presently denied them.

If we accept the concept that this is the age of full disclosure and open government, it seems appropriate that the same theory should apply to taxation. If that is so, all taxes, direct and indirect, should be drawn to the attention of the taxpayer as is the case with the provincial retail sales tax.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer.)

Pacific Pete

Pacific Petroleums Ltd. expects current sales to be 10 per cent higher than in 1969, with net earnings $16.2 million (78 cents a share) compared with $14.5 million (70 cents).

The estimate was given in New York to a meeting of New York oil analysts by Pacific Pete president I. Merrill Rasmussen, of Calgary.

He said conditions throughout the industry in Canada are favorable, and forecast expansion of both crude oil and natural gas following increased allowable exports to the U.S. The Canadian oil industry shows a 14 per cent crude oil and natural gas liquid improvement, with 15 per cent increase in natural gas production, he said.

Executed Queen A Hot Property

LONDON (CP) — The tragic Mary, Queen of Scots, has become a hot movie property, 383 years after her death by execution.

Reports circulating in London's show-business circles say three films about Mary, one of them starring French-Canadian actress Genevieve Bujold, may be in the cards for production next year.

Miss Bujold, a Montrealer, has starred with Richard Burton in Anne of the Thousand Days, the story of another ill-fated 16th-century queen, Anne Boleyn.

The Evening News quotes producer Hal Wallis as saying he will be returning to Britain in the spring to start work on a movie about Mary, Queen of Scots,

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION COMMISSION

Decision CRTC 70-221

LICENSEES THAT DO NOT COMPLY WITH THE DIRECTION ON CANADIAN OWNERSHIP

1. Under direction from the Governor General in Council, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission may not, after September 1, 1970, renew or amend the licences of broadcasting undertakings that are not owned and effectively controlled by Canadian citizens or eligible Canadian corporations.

2. On July 24, 1970, the Commission announced administrative procedure for dealing with the licencees of broadcasting undertakings that do not yet comply with this direction.

3. The Commission has now come to the conclusion that the direction may be carried out in an orderly manner under a revised procedure and schedule of hearings. Accordingly, the Commission has reviewed its decision of July 24, which is hereby rescinded, except that the Commission affirms its decision to cancel the condition of licence which required affected licensees to comply with the direction by September 1, 1970.

4. In order to provide time in all cases for negotiations by non-complying licensees, preparation and processing of applications, hearings and decisions, and completion of transfers of ownership before expiry of licences, the Commission extends the date of expiry of the licences, as set out in Appendix "A" hereto, to December 31, 1971.

5. The Commission also rescinds the last two paragraphs of Decision CRTC 70-159 regarding CKLW and CKLW-FM Windsor, Ont., and the last two paragraphs of Decision CRTC 70-166 regarding CKMI-TV and CFCM-TV Quebec, Que.

6. The Commission specifically notes, however, that the licences held by Television de Quebec Limitee expire on March 31, 1971. It does not believe it would be in the public interest to vary this date. Attention is drawn to the Decision CRTC 70-166 regarding this licensee. The Commission still expects the interested parties to negotiate in good faith and to consider availing themselves of arbitration if necessary.

7. Applications for divestiture by licensees which are complete in all respects by September 1, 1970, will be heard by the Commission in the fall of 1970.

8. In order to provide for orderly processing of applications, scheduling of hearings, and possible contingencies, all other licensees listed are required to file complete applications on or before February 12, 1971, for hearings before the summer of 1971. If complete applications are filed well before February 12, 1971, in the fall of 1970, such applicants could be heard in the first month of 1971.

9. The Commission considers this February 12 deadline for filing essential in scheduling applications for hearings and for orderly completion of the divestiture program.. Should further procedural steps be required, these will be announced later.

10. Because of the nature of these hearings, the Commission wishes to remind the public and interested parties that opposition is recognized and accepted procedure at all CRTC public hearings.

Houdini's Letters Reappear

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Harry Houdini's letters, missing for two years, have done the old reappearing trick.

The letters were stolen from the Houdini Magical Hall of Fame, which contains a collection of the escape artist's handcuffs, locks, straitjackets, picks and keys. In July, 1968, a man and a woman diverted a museum guide's attention while another man pried open a case and stole the letters.

Museum president Henry Muller offered a $1,000 reward. This week he paid the reward to an unidentified attorney from Buffalo, N.Y., who said he was acting from a client who got them from a thief.

Houdini, a United States magician famous for his escape tricks, died in 1926.

DOES A MAN HAVE TO RIOT . . . . . . TO GET THE MESSAGE ACROSS?

Toothless Welfare Laws Are Gnawing at the Poor

By PETER McNELLY

The British North America Act must be rewritten to give the federal government jurisdiction over welfare programs.

Otherwise, provincial governments will continue to shortchange welf[illegible]ipients through a variety of unequal and inadequate laws.

These were the views of Walter Olszewski, president of the Victoria Low Income Group, upon his return Friday from an Ottawa conference of the National Council of Welfare.

The NCW, of which Olszewski is a British Columbia representative, is a federal advisory body created earlier this year by federal Health Minister John Munro.

★

Olszewski said he went to the Ottawa meeting to find out what powers the federal government has under the Canada Assistance Plan to regulate welfare programs in Canada.

What did he find out? "The federal government can't do a damn thing to force the provincial governments to abide by the Canada Assistance Plan except cut off funds."

What does this mean to Olszewski? "The act isn't worth the paper it's printed on."

He said federal deputy welfare minister J. W. Willard told him that the government sees the act primarily as a cost-sharing mechanism, not a policy document.

The Canada Assistance Plan was passed in 1967. Under provisions of the act, provincial governments may make agreements with the federal government to receive 50 per cent of social allowance costs from Ottawa.

★

But what upsets Olszewski, and other NCW members across Canada, he said, is the discovery that the federal government has no power to force provinces to live up to the spirit of the act except by withdrawing its money.

Munro once threatened to do that if British Columbia persisted in refusing welfare to locked-out workers. The issued boiled over on May 16, 1970 when Munro made his threat.

He told reporters in Ottawa that he was prepared to take "action" if B.C. had violated any federal law because of the policy.

"The fact that a person is involved in a labor dispute is irrelevant when considering whether a person is eligible for social assistance," Munro said.

But Olszewski says all that was empty talk because B.C. Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi made the no-welfare-to-locked-out-workers policy stick.

★

The reason he could do this, he says, is because the BNA act makes welfare a provincial responsibility. This view was confirmed Friday by an official in B.C.'s rehablitation department.

Under provincial legislation, direct responsibility for welfare has been transferred to the muncipalities, though the provincial government pays 30 per cent of welfare costs. (Municipalities pay 20 per cent and the federal government pays 50 per cent.)

Olszewski said NCW members agreed that a uniform welfare program is necessary in Canada, so they passed a resolution urging Munro to "institute a policy and program audit of all social assistance programs to establish the nature and extent of any violations of the Canada Assistance Plan Act."

★

Olszewski's own solution is, as usual, more radical than that. He wants Ottawa to withdraw Canada Assistance Plan money from British Columbia right now.

This would force the municipalities to demand better welfare policies for fear the poor will revolt.

"When a man is hungry and he sees no place to turn, what does he do? The first thing he does is get angry. Now imagine how he would feel if his allowance was cut in half once the Canada Assistance Plan money disappeared."

Olszewski isn't the only one who's been talking about "poor power" lately.

On Aug. 24, Reuben Baetz, executive director of the moderate Canadian Welfare Council, said the threat of violence by the poor often "seems to have more effect on changing public attitudes for the better than a logical argument."

And the same day Dr. John Frei, executive director of the Metropolitan Toronto Social Planning Council, said poor people will riot unless politicians step up welfare spending.

Olszewski's view is that welfare recipients across Canada are getting shortchanged because provincial governments set maximum benefits according to certain family sizes.

★

He says this contradicts federal welfare policy for the Canada Assistance Plan as described in Section Two of a government document, Social Security in Canada 1969.

The document states that the Canada Assistance Plan does not set maximum social allowance rates to permit the provinces to "adjust rates to local conditions and to take into account the needs of special groups."

During the NCW conference last week, Senator David Croll said Olszewski's charge is true "right across the country."

"The amount of benefits in most provinces leave these people just scratching to get by in the last week of the month," he said.

What frustrates Olszewski is that the federal government has specific policies about the way its Canada Assistance Plan money should be used but lacks the constitutional power to make its policies stick.

★

In addition to giving welfare solely on the basis of need and allowing flexible rates, government policy — as spelled out in Social Security in Canada 1969 — does not allow residency to be a factor in welfare eligibility.

But B.C. does not give welfare — except for emergency assistance — to persons who have lived in the province less than one month.

These examples are clear violations of federal policy, Olszewski says, but B.C. is not alone.

In Ontario, for example, an applicant for welfare must have a red Canada Manpower registration card stamped before getting assistance.

★

If Manpower refuses to stamp the card — and Toronto's Just Society Movement, a welfare rights group, says this often happens — welfare is denied.

Testimony at the NCW conference from Longueuil, Que. claimed that a Pandora's Box of abuse and harassment there was systematically demoralizing the poor.

A federally-sponsored meeting of Canada's low income and welfare rights groups will take place in Toronto in December.

Olszewski said he is on the planning committee for the meeting which may result in the creation of a national welfare rights organization.

Such a group, he said, will push for changes in federal and provincial welfare legislation by lobbying for the poor.

Hospital Deal Nearing

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is confident that an agreement can be reached in the dispute between the South Vancouver Island Hospital Society and the Capital Regional Hospital Board.

The dispute is holding up hospital construction.

The minister, after meeting representatives of the hospital society and the regional board in the Legislative Buildings Friday, said he hoped for a settlement within the next few days.

"We are just on the edge of having an agreement," he said.

Alex Wood, president of the society, was also optimistic.

Officials of the regional board refused comment on the meeting.

The main issue at stake is whether the regional board or the hospital society should have title to the property that might be acquired for expansion of St. Joseph's.

The regional board wants the title to the land and a guarantee that the 150-bed extended care unit planned for the site can be built within government guidelines.

SURROUNDED by flowers and soon to be surrounded by florists, Empress employee Shelagh Amos checks the preparations for delegates to the Flowers Canada convention Sunday. At 3 p.m. Sunday, a plane is scheduled to bomb the waterfront at the Oak Bay Marina with flowers for the 400 florists, growers and wholesalers expected. (Bill Halkett Photo)

Ask The Times

Q. A friend of mine recently died and left me an old picture which shows a pack of hounds with monkeys on their backs running along a road. The picture is titled "The Steeplechase" and the caption under it reads: "Tom baffles the pursuers and heads them down the road to Bedlam". I've been told it's a very famous painting. Can you tell me the author or anything else about it? M. B.

A. This appears to be a print, probably engraved in the late 18th century. If it is the name of the artist and the engraver would be in the lower corners under the caption. Officials at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria are often able to identify prints and could possibly help you further if you took the print to the gallery at 1040 Moss.

Questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

One Thing, Sloppy Driver: You Forgot the Computer

By STEVE HUME

Drivers who flout authority with illegal turns, going too fast or too slow, and not quite stopping for stop signs have been getting some unpleasant surprises lately.

It comes under the label of future shock, and it is generated by a ruthlessly efficient IBM computer system that keeps tabs on drivers who break the rules.

The eagle-eyed and ever-vigilant computer now compiles, stores and continuously scans drivers' records under the new no-fine demerit system of dealing with traffic offences.

It is the essential component in the B.C. government's driver improvement program, says Art Sharpe, administrative officer of driver licensing at the Motor-Vehicles Branch.

With the computer's lightning access to files, the motor vehicles branch is able to watch continuously how each driver's record develops.

As a driver accumulates demerits for each traffic violation, the record is stored on magnetic tape. The computer is programmed to read the tape, and when a record reaches six demerits a warning letter to the offender is automatically printed out on the machine.

At nine demerits the computer automatically kicks out the record and the Motor-Vehicles Branch takes over.

Nine demerits, Sharpe points out, is the total at which an offending driver is given the opportunity to show just cause why his licence should not be suspended for 30 days.

"At six points our computer's letter recommends the driver register for a defensive driving course, but at nine points his record is reviewed and he is called in for an interview and told to submit anything he feels is pertinent on his behalf," Sharpe says.

Under the demerit system minor violations like failing to stop at a red light are worth two points, offences like speeding draw three, more serious charges like driving without insurance get six points, and offences which come under the criminal code automatically get 10 points.

"What we're trying to do is adjudicate each case on its own merits," Sharpe says.

Under this program, any violation which involves alcohol automatically draws a 30-day suspension, "they can get more but they can't get less," he says.

But for accumulations of nine points by way of lesser infractions drivers are given an option — they can take the 30-day suspension or take a defensive driving course.

The option is offered when the offender comes in for his interview.

"If he's belligerent the only thing we can do is carry on with the suspension. But a suspension is only a last resort. What can a person learn while he's off the road — one thing only, inconvenience."

"We'd sooner have him take courses."

Once a driver accumulates nine points on his record, his case is automatically reviewed with each subsequent violation. If it is thought necessary, the offender is called in for another interview.

"What we try to find out are the circumstances involved. We try to find out if they're trying to improve their driving habits — if so we'll go along with them. If they have a belligerent attitude—well they're going to be a danger to others. . . ."

Sharpe said any appeals go directly before the superintendent of the Motor Vehicles Branch.

He said the system appears to please everyone, including drivers, because its efficiency lies in its flexibility.

"It's consciously flexible and it doesn't rely on the letter of the law.

"We have found a tremendous change in the people being interviewed over their driving record since the no-fine law came into effect. Everybody's pocketbook is exactly the same size now."

Those people who dispute traffic violation reports which result in demerits "really believe they didn't do it," Sharpe says.

"As a result people are more anxious about the points than they ever were about fines. We've had people come in and ask if they could pay fines to avoid demerits."

Under the new system the computer has adjudicated some 35,017 adult drivers' records to the end of August and 12,945 warning letters have been mailed, Sharpe says.

A total of 4,558 drivers have been given the option of a 30-day suspension or a defensive driving course, and a total of 4,376 licences were finally suspended.

Some 6,378 drivers were subject to court suspensions of driving privileges, and 1,221 were subject to mandatory suspensions.

The Motor-Vehicles Branch adjudicated 3,099 juvenile records in the same period of time, mailed 99 warning letters and sent out some 9,375 advisory letters to parents.

Only 169 juveniles finally had licences suspended by the branch, but 48 were subject to court suspensions and 310 faced mandatory suspensions.

While 62 juveniles were convicted on impaired driving charges between January and the end of August, 6,412 adults were convicted.

> 'People are more anxious about points than they ever were about fines'

Police Roadblock Ticks Them Off

A seven-hour roadblock on Esquimalt and Tyee roads Friday by city police resulted in two arrests and two 24-hour roadside licence suspensions of the 1,320 cars checked.

Ten policemen and 15 auxiliary officers were involved in the roadblock that started at 5 p.m. and ended shortly before midnight.

One of the arrests was for impaired driving, the other for disobeying a summons.

Sixty-eight drivers were given summonses, including 42 for no inspection stickers and five for failing to change their address.

One driver was summonsed for speeding over 30 m.p.h.

Another 181, drivers were given warnings, including 82 to produce proof of insurance coverage, 44 to produce driver's licences and 38 to produce registration slips.

Fourteen drivers were told to report to the motor vehicle testing station on McKenzie Avenue.

700 Teachers To Talk Math

Approximately 700 teachers are expected to attend the ninth annual Northwest Mathematics Conference Oct. 16 and 17 at Oak Bay Junior Secondary.

Local teachers and faculty members of the University of Victoria will be among the speakers.

STORES PLAN 6 P.M. CLOSING

New opening and closing hours for downtown stores are expected to be ratified at a meeting of the Downtown Merchants' Association on Oct. 6.

Under the new schedule, stores will open at 9:30 a.m. and close at 6 p.m.

J. D. Nixon, secretary-manager of the association, said the main purpose of the Oct. 6 meeting was to advise all downtown businesses of the change and to set a date for it to come into effect.

B.C. Hydro will be re-scheduling their bus services through the extra half-hour period, he said.

On Friday, stores will remain open until 9:30 p.m.

He also said merchants have ratified closing hours for downtown stores in December.

Starting Dec. 3, stores will be open until 9:30 every night until Christmas.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ON A NORMAL DAY IN this newsroom, the tempo begins to slacken soon after noon. A typewriter or two continues to click, but a condition approaching calm sets in. The work-day is by no means over, but it has arrived at a breathing space.

This condition tends to puzzle and even disappoint people who drop in bearing club notices and the like. Where's the snap-and-crackle, the electric tension that is supposed to be a newspaper's working climate?

The editors and reporters who get out the paper know the answer to that question. This is the hour when anything can happen. Just often enough to make complacency hazardous, it does happen.

And happen it did on Thursday. The word came crackling in: bank alarm, shots fired. A cops-and-robber sequence that rivalled thriller fiction was unreeling on this peaceful peninsula.

The relaxed atmosphere shattered on the instant. Our three-star edition was away, and no hope of catching it even with a fast news flash. But the home edition would carry the account, or as much of it as was then available, on its front page.

Any number of times, we've been assured that the role of a newspaper has changed—that the dispensing of what my trade calls hard news is no longer our prime function.

Up to a point, that may be so. With a big, fast, multi-angle story breaking, however, men who cut their teeth on hard news aren't of a mind to deal in abstractions.

The voice of a newspaper speaks through its editorials. But its heart is its city desk, and with a local story of first magnitude snowballing from one dramatic development to the next, that heart began to pump adrenalin.

It was a day for the city desk crew—the city editor, his assistant, the men on rewrite who tailored continuity out of the swift-shifting pursuit. It was also a day for the reporters, whether in the field or hunched over their phones.

For some of the younger men, it was the first big story, the one that will be remembered for a lifetime.

There's truth as well as corn in the observation that any newsman, no matter what his job, stays a reporter at heart.

It was a day when those of us who had no part in putting the story together entertained long thoughts and a certain amount of envy from the sidelines.

Please don't read from this account a lack of concern for policemen wounded and hostages subjected to a very grim experience. We shared the general concern, and it was good to know that the hostages were safe, and the prolonged, dangerous caper ended.

But it was a big story, and I felt you might be interested in a glimpse of a newsroom when the pressure is on.

In the aftermath, two facts emerge.

One is that there are easier places from which to escape under hot pursuit than a peninsula on an island. The suspect is one of a very few who made it—for what a flight that ended in American custody may be worth.

Another fact is that police efficiency as demonstrated throughout the chase was of a very high order. It would be hard to imagine a more ticklish situation for police than the one that developed in the seagoing stage of the episode.

Had Canadian officers pressed too hard, and placed capture ahead of hostages' safety, lives might have been lost.

IN LATE AUGUST, TRAIL-making volunteers from Shawnigan Lake Boys' School plugged six and a half miles from Buttle Lake to a choice location in Strathcona Park's Marble Meadows.

A helicopter under parks branch charter airlifted the makings of a cabin to the site. The boys got to work.

Result, a Batzer hut, designed to withstand heavy snows, and fitted with a stove and eight bunks for hikers. Any group willing to make the climb can shelter without charge in the parks branch-approved hut.

It's already been used and appreciated by families and hiking parties.

Materials were donated by a Victoria contractor who prefers to remain anonymous. The hut was prefabricated by the students under direction of Shawnigan manual arts instructor Ralph Hickling.

"From the parks branch viewpoint," says director Bob Ahrens, "there's much we like about this project. It shows a proprietary interest in the parks that we're glad to encourage. We'll welcome more direct involvement of this sort."

The hope may be fulfilled. Instructor Hickling and his handy student crew are willing to prefabricate and erect a second hut in Strathcona next summer, if another donor will supply the necessary materials.

Anyone willing to do so is requested to get in touch with the parks branch, Ralph Hickling, or me.

That's it, and home now to sample our new-crop chili sauce. Tomatoes have their virtues after all!

Danny Happy Whistler After Bucs Clip Mets

Worse in 1951, Says Leo, As Cubs Lose to Phillies

By The Associated Press

Leo Durocher and Gil Hodges are whistling in the dark but Danny Murtaugh is just whistling today after his Pittsburgh Pirates took a long stride towards nailing down the National League's East Division flag.

The Pirates nipped New York Mets 4-3 Friday night to open a 3½ game bulge over both the Mets and Chicago Cubs, who lost to Philadelphia Phillies 5-3. Pittsburgh's magic number, with five games to play, is three. The Cubs and Mets have six remaining, including four against each other.

Murtaugh, elated by his club's suddenly healthy position as the race moves into its final days, claims he isn't looking at the magic number. "I only believe," said Murtagh, "in having them four out with three to go."

Durocher, manager of the Cubs, was gloomy but still hopeful.

"It's never over until it says so on the board," said Leo. "It was worse in 1951. We were five down with eight to play."

Hodges, who also remembers '51 and the Giants' miracle run past the Dodgers, but with less relish than Durocher, was also somber. "We have to win the next two," he said, "there's no doubt about it."

EXPOS TRIP CARDS

Elsewhere in the National League Friday night, Montreal Expos tripped St. Louis Cardinals 7-5, Houston Astros took Atlanta Braves 7-4 in 12 innings, Los Angeles Dodgers battered Cincinnati Reds 9-3 and San Diego Padres whipped San Francisco Giants 7-4.

Willie Stargell was the key man in Pittsburgh's big victory over the Mets. The Pirate left fielder threw out the potential tying run at the plate in the eighth inning and then singled home the clincher in the bottom of the eighth.

CAUGHT AT PLATE

The Mets were trailing 3-2 with two on and two out in the eighth when Bud Harrelson singled to left. Stargell charged the hit and fired to the plate, beating Ken Boswell by several steps.

In the bottom of the eighth, Manny Sanguillen ripped his third hit of the game, moved up on a walk and scored the deciding run on Stargell's hit. The Mets got a run back in the ninth and had runners at first and second with none out. But Cleon Jones flied out and then Art Shamsky struck out as Sanguillen threw out Tommie Agee trying to steal third to complete the double play and end the game.

WISE STINGY

Rick Wise fired a five-hitter for the Phillies and consecutive homers by Tim McCarver and Don Money sank the Cubs.

Ron Fairly's three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning carried the Expos past the Cardinals. St. Louis had rallied for three in the top of the ninth to take the lead before singles by Mack Jones, Bob Bailey and Jim Fairey closed the gap and Fairly delivered his 15th homer.

ENDURANCE RECORD

In the American League, the long season is over for little Luis Aparicio.

Aparicio, Chicago's 36-year-old bantam, set a major-league record Friday night by playing his 2,219th game at shortstop as the White Sox trimmed Milwaukee Brewers 5-1 in the opener of a doubleheader.

Then, as the Brewers bounced back to take the nightcap 3-2, Aparaicio prepared to depart for his native Venezuela — with the Sox' blessing, a career-high batting average of .313 and a signed contract for the 1971 season.

Elsewhere, Boston Red Sox trimmed Washington Senators 5-1, Baltimore Orioles topped Cleveland Indians 9-7 on Terry Crowley's 13th inning homer; Minnesota Twins nipped Kansas City Royals 1-0 on Jim Perry's two-hitter; New York Yankees won their double-header nightcap against Detroit Tigers 8-3 after bowing 3-1 in the opener and Oakland Athletics beat California Angels 6-0.

ON TOP OF THE SITUATION at Montreal Friday night was Expo catcher John Bateman, who blocks Tom Simmons of St. Louis away from plate and makes tag for third out in second inning. Simmons had attempted to score from third base on fly ball to outfielder Rusty Staub. Expos continued to plague all their National League rivals as they came from behind in ninth inning to trip Cardinals 7-5. (CP Wirephoto.)

BILL WALKER

More hockey? And if you really want to know, the Los Angeles Kings were once almost famous. Think not? Then hearken to this.

"The Coast's Crazy Dreamers." That was the Los Angeles hockey story behind the cover picture on Sports Illustrated magazine. The date: April 8, 1968.

General manager Larry Regan will never forget it. Neither will owner Jack Kent Cooke. He got so excited he immediately predicted a Stanley Cup championship. But not many others of the Kings will recall it. There are not that many around any more.

It happened this way.

The Kings had come into the National League through the expansion doorway. Cooke had snatched the L.A. franchise from under the noses of others. He had a theory that had worked before. His philosophy was, and still is:

"I have always felt if any man wanted anything more than any other man wanted it, and was willing to work hard to get it, he would get it."

So he worked hard, and got the franchise, for which he had promised favors in return.

One of these was the guarantee to build a huge new ice palace, befitting an NHL team. He kept his word, and the Fabulous Forum home of the Kings, is a magnificent edifice indeed.

●

NHL president Clarence Campbell said at the opening: "It is a fantastic building, the finest sports emporium in creation." Jack Adams added: "It is simply gorgeous."

But the Forum was only part of the story.

Because the Kings had also done their bit on the ice and had done it well. Yes, the Kings, under the genius of coach Red Kelly, had almost accomplished the unlikely feat of winning the west.

The Kings had missed the league championship by only a whisker in their first expansion season. And they had done it the hard way, by playing at home in three separate arenas, in L.A., at the arena, in Long Beach, and finally in the Forum. Pardon, the Fabulous Forum, the $18 million house that Cooke built.

As a matter of interest for club rookies, the Kings reached the giddy heights of first place a short while before the season ended, and actually needed only one victory in their last three games to win it all. They didn't, but they achieved a measure of fame, nonetheless.

Cooke was named "hockey executive of the year."

It was a signal honor indeed. But if it was to be a forerunner of things to come, it didn't quite work out that way. The Kings finished fourth the next season, and although Kelly got them into the west final against St. Louis, they eventually foundered. Kelly then left for Pittsburgh.

Last year the Kings found themselves in over their heads, and with no hope of surfacing. That one brief moment of glory was all but forgotten.

●

But it may be revived. It will be revived, rather, if Cooke has his way. And he will, eventually, if not sooner.

For ex-King coach Hal Laycoe, who probably has good reason to suggest otherwise, recently described Cooke as a very sincere man whose main failing was that he might be too sincere about hockey. But not without reason, Laycoe added.

It was simply that Cooke, in enjoying his sports teams, enjoys hockey most of all.

"That's why he takes such an avid interest in his club," Laycoe explained.

Which is borne out by Cooke's presence here this week. If there are to be any decisions that will better the club, he'll be ready to deal from the top in an effort to find the aces.

Which, it is suggested, he may need to do, if he is to successfully pursue his announced goal in life.

For the key to it all is Cooke's dream of an empire—a sports championship domain.

He wants most of all three national championships — for his Kings, in hockey; for his Lakers, in basketball; and for the Washington Redskins, in football.

The Kings and the Lakers are all his, and they play in his Forum. The Lakers fill it, the Kings don't. He owns a quarter interest in the Redskins.

When does he want these titles? There's no rush, as long as he gets them right away.

It's not that Cooke is an insensitive slave driver. It's just that he is an impatient man with that impatient philosophy which includes an insatiable desire to win.

Which is what the man said, when he got the franchise, isn't it?

And who can blame him for that.

"Crazy Dreamers" again in the west?

Sure, but with a fox's brain, and the cunning that goes with it to guide them. Which they will need.

Jockey Club Bans Shop Staffs; Claims Few Bets Reach Windows

TORONTO (CP) — The Jockey Club, armed with evidence gathered after an investigation by its own security agents, says that little of the money wagered through offtrack messenger betting shops reaches the pari-mutuel windows of its five Ontario tracks.

The club said it will ban from the tracks it operates for thoroughbred and standardbred racing all those it knows are associated with operating off-track shops. It also called for prosecution of the shops by federal and provincial authorities.

John J. Mooney, executive vice-president of the Jockey Club, made the announcement at a press conference Friday and said the evidence will be forwarded to Justice Minister John Turner and Attorney-General Arthur Wishart of Ontario.

Mooney said in a statement:

"For a considerable period of time the Jockey Club has been of the opinon that very little of the aggregate monies wagered through off-track messenger betting shops is being lawfully bet through the pari-mutuel system of race tracks.

"When messenger betting first commenced, messengers were observed in significant numbers with lists for wagering on a variety of horses. During the current year, very few of such messengers have been observed at the track despite continuous surveillance by the management and by security personnel.

"Betting by such messengers has appeared to be sporadic and the aggregate amount wagered has been relatively small."

Rendall Dick, deputy attorney-general, said Friday night his department and law enforcement agencies are aware of the activities of off-track betting shops.

"The police are working on this continually but they find it is very difficult to get the needed evidence," he said.

Mooney's charges are based on evidence collected by Jockey Club security officers who placed bets at 24 off-track shops in and near the Metropolitan Toronto area.

In two of three betting experiments the officers placed more money on specific horses than turned up in the track show pool for those horses.

Settlement Door Opening As Park, Sanderson Back

By The Canadian Press

Two hockey players who have been under suspension by their clubs have returned to National Hockey League training camps in an effort to settle their contract differences.

Defenceman Brad Park, one of four New York Rangers suspended by general manager-coach Emile Francis for failure to play in the Rangers' first exhibition game, returned to practice Friday and Francis said he will submit his contract dispute to arbitration.

Park was suspended Sept. 17 along with centres Jean Ratelle and Walt Tkaczuk and winger Vic Hadfield. Francis said details on Park's arbitration have not been made final. There is a clause in NHL contracts that any unsettled contract may be brought to arbitrators, one representing each side.

Meanwhile, centre Derek Sanderson of Boston Bruins, suspended Thursday when he failed to return to camp in London, Ont. after visiting Montreal Wednesday to play a role in a movie being produced there, had permission to return to camp Friday.

MUST PAY EXPENSES

Sanderson's lawyer, Bob Woolf of Boston, said he had talked to Bruins coach Tom Johnson who said the centre had permission to return but must pay his own living expenses until he settles his contract differences with the Boston club.

There still has been no progress in salary disputes with at least three other NHL players.

Defenceman Harry Howell and Carol Vadnais are still at odds with the Oakland Seals management and NHL president Clarence Campbell said Friday he will represent the Seals as an arbitrator in the dispute. Neil Shayne, a Mineola, N.Y. lawyer, has been appointed to represent the players.

Another celebrated holdout, centre Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs, is still away from camp until his contract dispute is settled.

THREE GAMES PLAYED

Meanwhile, three pre-season games were played Friday night. The Bruins, without Sanderson, defeated Detroit Red Wings 6-5 in one game at Port Huron, Mich. In other games, St. Louis Blues edged the Seals 3-2 and Los Angeles Kings defeated Vancouver Canucks 6-3 in a game at Edmonton.

The Kings, in their first exhibition, got two goals each from Gord Labossiere and Mike Byers while Bob Berry and Larry Mickey added the others.

Orland Kurtenbach, Len Lunde and Lasse Oksanen, a member of Finland's national team, scored for the Canucks, a new entry in the NHL.

Cats Sign Punter; Blasted by Coach

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Kay, 24, halfback-punter with University of Toronto Blues, has been signed to a balance-of-season contract by Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference.

The move came after Ticats lost their punter, quarterback Joe Zuger, early in a 26-14 victory Wednesday night over British Columbia Lions.

McKay, drafted by the Ticats last year, attended their preseason training camp and spelled Zuger in several games while averaging nearly 45 yards a kick.

DRAWS WRATH

McKay's signing drew the wrath of Varsity coach Ron Murphy on the eve of the intercollegiate football season. Murphy called the actions "of the Hamilton coach staff ... highly unethical."

"They didn't even contact me and get permission to make him an offer."

Murphy said he couldn't blame McKay.

"They shouldn't never have put him in the position to have to decide. But they sure put pressure on 44 other players on our team.

"I've always co-operated with the pros in the past," said Murphy, "but no more."

With Zuger sidelined, the Ticats will start reserve quarterback John Eckman against the Eskimos at Edmonton tonight in a game that will be carried on the CBS television network, starting at 8 p.m. PDT.

Three other games are scheduled Sunday.

Toronto Argonauts will tangle with the Stampeders in Calgary, Ottawa Roughriders will move into Montreal for a battle with the Alouettes and Saskatchewan Roughriders will tackle the Blue Bombers in Winnipeg.

The Calgary game is scheduled to be carried on the CTV network, starting at 2 p.m. PDT.

Tony Jacklin Boosts Lead

DALMAHOY, Scotland (AP) — Tony Jacklin, United States Open golf champion, shot a six-under-par 66 Friday and gained a five-stroke lead in the $24,000 Wills Open tournament.

The 26-year-old Briton followed up his 65 of Thursday with another round of spectacular driving and pitching to give him a three-round aggregate of 198.

Two other Britons, Charles DeFoy and Peter Townsend, shared second place at 203.

Billy Casper of Bonita, Calif., who started out as favorite for the $4,800 first prize, carded a par 72 over the 6,667-yard Dalmahoy course and will go into today's final round Saturday with a 209 total.

Girls' Ice Hockey

Women interested in playing ice hockey are invited to register with Bob Lindal (phone 382-2221). Games are expected to be played mornings during the week.

Oil Kings Trip Vancouver 7-2

About 20 years ago, the late Jim Christianson lumped four clubs into one and launched a new era for Edmonton junior hockey. Since then, the Oil Kings have built an impressive reputation in Western Canada circles.

In that period, they've switched coaches, management, players and even leagues. The reputation remains.

Western Canada Hockey League finalists last season, the newest Oil King crew will carry past reputation with them Sunday when they make their first appearance in Victoria by playing the Cougars. The Memorial Arena exhibition will start at 7 p.m.

The newest Kings didn't harm their reputation Friday night in Vancouver when Edmonton breezed to a 7-2 victory over the Centennials of the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

Vancouver showed surprising strength before 1,750 fans, but lacked the goaltending offered by Edmonton's Ed Guertin. He was one of the game's standouts, kicking out 30 shots, 13 of them in the second period.

Edmonton got goals from Dan Spring, Bert Scott, Dave Kryshow, Ron Jones, Rick Wyrozub, Tom Bladadon and Darcy Rota.

Two other BCJHL clubs got into the swing of exhibition things Friday.

At Vernon, the defending champion Essos collected four goals and an assist from all-star Wayne Dye and ran up a 9-3 edge to beat Kelowna Buckaroos.

ANNUAL TIMES BOWLING CONTEST . . . . . . STARTS NEXT SATURDAY

It's Time to Tune Those Tossing Arms

It is time once again for pinbusters on the southern portion of Vancouver Island to tune-up tossing arms. They have only one more week to prepare for the start of the eighth annual Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Launched by the Victoria Daily Times in 1963 with the aim of stimulating interest in the bowling pastime, the contest this season will begin next Saturday and run for 26 weeks until it ends on April 16. Competition will be suspended for two weeks — Dec. 19 to Jan. 1 — during the Christmas period.

All league bowlers in Greater Victoria, Sooke, Duncan, Chemainus, Lake Cowichan and Youbou are eligible to win weekly awards in each of four categories — men's and women's fivepins, and men's and women's tenpins.

Pictures of weekly winners, who will receive crests, will be published in the Times.

All the 26 weekly winners in each category will also be eligible to compete for Times Trophies in Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs on May 2, 1971. Any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Times will receive a bonus award of $100.

There are no entry fees and the rules are simple.

Beginning Oct. 3, each weekly competition starts Saturday morning and winds up the following Friday night.

The bowlers with the highest three-game totals in the four categories will be named "Bowler of the Week."

Any contestant may win only one award in each division and if a former winner tops the list in any succeeding week, the award and a berth in the rolloffs will go to the runner-up.

In the event of a tie, the bowler with the highest single game score will be declared the winner.

League secretaries will be responsible during the season for submitting high scores to lanes managers, who, in turn, will forward the highest house score in each division to the Times.

That's all there is to it — except for getting those tosses on target and remembering that this is a contest in which the average bowler needs only one big night during the season to beat the experts and hit the top.

SPONSOR DROPS EVENT AFTER $500,000 BATH

NEW YORK (AP) — Dow Jones announced Friday that it has temporarily dropped the $300,000 Dow Jones open, the world's richest golf tournament.

The inaugural tournament was staged in August at the Upper Montclair Country Club in Clifton, N.J. It followed by only a couple of weeks the $250,000 Westchester Classic in Harrison, N.Y.

"The tournament was a success in every phase except financial," said Ed Roll, Dow Jones vice-president and tournament director. "It cost us about $500,000."

"We don't intend to get out of golf. We hope to sponsor a pro-amateur event in 1971 and perhaps return to the regular tour schedule in 1972.

"If so, our plans would be for another $300,000 event."

The Upper Montclair tournament carried a first prize of $60,000 won by Bobby Nichols.

Yanks Cruising To Easy Victory

MADRID (Reuters) — The United States team continued to play steady, unspectacular golf and increased its lead in the Eisenhower Trophy world team golf championship to nine strokes Friday with one round to play.

Marvin Giles and Allen Miller each shot one-under-par 71 over the Puerta de Mierro Club course Friday. U.S. amateur champion Lanny Wadkins had a 72 to give the U.S. 214 for the day and a three-round total of 640, eight under par.

The top three scores of each four-member team count toward the total.

South Africa moved into second place with a third-round total of 216 for an over-all score of 649. Australia was third with 651 after 212 in Friday's round. New Zealand was fourth at 652.

Canada also fared badly Friday with 228 for a three-round total of 662 and is in sixth place. For Canada, Stu Hamilton of Brampton, Ont., had his third straight 75, Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., shot 76 and Wayne MacDonald of Brampton, Ont., and Keith Alexander of Calgary each carded 77.

Stars Clash With Vikings In Opener

All local clubs in the Vancouver Island Hockey League commence two-hour workouts Monday at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Defending-champion University of Victoria Vikings take to the ice at 6:30 a.m., Butler Brothers take over at 6 p.m., Stockers North Americans start at 8 p.m. and Victoria Cubs begin practice chores at 10 p.m.

Chemainus Blues, the other squad in the five-team league, will be practicising on home ice in Fuller's Lake Arena.

The VIHL season opens on Friday, Oct. 2, with the annual all-star game. Vikings will battle an all-star team made up of players from the other four teams at 8:30 p.m.

City Canoeists Enter Fraser River Contest

Twelve members of the Victoria Canoe Club are competing today in the first leg of the fourth annual Fraser River race.

Victorians entered in the 40-mile, two-day marathon include Dave Thompson, Ron Steele, Pat Townsend, Virginia Sauter, Wilf Harper, Kitsie Harper, Paul Pearlman, Jim Tillinger, Nils Lovenmark, Bev. Lovenmark, John Williw and his son, John.

'Singles' Also Help In Baseball Drive

A $200 donation is sort of a "home run" gift, but officials seeking to raise $3,500 for the Victoria Centennials' baseball club feel "singles" also would do the job.

Centennials need at least $3,500 in order to represent Canada in the world amateur baseball tournament at Columbia in November.

A donation of $200 Friday by Molson's Brewery has helped swell the fund almost to $2,800.

Before the Molson's donation came in, Victoria Amateur Baseball Association president Gar Taylor expressed dismay that "some sports fans feel ashamed about contributing only a dollar."

While large donations are welcome, Taylor seemed determined to make an issue about how welcome small donations could be.

ALL ADDS UP

"They seemed to be ashamed to offer a dollar. Gee, I wish we could get the point across that they shouldn't feel that way. We'll take anything . . . a dollar . . . 50 cents . . . anything . . .

"It all adds up . . ."

Donations to the fund may be mailed or taken at the Gorge Hotel, Ingraham Hotel, Imperial Esso Centre, Radio CFAX, Canada Trust or Bell's Men's Wear.

Three Share Triple Hopes In Net Finale

Three players started out the day with triple hopes, but no more than two could achieve the sweep as the Victoria Racquet Club's tennis tournament headed for a windup.

The sweep hopes were held by Rober Skillings, Sally Wood and Ruth Trelawnly.

Skillings, third-seeded, qualified for men's singles final Friday by defeating second-ranked Marty Taylor 10-8, 8-6. He was to face top-seeded Ernie Cockayne, who defeated veteran Ted Smuthe 6-1, 6-2, in the other semi-final.

Skillings also teamed up with his brother Pat to move into the men's doubles final against Cockayne and Taylor, and with Mrs. Trelawny in the mixed against the Wood-Smythe pairing.

Mrs. Wood and Wendy Cuppage downed Brenda Cunningham and Sandra Moss 6-4, 6-1, to reach the women's doubles final against Mrs. Trelawny and Vivien Davies.

Mrs. Trelawny and Mrs. Wood also are the women's singles finalists.

Views, Tyees On Right Foot

Mount View Hornets and Victoria Tyees, the "top dogs" last season, launched their 1970-71 High School Senior Boy's Soccer League on the right foot while Reynolds came along Friday to fashion the first upset.

Last season's playoff champs, Hornets collected two-goal performances from Doug Marshall and Bob Bolitho to ring up a 4-1 victory over Oak Bay.

Oak Bay, down 3-0 at the half, got its only goal when Danny Lomas connected on a penalty kick.

Tyees, defending league champions, flashed early power in an impressive 7-0 romp over Mt. Douglas. Stu Taylor sparked Victoria's attack with three goals while Garnet Moen (2), Don Rainier and John Roodbol added the others.

Victoria led 2-0 at the half.

CLAREMONT UPSET

Reynolds upset Claremont 3-1 as Mike Finlayson scored three times. The Cees, who finished in a tie for second last season, got their only goal from Brett Smyth early in the second half.

In a fourth game Friday, played under the lights at Royal Athletic Park, Esquimalt blew a 3-0 advantage before squeezing past Belmont 4-3.

The league's eight teams will play a 14-game schedule.

The playoff for the B.C. championship will be decided under a new format this year. In past years, the provincial finalists wese decided after advancing through zone and district eliminations.

This year, an eight-team B.C. tournament will be staged in Victoria. The eight zone representatives will be divided into two divisions who will play a round-robin semi-final series. Survivors step into the final.

Gretel Appeal Denied; Fifth Race Postponed

BULLETIN

Today's scheduled fifth race was cancelled at noon because of dense fog and lack of wind and rescheduled for Monday.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Gretel II met Intrepid, the United States defender, in the fifth America's Cup race today and it could be curtains for the Aussie challengers following a long night of wrangling over a race she won, then lost, almost a week ago.

What had seemed to be a 3-1 American lead in the best-of-seven series was thrown into turmoil Friday when the Aussies decided to reopen the disqualification of Gretel II following a collision in the second race last Sunday.

The New York Yacht Club race committee, after pondering the appeal all evening aboard Incredible, the committee boat, ruled that its original decision would stand.

But it was not until well after midnight that the NYCC committee notified Sir Frank Packer, head of the Aussie syndicate, that the Australian's case had again been denied.

OVERSHADOWS RACE

The uproar overshadowed fifth race which would keep the cup in America if Intrepid wins.

Southwest winds of 10-15 knots were forecast, the type of breeze in which Intrepid and her skipper, Bill Ficker, took in their sailing triumphs. But a heavy fog lay on Newport overnight and fog has forced cancellation of one race already in this uproariuous contest.

Light winds washed out another.

Protests have been a dime a dozen in this series which has seen a man fall overboard, a scare from a mistakenly-identified floating mine and a bee sting that caused an Intrepid crewmen to be rushed ashore by helicopter.

There has also been some racing in which Gretel II has proven herself, if not the best challenger ever, then the best since Endeavour from Britain 36 years ago.

Lee, Orville Miss Cut; Winless Pros Set Pace

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Australian Bob Stanton and Harry Toscano of the United States, a pair of young golfers winless on the pro tour, fired even-par 70s Friday to tie for the halfway lead at 136 in the $60,000 Green Island open golf tournament.

Scores soared in the second round on the short 6,711-yard par 35-35—70 Green Island Country Club course.

Failing to make the cut for the final two rounds were a pair of former U.S. Open champions, Lee Trevino and Orville Moody. Trevino, with a 75, and Moody, 76, had 148 totals, two shots above the cutoff point.

First-day leader Bert Greene, who opened with a 65, soared to a 74 and stood at 139.

The low round of the day was a four-under 66 by Homero Blancas, who holed a sand wedge shot from 90 yards for an eagle two on the 378-yard 12th. He also had a 139 total.

Chris Blocker shot a 69 and stood alone in second place at 137, one shot behind the leaders.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver shot a 71 Friday for a two-round total of 144. Ken Kern of Toronto had a 74 for a 145 total.

Among those to miss the cutoff were Gary Bowerman of Toronto who shot a 71 Friday for a 147 total and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg who had a 74 for a 149 total.

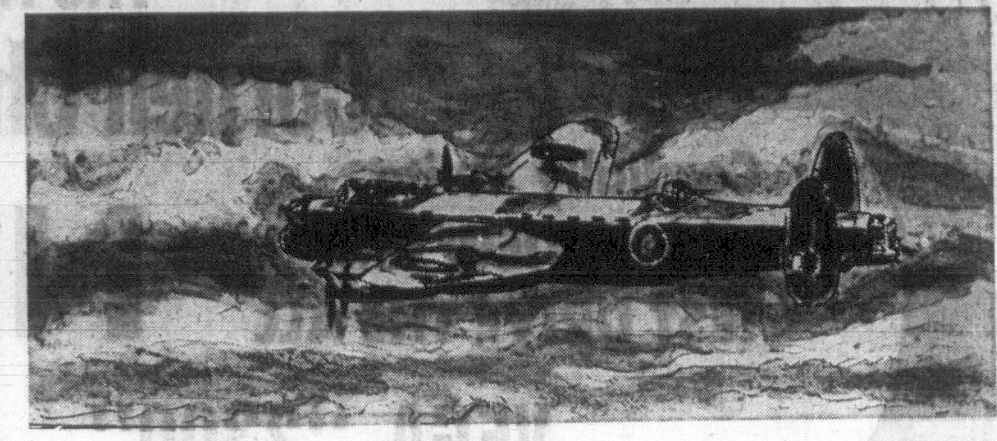
The War Novel Is Alive And Flourishing in U.K.



By JOHN SLINGER

Oh what a splendid war it was, the Second World one. For the first time middle and lower-class types were right there with the Orders Group planning a pincers movement or in the cockpit taking evasive action over Cologne or on the bridge ringing full emergency ahead to dodge a torpedo.

More important, when the Second War was over, fiction was no longer the preserve of the leisure class.

BOMBER, by Len Deighton. Clarke Irwin. $6.95.

A FLOCK OF SHIPS, by Brian Callison. Collins. $5.95.

And, with a characteristic lack of decorum, the Americans flooded us with The Big War Novel: The Naked And The Dead (Mailer introduced "fug" to the language), From Here To Eternity, Battle Cry, The Young Lions and others, all of which made marvellous, sappy Hollywood, none of which are re-readable. (How Burt Lancaster spent His war; How Marlon Brando spent His; How Tab Hunter spent His. Honest. Tab Hunter.)

There was one fluke. Out of the flood came Herman Wouk with the Caine Mutiny. The only good novel, it forced a revolution and resolution of personalities in conflict.

That was before 1961, of course, when Joseph Heller came out with Catch-22. Wouk had already seen the irony—the guys on your side are as likely to kill you as the guys on theirs—but Heller was funnier, hipper. Then last year Kurt Vonnegut Jr. said the same thing again in Slaughterhouse Five.

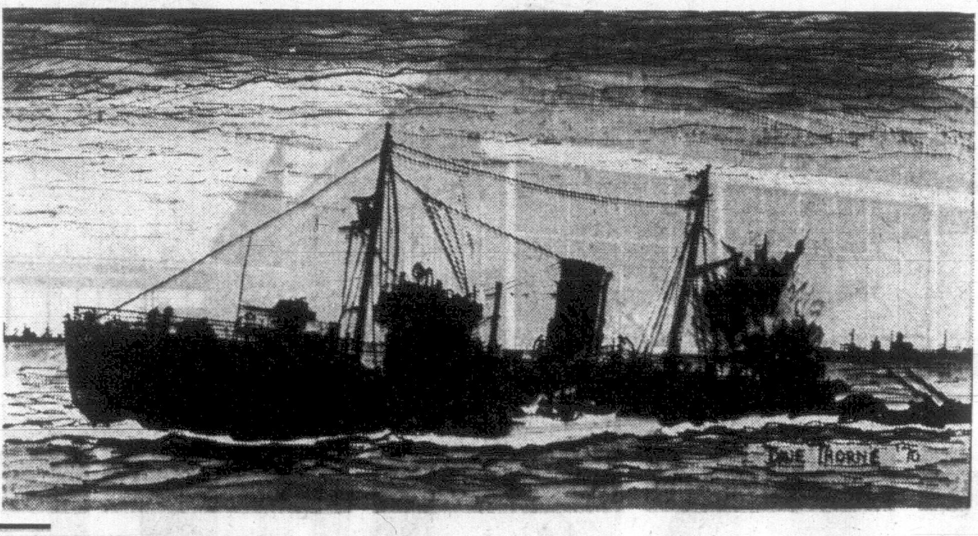
Only those three Americans seem to raise significant, universal questions about war; only those three dare suggest that, in the Big Picture, war is despicable, that bravery, loyalty and patriotism are often little more than neuroses.

The British largely avoided Significant War Fiction. Remember, The Great Escape was a true story told by Paul Brickhill. He was there and in that kind of league it is tough to compete. One who did was Evelyn Waugh. He caught the irony but the Guy Marchbank wandering through his trilogy is actually Waugh himself, an old man trying to fight a young man's war.

No, the British excelled at the Little War Novel. There were Alistair MacLean and Hammond Innes and aging C. S. Forrester coming through with thrillers. Jack Hawkins could play the lead in every book they wrote and the ghost of Hornblower, in duffel coat and tin hat, fitted well on the Murmansk Run, sipping cocoa from an enamel cup.

All this by way of telling about two new British novels—an attempt, and a fairly successful one at Significant War Fiction (Bomber by Len Deighton)—and a carrying on of the thriller tradition, in fine style (A Flock of ships by Brian Callison).

The Callison first and briefly. Three ships head out of Liverpool in convoy with a corvette making a high speed run with banknotes and secret orders to Australia. One by one, with a growing eerie horror, they are knocked off by the Germans and, as told with some wit and considerable uneasiness by one of the transport's Chief Officers, there is an uncanny feeling that the Germans have choreographed the whole thing. And the flock of ships, like sheep, are dumb prey. It is actually a mystery story.



Callison, with his first novel of war at sea, takes at last a small spot beside the writers of the line (a little trivia: the Chief Officer sucks a hollow tooth like a gunner who was dwelt upon by Forrester in The Ship; there is a passing reference to the abandoned Mary Deare of Innes' invention and a jacket blurb says the book recalls MacLean's HMS Ulysses. Voila.) Great prickly fun.

Deighton is something else again. I believe he originally began writing about cooking for a British newspaper to finance his other effort: spy novels. Funeral In Berlin, The Ipcress File and Billion Dollar Brain were made into films along the lines of Ian Fleming's James Bond books.

Unlike Fleming, whose Bond improved considerably on the screen, Deighton's spy suffered. In the movies they named the spy Harry Palmer — actually he had no name, was aging, was no hell as a lover and was overweight. He was more like John Le Carre's Spy Who Came In From The Cold. We were no better and no worse than Them. Well, sometimes We were worse.

Deighton was a glib master of the sardonic and realized there was more intrigue at Whitehall then out on the Cold War front.

His people were too confused and his plots too complex to suffer adequate mass treatment. Bomber is a change for him.

It must be compared with Catch-22 and Slaughterhouse Five because it says that while the Allies were fighting for a principle against an Arch Villain, the fodder for the bombs was innocent. So innocent. And oh, so helpless.

But while the discussion, or at least the writer's approach to the war, follows the intellectual aproaches of Vonnegut and Heller, the comparison must also be made with Wouk because, rather than symbols, Deighton forces real people upon us.

He combines an incredible amount of finely-researched detail (a reader is weary when he is finished because he personally has had to fly a Lancaster on a bombing mission, battle it with a JU88 night fighter, plot the defence of the Ruhr and suffer total and vivid destruction — this last by complete error — in the bombing raid) with the jarring mixing of all sides into the narrative at each major dramatic moment.

It is harrowing and frightening. It is as terrifying as Yossarian being bombed by his own planes, as helpless-feeling as Vonnegut in the Dresden firestorm, as absurd as what the hurricane did to USS Caine and her men.

Deighton's rage is magnificent and, as with Heller and Vonnegut, aimed at the madness on both sides. His German shopgirls die with as little dignity and as much agony from the British phosphorus bombs as do the young men, the children really, who fly and are incinerated in the exploding Lancasters.

Books

Churchill Rhetoric Revived And It Still Has Relevance

By HARRY K. VIPOND

First published in 1909, this book is a distillation of a series of brilliant speeches made by Winston Churchill during the important and bitter general election campaign which terminated in January, 1910.

When the book was hurriedly published only one cheap (shilling) edition was printed and it sold like hot cakes. The publishers, and evidently Churchill, considered that one printing was sufficient for the Liberal party's purpose.

THE PEOPLE'S RIGHTS, by Winston Churchill. Clarke Irwin. $6.

Sixty years later in 1970 the publishing house of Jonathan Cape decided to reprint "The People's Rights" word for word. This may seem to have been an unusual decision since the political issues of 1909 could scarcely be of great interest to the reading public of 1970.

However, there was one very important issue of 1909 that even today has not been fully resolved: the complete reformation of the House of Lords. Speculatively speaking, Cape may well have felt that resurrecting the main issue of the 1910 general election — the Lords — for the general election year of 1970, would not be untimely.

In an excellent introduction by Cameron Hazelhurst the background for Churchill's early political ideas is clearly set out. That Churchill aimed, from the beginning of his political life, at becoming a dedicated and effective reformer is indicated by Hazelhurst when he recalls Churchill's words to a cousin in 1899:

"The improvement of the British breed is my political aim in life."

That he achieved this high purpose to a marked degree is impossible to deny.

In 1906 the Liberal party, under the leadership of Herbert Asquith, was successful at the polls and he was invited to form a government. In his cabinet was the redoubtable David Lloyd George as Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the equally redoubtable (and younger: aged 34) Winston S. Churchill as President of the Board of Trade (a post comparable to our Minister of Trade and Commerce).

Son of Peer

Both these men—throughout their political lives — were avowed and radical reformers. Among the many needed reforms, they and others on the government bench (including the Prime Minister) were determined to bring about a drastic reform of the House of Lords by the evolutionary rather than the revolutionary process. (Ironically, a great many of the drastic changes applicable to the Lords have been brought about by Labour governments, especially after the Labour victory of 1945.)

Churchill delivered the six speeches which comprise this book in various towns of his constituency in Lancashire. His audience was for the most part mill hands and other working people. He carefully explained and discussed the various bills which the House of Lords, with its alleged superior intellect, had rejected during the past four years of Parliament.

Churchill claimed that the Lords, with its overwhelming Conservative majority, never missed an opportunity to harass a Liberal government. Not once since 1832, said Churchill, had the Lords even frowned on, let alone rejected, a Conservative Bill or Resolution.

The House of Lords, apart from frequently rejecting the Commons' proposed legislation, had additionally just committed the unpardonable and unprecedented offence in over three centuries: namely, the rejection of the 1909 budget which the chancellor of the exchequer had brought down covering the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1910.

For more than three hundred years the Lords had refrained from tinkering and tampering with the budget or any other money bill. Thus, this incredible action by the Lords brought on the general election of 1910 one year earlier than required.

Avowed Reformers

In fact, the main issue of the election was whether or not the House of Lords had the right to take this action: namely, to reject a budget passed by the Commons.

Thundered the indignant Churchill, the son of a peer and the grandson of a duke: "Are six hundred hereditary dukes, peers, earls and barons to rule six million voters and their families?" — "Why should six hundred titled persons govern us and why should their children govern our children forever?"

From such utterances, Churchill leads the reader to suspect that the Lords object of the budget because of an increase in income tax (twopence in the pound) and a new tax on idle land. The budgeted deficit of sixteen million pounds was largely due to the necessity of laying down two new dreadnoughts. The Lords were of the opinion that the tax on tea and meat should be increased and new taxes levied on corn (bread). Needless to say, a majority of six million voters thought otherwise and returned the Liberals to power.

In 1911, therefore, the Asquith Government began to bring about reformation of the House of Lords but it has taken 60 years to bring that assembly to its present condition — a mere shell of its former self.

A Teilhard Introduction

By HILARY BUTLER

The best service the Roman Catholic Church did for Teilhard de Chardin was to prohibit the publication of his works during his lifetime. Paradoxically, this piece of obscurantism, so scandalous the moment it became public knowledge, served to spotlight his thinking when, after his death in 1955, his writings one by one began to see the light of day.

The Teilhard de Chardin industry would surely never have boomed as it has if that great thinker's lucubrations had seeped at a normal speed into the twentieth century consciousness. For more than a decade books by, and about, de Chardin have flooded from the press, the more exciting because they had been forbidden fruit, and the more acceptable, too, because the mind of the West in the 1960s was more ready for, and amenable to, his highly original insights.

LET ME EXPLAIN, by Pierre Teilhard de Chardin. Collins. $5.95.

During the First World War, when he began to write, and in the twenties, few even of the intelligentsia would have been susceptible to the fascination of de Chardin's theories, and his rather psychedelic literary style would not have suited their taste.

The depression and the Second World War engendered a new depth and seriousness among thinking people, a new willingness to explore new avenues. The need to relate man's increasingly dangerous knowledge to the inner spirit by which alone man can hope to survive led to a greatly increased public interest in religion—or at least an increased interest in theological solutions to the problems of human survival.

By the sixties religious paperbacks had reached an all-time peak; and, of course, a lot of rubbish enjoyed a free ride on the band (of hope) wagon. In the early days of the paperback a rather superior friend of mine referred to their readers as "Penguin-minded." No doubt many readers of the 1960's spate of religious paperbacks fell into this category. Teilhard de Chardin's works are not of this ilk.

They tower above the penguins like snowclad mountains gleaming in the sun. But they are warm—warm with a deep respect and love for mankind.

In Harmony

Man, de Chardin maintains, is the spearpoint of an evolutionary drive whose origins can be traced to the simplest elements of matter and whose destination is to be gathered up into a community of separate but lovingly united souls in unison with Christ.

The insights of science and the insights of theology converge to a point (Omega Point) in the future when the psychophysical totality of the universe will have reached its goal in beatific harmony with the Creator God.

But while this point of convergence is, in point of time, ahead, it is also an operative factor, and always has been, in the here and now—a sort of cosmic magnet drawing all things together into a final unity.

"Let Me Explain" is a very cleverly put-together book. It consists almost entirely of de Chardin's own words extracted from his published and (as yet) unpublished writings, and arranged, by Dr. Jean-Pierre Demoulin, in a logical order to present a synopis of the whole gamut of his scientific and mystical thought.

Vague Grasp

There must be many who have a smattering of knowledge about de Chardin; they have read, perhaps, "The Phenomenon of Man," or maybe "Le Milieu Divin," and have a more or less vague grasp of his major concepts, but they have failed to keep up with the dozen or more other works of his that are now in print.

The present volume is a successful attempt to let de Chardin himself explain his own system (if that is the right word). It is a brilliant piece of scissors-and-paste work, and is likely to become a standard introduction for all serious students of this great seminal thinker.

But its very success constitutes a danger—the danger that a reader, having digested this volume, will penguin-mindedly assume that he now knows all that needs to be known about Teilhard de Chardin.

This would be a sad error. The vast mass of his detailed evidence and argument is inevitably missing from this brief synopsis.

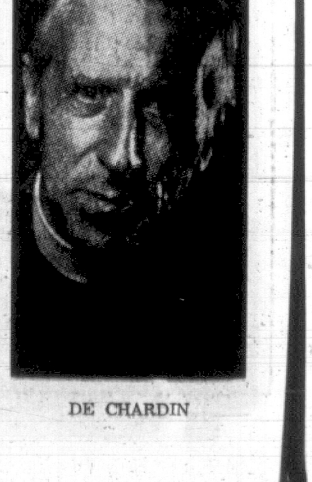
Purifies Mind

Moreover, there is a poetry, and emotional intensity, in de Chardin's writings that such truncated extracts as are strung together here cannot communicate. Yet his poetry is truly integral to his thought and an essential ingredient in his persuasiveness—and this, not because his poetry seduces the mind of the reader, but because it purifies and unblinkers it.

Whatever changing intellectual whims may have in store for Teilhard de Chardin's reputation, whether praise or opprobrium or oblivion, one thing is certain: he fashioned a myth in terms of which thinking people of the latter decades of the 20th century have been able to look at the universe with a sense that it is indeed a universe.

The universe is not a hodgepodge of unrelated items, but an environment in which a rational species can live and move and have its being in purposeful fulfilment.

This little book will serve him well, for it will make him more readily intelligible. The glossary of his neologisms will be a godsend to all who have trouble with his vocabulary. Buy it.



DE CHARDIN

Canadians in Kenya

By BEATRICE CARROLL

When Canadian External Aid invited Norman and Ruth Best to put in a two-year stint in Kenya, where Norman would participate in a team program to upgrade local teachers, no better ambassadors for Canada could have been found.

Home was Hamilton, where Norman was a master at Hamilton Teachers College, and their African posting was Nairobi and the Kenyatta College campus. This bright little book is an account of their experiences.

STRAWBERRIES ALL YEAR ROUND, by Ruth Showell Best. McClelland and Stewart. $6.95.

They had been warned about "cultural shock," and there were many, including fly-infested meat, spitting cobras, and large baboons attempting to pry open the windows of their car, but they never indulged in the "it's so much better back home" syndrome.

The Bests and their three young children were receptive and deeply attracted to a land of superlative beauty: they made frequent explorations over wild and thrilling roads, and they made many friends outside the Canadian compound, where they were impressed with a people of warmth and dignity.

Of course they were distressed by the poverty on all sides. In the "model" schoolrooms, Norman Best said, the standard would compare to a poor rural Ontario school of several decades ago, and in many others one tattered and treasured textbook was shared by a whole class.

Some teachers of long standing had had little formal education, and for many children the yearly school fee of $10 was prohibitive, understandable when often the father of a large family earned only $12 a month.

In the African clinic where Mrs. Best, a nurse, worked as a volunteer, there was another aspect of poverty, combined with the collision of modern medicine and tribal customs. She mastered a "stammering Swahili," and went to work on children with burns, yaws, description-defying vitamin deficiencies — many diseases that she knew of only from textbooks.

"Life was never meant to be fair," a Nairobi doctor told her, but often she felt that the gap between the rich and the poor countries was too great.

However, "Strawberries All Year Round" is no sociological treatise, but an account of the daily life of a young, perceptive Canadian couple in a new and strange environment, told with vivacity, humor and good will.

Mrs. Best's lively encounters with their servant, Gerrard, her struggles with the telephone system — sometimes it took two hours to place a call to Nairobi twelve miles away — and shopping expeditions where she found that her Canadian pronounciation of "butter" was unintelligible, and she had to swallow national pride and say "buttah" a l'Anglaise, all make for light reading.

JAPANESE 'MON'

By GORDON RICE

This is very much a work for specialists; design students and collectors. The introduction is by the well-known writer on Japanese art, J. Hillier, whose summary is articulate and interesting, and quite brief. It has to be, as the text is printed in five languages, including Japanese!

JAPANESE EMBLEMS AND DESIGNS, edited by Walter Amstutz. University of Toronto Press. $15.

The book contains some 900 schematic drawings of (mainly) a special branch of the Japanese arts, the emblems or crests known as mon. These are self-contained, generally circular designs, very much like the shoulder insignia used on Western uniforms, only in Japan such badges or emblems gained much wider circulation. They were widely used in fabric design, and raised to an art form in themselves.

It is fascinating to see how birds, plants, characters, tools, even horses and centipedes, were formed by these ingenious designers into circular shapes which become clearly emblematic, and sometimes highly abstract.

London Offers Feast for Theatre-Goer

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

One of the wise sayings directed at me in my childhood warned of the dangers of surfeit in having too much of a good thing.

It was one precept I continued to believe to be pretty generally true until, on my very first night in London, I crossed the threshold of the Theatre Royal Haymarket.

Four weeks and eight theatre nights later I knew that there was one good thing for which no surfeit seemed likely.

Home again there remains the solid conviction that if I were lucky enough to spend a year in England, with the exception of weekends for sleep and forays to Covent Garden, the Royal Festival Hall and the Queen Elizabeth Hall for concerts, I would still be spending every available night in avid attendance at some play.

In the heartland of what is internationally acknowledged as the world's finest in English speaking theatre, there is simply no such thing as "too much."

★

The variety to begin with, is infinite. From the Hippodrome where you could have Phillis Diller with dinner to the music hall of a past era where you quaffed beer and buns along with robust renderings of Let's All Go Down the Strand.

From the strident over-stated bawdiness of the '70s to the more lightly handled bawdiness of other times as represented, let us say, in Canterbury Tales.

Or puzzle your way through Pinter's latest one night and on the next be unspeakably moved and absorbed by Gielgud and Richardson or by the paranoic vision of a would-be priest.

With only 2½ weeks in London — 1½ weeks of my total time was spent with relatives outside the city — I teased my appetite with the daily press listings of entertainment; choosing while reluctantly admitting that I couldn't possibly see all that beckoned.

Especially tantalizing was the fact that only six days after I had to leave for home, Canterbury Cathedral was to start a series of performances of T. S. Eliot's great drama about St. Thomas Beckett within the edifice which was the actual scene of his murder in the 12th century.

Anyone who recalls the production here in Christ Church Cathedral will know how difficult it was for me to turn my back on that event.

And then there were the announcements of special previews that were to introduce the new season — Terence Rattigan's Bequest to the Nation and the National Theatre's new repertory amongst others.

It was totally impossible to get tickets for the Kirov Ballet — nearly at the end of its run by the time we arrived — Maggie Smith's Hedda Gabler and O Calcutta or Hair, neither of which were on my preferred list.

But by a combination of luck and bribery I did manage to tangle two good seats for the Cambridge Theatre where the National Theatre was playing George Farquhar's The Beaux' Stratagem with Maggie Smith, who is currently the talk of London.

This vivacious restoration comedy which provided a model for both Goldsmith and Sheridan, presented Miss Smith with a golden opportunity for sheer virtuosity.

It was an opportunity she embraced with a zest and panache that surrounded her entire performance with a visible radiation.

Her tall, lissome body, her extraordinarily expressive hands, her ever so slightly husky voice, were uniformly the most supple of instruments by which she expressed and explored the injured wife, the intelligent schemer, the delicate coquette.

This was at the same time a supremely elegant stylish and perfectly balanced comedy performance by an actress whose talent has blossomed richly since her debated Desdemona in Olivier's screen version of "Othello."

I would gladly have paid twice the ticket amount to have seen and compared her Hedda Gabler which, according to reports, was a highly individual interpretation, chill and remote.

While Maggie Smith's Mrs. Sullen was the inescapable focus of the production, there were superlative performances throughout the cast, especially so in the case of Sheila Reid who had played Bianca in Othello and on the part of the invisible stage crew.

Flown scenery and perambulating furnishing was part of the action, so much so that is seemed alive in cooperating with the actors to achieve comedy timing that was absolutely dead-on.

Generally, one of the admirable things I found in the London theatres was the high level uniformity of performance standard, even where such notables as Alec McCowen headed the cast.

It made one realize what a reservoir of hugely talented and finely trained actors of all ages England contains.

★

In the course of a lunchtime conversation, a visitor remarked that with Olivier, Richardson and Gielgud all beginning to show the effects of age, one wondered where the next "greats" would be found.

"Well, there are only so many outstanding classical roles," was the reply from a year-round London theatregoer. "So long as the Oliviers and Richardsons are here those roles fall to them. But, believe me, their heirs are already on the scene.

"You'll see that it will be a kind of 'The king is sead, long live the king,' when the time comes."

I didn't find that difficult to believe. Still, kings though they may be, they will not — can not and should not — be the same kings.

And after the profoundly moving experience of watching Ralph Richardson and John Gielgud perform the ultimate of actors' counterpoint in a poignant tragicomedy called Home, I can't escape the feeling that it is a pity such people ever have to leave the stage.

Maynard Ferguson Likes British Way

By LEWIS LEVENDEL

LONDON — Canadian band leader-trumpeter Maynard Ferguson has found contentment in the English style of life after taking LSD with Timothy Leary in New York and mediating with the Maharishi in India.

The 42-year-old native of Montreal has been a popular, internationally known jazz performer ever since his high-note style was featured with the Stan Kenton orchestra in the early 1950s.

In an interview in a London jazz club before a performance with his British band, the ebullient, fast-talking trumpter told how he got invollved with Leary and the Maharishi, an Oriental guru, or teacher, who has made a good business out of Western entertainment figures.

In 1967, "after playing Maria for about the 70th time," he realized he was suffering "from man's greatest illness—boredom." With his wife and five children, he went to live with Leary, so-called "high priest" of LSD, on an estate outside New York City.

Shortly after they left their 36-room Riverdale, N.Y., home, it burned to the ground. But the Fergusons already had ended "the materialistic phase" of their lives.

Although he emphasized that he no longer uses drugs and regards them as "very unhip," he explained why he got involved with them and Leary.

"At the time, Tim Leary was a highly respected professor of environmental psychology at Harvard University. When a creative person hears the message 'Expand your consciousness,' he's bound to react, particularly if he's in a spiritual trough.

"There were nine of us in the original group with Tim, all living together in a large house in its own grounds. We chopped wood, lived on a macro-biotic diet, and listened to Indian music and read Indian philosophy.

"We tried LSD and all other hallucinogenic drugs and the Indian books we read confirmed our experience for us."

In 1968, the Fergusons went to India to the Risha Valley school near Madras. The children have since stayed at the school for periods of six months to a year.

Today, the band leader and his wife practise various forms of meditation including "the yoga of experiencing the light and energy that is in everything until you feel part of the universe."

"I've learned to try and leave good where I find good; to be happy with myself, not to let yesterday or tomorrow hang me up. Forget about shame, blame and guilt.

"This doesn' mean I've stopped caring or trying, but there is a great difference between trying and striving to be 'best'. I don't challenge life any more, get into a hassle because I'm a big star and a promoter hasn't asked me to appear at his concert."

In 1968 Ferguson brought his family to Britain, "where there is less nervous tension than in America."

It did not take long before the trumpeter organized a band of young British musicians which toured the country and the Continent and appeared on television.

With no false modesty, the cherubic, baby-faced Canadian with greying hair asserted that he has brought the British band scene back to life.

He enjoys the pace as a band leader in Britain compared to the U.S. He does not play as often and there is less travelling involved because of the size of the country.

"Here I don't have to be a slave to 17 musicians and their families as I was in the U.S."

In the future for Ferguson are tours of Sweden, East and West Germany and Czechoslovakia.

He still remains a popular international jazz figure. During the interview, female fans from Australia and Israel interrupted to ask him when he was coming to their countries.

Playing a repertoire of contemporary tunes interwoven with updated arrangements of standards such as Take the A Train, the 14-piece band was enthusiastically received by an audience predominantly of young people.

Dressed in a yellow sports shirt and flaring trousers, Ferguson soloed on both trumpet and valve trombone. He also plugged his first record album with his British band and his television special, The World of Maynard Ferguson.

PIANO TRAVELS IN OWN TRUCK

Anton Kuerti's 9½-foot Busendorfer eight-octave concert grand piano came out of storage in Victoria Thursday and was put into the tuner's loving care to ready it for performance Sunday.

The beautiful instrument travels wherever possible with the Viennese-born pianist, conveyed in a small custom-built truck.

Kuerti is to play all five of the Beethoven Concertos in two pairs of concerts with Victoria Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Laszlo Gati.

The first pair, this Sunday and Monday, will feature Concertos Nos. 2, 3 and 4. At the second, Oct. 4 and 5, No. 1 and No. 5 — the Emperor — will be performed.

With the Beethoven overtures, Prometheus and Coriolanus, the concerts provide a splendid opening for the Beethoven bicentenary in the triple jubilee season of Victoria Symphony.

Choice of piano virtuoso Kuerti is also fortuitous as a celebration of the orchestra's 30th anniversary. The first soloist to perform with the ensemble in its early days was also a pianist, Victoria's Mrs. Jay Durand who at that time was concertizing professionally as Gertrude Huntley Green.

Kuerti graduated with a Bachelor of Music degree from the Cleveland Institute at the age of 18 and subsequently studied with Rudolf Serkin.

He has played with major United States and Canadian orchestras and under the batons of much noted conductors as Sir Adrian Boult, Zubin Mehta, Eugene Ormandy, Steinberg and Szell.

In Europe he has toured 16 countries, played at major festivals and with orchestras in Berlin, Brussells, Krakow, Lisbon and London.

Not Thinking Of Retiring

LONDON (AP) — "People have been saying I'm retiring for the last 24 years," Dame Margot Fonteyn said. "But I have never said I am thinking of retiring."

Dame Margot, 51, was commenting on reports that she will bow out as ballet partner of Rudolf Nureyev in favor of Natalia Makarova, who recently defected from Leningrad's Kirov Ballet.

Nureyev and Dame Margot have formed one of the world's top dance teams since he defected from the same ballet company in Paris, in 1961.

Dame Margot leaves London for the United States this weekend and is scheduled to dance in Washington—without Nureyev.

Nureyev already has called reports that Miss Makarova will take over Dame Margot's spot "absolute nonsense."

'Timing Secret of Comedy And It Can't Be Taught'

By AUDREY JOHNSON

"The fact of the matter is that acting is essentially something you can't be taught.

"Concentration, imagination — a sense of timing. These are the essentials within and beyond technique that can't be learned in any school."

Edwin Stephenson, Toronto-based actor, director and one time student of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London, is definite on that score.

"You've either got it or you have not. Especially timing, which accounts for about three quarters of an actor's success in comedy. It's an inherent thing — a personal rhythm."

At the moment comedy looms large in Stephenson's life. He is in Victoria for three months as Bastion Theatre's guest director of two comedies.

And in one Neil Simon's — The Star Spangled Girl — he is also playing a lead role. The play is due to open at McPherson Playhouse, Wednesday.

Also in the cast is Bruce Gray, a young Canadian actor with whom Stephenson has worked in Toronto.

After two weeks for a rest-cure — probably in Los Angles — Stephenson will get back to his director's chair to pilot the Bastion production of Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit.

He started directing about three years ago when he formed his own professional company for summer repertory season just outside Toronto. He first met Peter Mannering at the Manitoba Theatre Centre when Mannering directed him in a touring show.

"It's absolute murder," he comments, "directing a play like Star Spangled Girl and playing in it as well. But of course I have had an excellent stand-in in John Heath who will take the role when the play goes on tour."

"Playing comedy is difficult at the best of times. To begin with you have to have three eyes — one on your own thoughts and relationship to the actor sharing the scene; one on the audience's line-by-line reaction, and one on how you are getting on with the character as a whole.

"You get a play set in rehearsal but performances fluctuate — you can be much better one night than another.

First Night Nerves

"If you're nervous on the first night, which every actor is, timing goes a bit astray. But you recover probably within a page of dialogue and get back into shape again."

He agrees that the differences in oneself probably account for the differences in audience reaction. For instance, no laughs one night in a place where you got a belly laugh the night before.

"It drives you insane. You've got to think it out — you ask yourself what did I do wrong?"

The RTC Canadian content ruling will make things better for Canadian actors in some places, notably in Toronto, Stephenson says. But a real boost would be the development of a Canadian film industry.

Veteod By Gov't

It's difficult to understand some government decisions, he feels. For example the American company that produced Dr. Zhivago wanted to make it on the Canadian prairies.

"It not only would have given employment to all sorts of people but would have concentrated attention on the fact that we have everything in this country, scenically. But the government said absolutely no, so the picture was made in Spain."

Stephenson was recently asked what he thought of current trends in movies.

"I feel that the people get what they want," he says. "Films, like the stage, only reflect the time. We don't always like it when we get it — but that's another thing."

Won't Get Rich

Stephenson admits that life isn't easy for the actor in Canada. But then it isn't the best paid profession anywhere in the English-speaking world.

He worked in repertory in England for a season before returning to Canada where he has been keeping himself busy and happy — if not wealthy — ever since.

"George Bernard Shaw — I believe it was — said a marvelous thing: 'Happy is the man who can make his living from his hobby.' It's so true. You couldn't reasonably wish for anything more."

NEWCOMERS at Bastion Theatre are, left to right, Edwin Stephenson, actress-designer Judy Radu and Bruce Gray. Stephenson, who is directing Star-Spangled Girl and Blithe Spirit, and actor Gray are visiting from Toronto. Judy has joined Bastion's staff.

Jimmie... ah... Stewart As Talkative as Ever

By GEOFFREY MOORHOUSE
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — It has been a journalistic commonplace, this past 20 years, to remark that James Stewart in the flesh is not one flicker of a frame different from James Stewart on the cinema screen.

The voice is as bumbling slow as ever it was in "Harvey." The hand rubs the chin lost for words like it did from one end of "Winchester '73" to the other. The eyes are as baffled faint as they made Lindbergh's in "Spirit of St. Louis." And all this is true; the collective stigmata of the old Hollywood heroes.

STEWART
. . . um

He was recently passed through London from an African safari, wearing a toupee to keep the draught out and a Hemingway beard for his next movie.

When you have been where he has been for as long as he has been there, it means that you are several things besides an apparently gentle and rather puzzled guy.

It means, for a start, that you are quite incredibly inarticulate about your approach to your . . . ah . . . your work. Take "Spirit of St. Louis," in which Stewart played the first man to solo the Atlantic. He met Charles Lindbergh just once before making that film, over dinner.

"And . . . um . . . I suddenly realized I had no questions to ask him." Strokes chin. Lapses into silence. He watched a lot of Lindbergh on newsreels. He read everything Lindbergh had written "but it didn't give me any help." Another silence and then, as though this was the secret of characterization: "He was a hero of mine since his flight."

James Stewart is a bit worried about the state of the film industry, since it was crammed with men like him and Cooper. At first he says: "There's not enough variety, too much sameness—not in any particular subject matter, but in the over-all approach." After some poking and prodding he supposes he means that it's become too much anti-heroic.

Yeah, he guesses that's what it is. Take "Midnight Cowboy," which was beautifully acted, a work of art, having its place in motion picture history, but there you were, the trend had been carried too far. James Stewart believes the medium can take "Midnight Cowboy" and Walt Disney and everything in between.

What, then, are the three films he's most enjoyed watching in the past year? He ponders that question as though it were the most outlandish he could possibly have been asked. He's not being temperamental, not trying to avoid praising someone else's work; he's too nice for that. But he's genuine racking his brains to remember what he has seen in a year.

He strokes his beard and flexes his chin heroically again. "You'll have to name some films," he says. What about "Butch Cassidy"? Oh, yeah, that was marvellous and he grins at a memory from it (can it be of Newman kicking an oaf in the slats?) Silence again, and then the first real animation in three-quarters of an hour of halting vaguery.

"Oh, 'Patton'," says James Stewart, looking you straight in the eye and chopping with his hand. "Now that was a great film. A marvellous performance from George Scott and very well made. The say that we don't want war films but . . . but here was a man who loved war."

Those two words are the most emphatic uttered yet, tangled in a non sequitur, but carefully spaced to preserve a savor. "Here was a man who loved war and who just laid it straight on the line . . ."

AFRICAN BALLET

Something rare and exciting in ballet comes to McPherson Playhouse Oct. 12.

The African Ballet, which made its last tour of Canada three years ago, but did not come to Victoria, is a national ensemble from Guinea consisting of 50 dancers, singers and musicians.

They will give two performances of their entirely new and authentic program which is drawn from the deep treasure of African folklore, Performance times will be 6 and 9 p.m.

The dances depict the total reality of Africa. They draw their audiences into the very climate of the country, creating extraordinary magic.

Each artist has been chosen because of talent and firm and disciplined training has polished the company to a fine degree of professionalism.

Commented one American critic: "Surely there are no more athletic dancers in the world . . . Body muscles most of us have never heard of (and probably don't have) are put into action . . . It is fierce, proud, and vividly alive."

Tickets for the two performances are on sale now at the McPherson box office.

Sees Career Ending

TORONTO (CP) — Opera singer Anja Silja said Thursday her career will be finished in 10 years—she hopes.

"Singing 30 years is long enough," says Miss Silja, who stars in this season's Canadian Opera Company production of Beethoven's Fidelio.

She began singing in operas 20 years ago, when she was 10, in her native Germany.

She still does her experimenting in Germany, where she is based with the Stuttgart Opera.

She believes that the future of opera will depend upon stage directors.

If they can command the interest and attention of the public, opera will continue to thrive, but if the only attraction is the beautiful music then opera might be better done in concert, she says.

'START THE REVOLUTION'

18th Century Laugh-In

A Film Review

By PETER McNELLY

Insane! Insane! They're mad. The whole lot. Insane!

Yes, start the revolution without them. The alternative is hilarious devastation.

Start the Revolution Without Me — showing at the Coronet Theatre — is an 18th Century Laugh-in. Like its television counterpart, the movie inundates its audience with cannonade of good and bad jokes and puns sandwiched between scenes from the most incredible anti-plot in recent movie-making.

The result is a comic fantasy which reaches some brilliant moments that mostly make up for the corny times when it doesn't quite pop.

For the record, though it hardly matters, Start the Revolution Without Me is what happens when a country doctor mixes the twin babies of a French aristocrat and a peasant.

The sons grow up — more or less — and wind up on opposite sides of the French revolution through an incredible combination of circumstances and sheer dumb luck.

Gene Wilder and Donald Sutherland play the twins on both sides — Phillippe and Pierre, the aristocrat Di Sisi brothers of Corsica, and Claude and Charles Coupe, the peasants.

Both men are funnier than many of their gags; and Wilder, for my money, steals the show. Sutherland is one of Canada's best-known actors today, largely due to his success in M.A.S.H.

He's not quite as resilient here. But he pokes a mean foil in front of a lisp so thick he seems to stumble on it.

Wilder behaves like a demented boar. At times, he seems to veer totally out of control.

But the most subtle comedy comes from Hugh Griffith as Louis XVI, the helpless, cowardly and cuckolded king of France.

He endures the most painful humiliations in a style of subdued self-pity much the same way Bert Lahr used to do, but Griffith is not quite as coy as Lahr.

Instead, he manipulates his punching-bag face to express all sorts of weaknesses.

Unfortunately, the photography is needlessly old-fashioned in a movie which must move fast to extract every ounce of its humor. Most of the time we have to observe the goings on from a flat, familiar style of shooting which relies too much on letting the camera stand still at 90 degrees to the actors while they do all the work.

This is part of the reason why Start the Revolution is not quite as funny as it wants to be. For, a more aggressive approach in the photography would have hidden some of the poorer jokes and slow moments while emphasizing the movie's best points.

This film is obviously a homage to the Marx Brothers and some of the style of Laurel and Hardy. Most people, I think, will like it because so many of its elements — crazy chases, impossible circumstances, baroque scheming and an apparent lack of direction — have become part of the folklore of comedy.

SUTHERLAND

Start the Revolution Without Me is funny and fun, but without its fine acting would have collapsed in confusion. Director Bud Yorkin had his hands on a fine cast and a madcap story. But instead of producing an addition to a great comic tradition, he gave us a mostly classy version of the same old stuff.

Nude Photos Upset Woman

EDMONTON (CP) — Chairman Aleta Vikse of the Alberta Objectionable Publications Board is upset about a magazine containing pictures of nudes that is being sold in Edmonton.

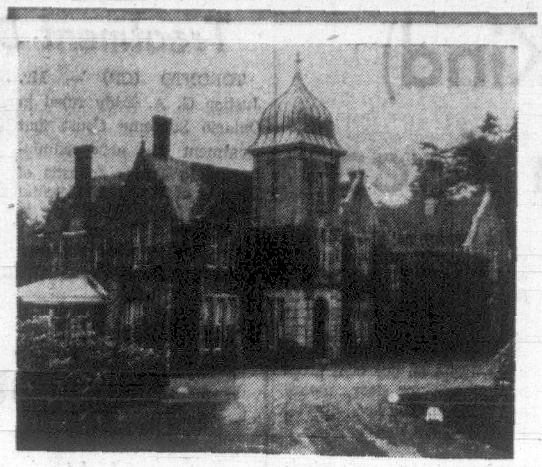
Miss Vikse said Friday she will report to the provincial secretary about the magazine, which has a cellophane-wrapped cover and sells for $2.50 or $3 at at least on public retail outlet. She did not identify the magazine further.

In an interview, she said the "magazines in question are definitey the type of thing the board would not approve of."

Further action will be up to the provincial secretary and the attorney-general's department.

Students Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — Students at the University of British Columbia will be asked to vote Tuesday on whether they want transients from a temporary youth hostel at Canadian Forces Base Jericho to move into the UBC student union building.



'ASHNOLA'

Another Treasure About to Be Lost

By GORDON RICE

I clambered up the narrow backstairs of Craigdarroch Castle with James Nesbitt, president of the Castle Society (short for the Society for the Preservation and Maintenance of Craigdarroch Castle). Downstairs, I'd seen the cleaning and restoration the society had done, making the castle interior a far more classy place than it was when I'd seen it two years ago.

Upstairs, you could see the work to be done if the castle were ever to regain the splendor it must have had at the turn of the century. After the original owners, the Dunsmuir family, vacated the place it was a veterans' hospital, a school board office, and now of late a music conservatory.

It was nice to hear music tinkling and scraping away behind the closed classroom doors. The place has a hominess and life to it which it hasn't known for 60 years.

Unfortunately there are signs of disrepair and misuse, dating how far back no one present could guess. Why would someone cover an elegant oaken stairway or a mahogany fireplace with a coat of dull ivory paint? To make the place more like an office building?

Everywhere on the upper floors you find the crummiest kind of instant partitioning, and the same drab coats of 1940 house paint. It pains you to see it because this is one of the finest, the most gem-like buildings in North America. Visiting experts have told Nesbitt that they place the castle among the foremost of Canada's art treasures.

You should take a look at the first floor if you haven't been there is a while. The wood has been cleaned, new rooms opened to the public, paintings put back where they belong, chandeliers and old furniture installed. The paintings the Dunsmuir family owned reflect the murky opulence of so much painting of that era. The stained glass windows reflect the more sparkling side of that opulence.

Stained glass windows are to be found on all the floors, some of the most dazzling work you can find in this media. The woodworking around the house is even more amazing.

▣

Donations by visitors and local people have made the restoration possible, and of course the interest of the castle society members; it's nice to know somebody cares about saving such a place.

Then we came to talk of a less fortunate place. Robert Dunsmuir, the castle's builder, came here from Scotland in 1851. By 1891 he'd made a fortune and his large family was building houses all over Victoria.

Northing Snowden, who married Dunsmuir's daughter Emily, built her a home they called "Ashnola" (her brother the lieutenant-governor was building, around this time, Hatley Park, now Royal Roads College).

Ashnola, a building of rustic rosy brick with a fine tin-plated tower looking something like a Russian Orthodox church spire, was completed in 1888. Now, in 1970, the provincial government, and the board of directors at Gorge Road Hospital (for the building is now the office wing of this hospital) have seen fit to schedule the demolition of Ashnola as part of an expansion program.

A patient, a member of the hospital board, and I stood inside the building, debating the matter. The ceilings in the rooms off to the side, once decorated with paintings of birds, bees, and honeysuckle, had long since been covered with office paint. Much of the wood in the lobby area where we stood has suffered the same fate, yet the place still has a fine feel to it. You know you're in the kind of place that builders no longer know how to build.

When the patient heard that the place was to come down she said, "Impossible! Outrageous! In Europe they would never tear down a beautiful place like this."

"Well," said the board member sympathetically, "the architects tried to include it in the plans, but they say it just won't work. And we need new bed space, the need is critical and the patients come first."

On this latter we could agree, but it was harder to believe that "everything had been tried" to preserve the building and include it in the expansion.

The building has become quite dilapidated inside; the windows are drafty and leaky, the staff really doesn't enjoy such quarters. But then why should such a fine building have been allwed to decay?

Carelessness, indifference, no doubt, though lack of time and money would be the inevitable plea. We do have time and money, all of us, but not for art, and hence the drab ugliness that cities everywhere have become.

Victoria is going this way too ... "functional," practical architecture, tinny, plastic, and indifferent. It goes up all around us.

I stood outside the building a long time, admiring a phenomenon which might be gone on my next visit. The stone facings, with all the funny turns and twists which the original architects thought of to add charm to the place, all the more beautiful with weathering and age.

I wondered how many people would pause still to look at the care we were once capable of, no gothic cathedral to be sure, but far more graceful and natural than the things we make now. I wonder if anyone will lift a finger to save the building, and if anyone will miss it when it's gone.

It Isn't Funny Anymore So Perelman Is Leaving

NEW YORK — The United States is about to suffer a total loss of one of its least expendable national resources—the humorist S. J. Perelman.

Mr. Perelman has made an apparently irrevocable decision to move to London in October, there to live as a self-exiled American. He will become a "resident alien" with no expectation of returning to the nation in which he has won acclaim as lampoonist laureate.

The 91-acre farm in Bucks County, Pa., that he and his brother-in-law, the late Nathanael West, bought in 1932 has been sold, and its contents will be auctioned. He sails for London on Oct. 21.

★ ★ ★

"The fact that I think it's volcano time in this country is not responsible for the move, though I'm just as appalled as everyone about the conditions," the 66-year-old Perelman said when reached by telephone at the farm, near Erwinna, Pa., where he was packing about 1,000 of his books for storage.

"I've had all of the rural splendor that I can use, and each time I get to New York it seems more pestilential than before. I think Swift said that life is not only nasty and brutish, but short. That seemed to me the perfect description of life in a terminatory like New York." He used the word, he said, not in the sense of a place of termination, but as suggesting the "ambiance that termites live in."

★ ★ ★

Perelman said the nation was afflicted with "insanity and violence," symptoms of jingoism, and rampant political fatuousness. Its citizens cultivate manners that are scant on couth, he said, noting that incivility was a plague for which there was no antitoxin.

He confessed that he was disaffected with the U.S. political climate "all the way down from the co-author of the Mundt-Nixon bill—I won't specify which sponsor I mean—to every hard-hat and red-neck in this country."

He spent four months in London last winter and found there what seemed "a far more rational society than our own.

★ ★ ★

"The obvious good manners and consideration of people there toward each other may be only selfish, but it's good enough for me."

Perelman's wife of nearly 40 years, Laura West Perelman, died on April 10. He said that she had agreed with him about three years ago to move to London.

The author of 18 books of parodies (including Parlor, Bedlam and Bath in 1930; Westward Ha! in 1948 and The Ill-Tempered Clavichord in 1953) and the creator of scores of improbable characters, was born Sidney Joseph Perelman in Brooklyn in 1904.

He was reared in Rhode Island and educated at Brown University, where he edited The Brown Jug.

★ ★ ★

He started in 1925 as a comic artist for the magazine Judge. "The captions on my drawings got longer and longer, and soon they displaced the drawings," he said.

Two Marx Brothers pictures, Monkey Business and Horse Feathers, rank high among his screenplays.

He said that after his move there would be no diminution in the United States of his writings. He will continue to write for The New Yorker from London, and he expects that his books will appear at irregular intervals.

He added: "Today the news in this country is so filled with insanity and violence that the newspapers, from which I derive many of my ideas, have scant room for the sort of thing that turns me on—the bizarre, the unusual, the eccentric. In Britian they still have the taste for eccentricity."

ROUNDABOUT ENGLAND
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1970
In a unique film on Britain, Chess Lyons portrays the charm of the land and countryside that has meant so much to the British citizen in all walks of life. London, Birmingham and Liverpool, of course, are depicted but ROUNDABOUT is the England of quiet villages, cottage lanes, seaside towns, rivers flowing gently to the sea. There are indelible memories of Stonehenge, Roman city of Bath, Canterbury and Shakespeare country. Throughout the realm, as in the hearts of Englishmen everywhere, there is a special sense of harmony between man and land.

Wildlife (4-Legged Kind) Thrives in Downtown Area

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — There are wild coyotes living in Toronto—and deer, muskrat, mink, pheasant and a couple of sub-species of Canada geese.

These are not playful aliases for the city's human inhabitants. There really are numbers of these animals roaming as free as the more commonplace skunks, racoons and rabbits.

The specifics may vary, but the same is true of any urban area in Canada. They all have a wildlife population where there is a suitable habitat.

Frank Walden, supervisor of wildlife management for the Ontario government, said in an interview that wildlife occurs "wherever there is the habitat it requires."

"Habitat must provide shelter and food, a place to hide if something's after it, a place to have babies.

"Racoons and squirrels often make their dens in hollow trees, so if they nest in your attic they're using the next-best substitute. They're just behaving in a natural way."

Mr. Walden's office is near the Ontario legislature building, which is set in Queen's Park in a busy downtown area. Wildlife thrives even in this unlikely setting, he said.

LEAVE THEM ALONE

"We had a call from a member who was worried about a racoon he had seen on a high window ledge. When we went over, the building staff said, 'They've been there three or four years, why can't you leave them alone?' So we did.

"We've watched a red-tailed hawk harry pigeons from our windows on the west side of this building.

"The interesting thing is, these animals persist, and no animal persists where it cannot find what it wants."

Just like people, some wild animals live in the city because they were born there. Others migrate.

"As an animal population builds up in an area, there is competition for space and some are crowded out. So some will occupy habitat that may not be the highest quality for that animal, but is sufficient.

"The size of an animal population will be affected by local conditions. I'm thinking of parks especially.

"In Queen's Park, due to good housekeeping, the population is adversely affected, but due to the kindness of people it's enhanced. This is one of the artificial things that affects animal population in the city."

MUST BE CONSISTENT

Mr. Walden said it is all right to feed wildlife if you are consistent about it.

"Your can't take a very strong stand against philanthropy. The squirrels in a park add to the park—they add to the amusement. But if you're going to feed things like pheasants near your home, you should do it consistently. You can't do it occasionally, then cut them off, without the likelihood that some of them will starve."

"There just aren't substitutes for peculiar natural situations.

"It is impossible to say we'll have the city here and wildlife here. The demands of wildlife are so sensitive that we have to work within the bounds they dictate.

"As urban sprawl continues, we're losing some very good wildlife habitat—in our area for pheasants and cottontail rabbits especially. Every time a subdivision is created, more habitat is destroyed.

"OK, you can say so what, but life does not consist of high-rises alone, and our culture is enhanced by the wildlife around us."

Mr. Walden said it is difficult "to make a case for protecting a habitat for a few ducks or pheasants in the face of a multi million-dollar project, but the question is who suffers in the long run, and how much."

"I don't know who's qualified to answer."

Mr. Walden says if your private property is invaded by wild animals in a way you feel you can't tolerate, there is little you can do about it but have the animals destroyed. In Ontario you may kill wildlife on our own property except for deer, moose and caribou. You need special permits to kill these.

"I try to encourage people to accept the fact that there is wildlife here, and they are losing more than they are gaining if they destroy it."

Treatment Did Damage

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice G. A. Eddy ruled in Ontario Supreme Court that treatment for acne administered to James Johnson of Toronto at Wellesley Hospital caused facial damage to Johnson.

Mr. Justice Eddy reserved decision, however, on Johnson's suit for $40,000 against the hospital and Dr. Murray Williams, a staff skin specialist.

The justice said Johnson, 20, when he was treated four years ago, was hypersentitive to the application to his skin of frozen carbon dioxide.

STAMP NEWS

Victoria's Emily Carr to Be Commemorated

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Next year, Canada will issue an adhesive paying tribute to the colorful writer and painter Emily Carr, who was born in Victoria in December, 1871, and who died here in March, 1945.

The following is the rest of Canada's 1971 program.

Besides Miss Carr, these people will be honored: the rebel and politician Louis Joseph Papineau (1786-1871); the explorer Samuel Hearne (1745-92), the painter Paul Kane (1810-71), and the physicist Ernest Rutherford, 1st Baron Rutherford of Nelson (1871-1937).

Commemorated will be: the centenary of the first Dominion census: the 100th anniversary of British Columbia's joining Confederation; the inauguration of new transmitter facilities by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's "International Services;" and lastly, the 50th anniversary of the discovery (in Toronto) of insulain by Sir Frederick Grant Banting (1891-1941), John James Rickard Macleod (1876-1935), Charles Herbert Best, and James Bertram Collip.

In addition, a special 1971 set will have the maple leaf as its theme.

And finally, there will be a Christmas set.

•

Last month, Grenada issued seven pictorials (1c, 2c, 3c, 10c, 25c, 50c and $1) for Expo '70, which is now over. (A souvenir sheet contains the $1 denomination). The rather unusual 50-cent represents a number of things such as the Peace Statue of St. Francis (made out of iron taken from 2,000 guns), the San Francisco Pavilion, a cable car, the Golden Gate Bridge, and tiny portraits of Abraham Lincoln (1809-65), John F. Kennedy (1917-63), Robert F. Kennedy (1925-68), and Martin Luther King, Jr. (1929-68).

A photogravure-printed pair released by Nigeria Sept. 1 observes the United Nation's 25th anniversary. Four-pence and 1s 6d are the values.

Dr. Maria Montessori (1870-1952) is pictured on a recent stamp from Pakistan.

Five pictorials issued Sept. 7 by St. Vincent mark the sesquicentenary of St. George's Cathedral, Kingstown, St. Vincent. Values: ½c, 5c, 25c, 35, and 50c.

Montserrat's Delacryl-printed Christmas set came out Sept 21. The 5-cent and 20-cent depict a detail from a copy of an uncompleted painting by Albrecht Durer (1471-1528). Shown on the 15-cent and one-dollar is a detail from "Adoration of the Shepherds," a painting by Domenichino (1581-1641).

On Sept. 14, St. Christopher-Nevis-Anguilla isued a lithographed foursome (½c, 20c, 25c and 50c) for the centenary of the first stamps from St. Christopher.

A lithographed 15-ngwee stamp was released Sept. 8 by Zambia. Portrayed are African masks. It commemorates the Summit Conference of Non-Aligned Nations which opened Sept. 8 in Lusaka, Zambia's capital.

•

Barbuda has released two more additions to their series depicting British monarchs. They are: Sept. 1, Henry V (1387-1422), who reigned from 1413-22; and Sept. 15, Henry VI (1421-71), who reigned from 1422-61, and in 1470-71.

On Sept. 30, the Greater Victoria Philatelic Society will meet a The Inn, 1528 Cook Street. It will be circuit book and trading night (the doors will open about 7:30 p.m.), and non-members are welcome to attend.

I think that the Group of Seven multicolor is one of the finest stamps that Canada has ever issued. It's is a living masterpiece!

INTOURIST CARES . . . BUT WHY?

Russia Still Doesn't Want Us

When In Moscow Do As Moscow Does

By STANLEY KARNOW

LENINGRAD (WP)—There are two dictatorships operating here in the Soviet Union: the so-called dictatorship of the Proletariat for the Russians, and the dictatorship of the Intourist Agency for foreign visitors.

After four weeks of traveling across this vast land, I have become familiar with the Intourist Autocracy. The experience has left me wondering whether Soviet citizens live under an equally exasperating bureaucracy.

In all fairness to Intourist officials, it should be stated at the outset that they display an unusually honest attitude toward foreign visitors. Quickly and candidly they communicate to the tourist that he is not really welcome in the Soviet Union, and that everything will be done to make his trip as uncomfortable, inefficient and costly as possible.

The tourist who humbly accepts the fact that the Soviet authorities are begrudgingly doing him the favor of permitting him to see their country will save wear and tear on his nerves. Anyone who comes here determined to have his way may soon be reduced to ulcers or apoplexy.

* * *

By way of evidence, consider the case of a New York travel writer who was recently invited here as a guest of Intourist in order to promote the Soviet Union to her American readers. She reached Moscow to discover that her baggage had been lost en route.

Intourist denied responsibility and referred her to Aeroflot, the Soviet airline on which she had flown. Aeroflot sent her back to Intourist, which again referred her to the airline. Back and forth she went for several days, her petty insistence on having her suitcases rapidly fraying her temper and, of course, spoiling what had promised to be a thrilling adventure.

In contrast, ideal tourists from the Soviet point of view are Francis Cornwall, a retired contractor from Long Beach, Calif., and his wife, Jane, whom I encountered in the Siberian city of Irkutsk a couple of weeks ago.

They had arrived there after three difficult days aboard the primitive Trans-Siberian Railway to be told by Intourist Officials that, according to the schedule drawn up by their Los Angeles travel agent, they were two days early. Exhausted, the Cornwalls cheerfully followed Intourist instructions. They boarded an airplane, flew five hours to the central Asian cty of Alma-Ata, dined there and flew another five hours back to Irkutsk next day in order to get back onto their proper timetable.

"It was like going from New York to London for dinner," Cornwall observed. The Intourist officials were pleased, even if they did not smile.

* * *

Like most Soviet functionaries, Intourist officials rarely smile. But they laughed the other day in Moscow when I, in violation of my own decision to roll with the punches, staged a small tantrum. I exploded after an Intourist cashier refused to accept a torn five-dollar bill that she herself had handed me in change a few hours before.

Crumpling the bill into a small ball, I threw it at her, punctuating the gesture with a few unprintable expletives. To my surprise, she and her associates burst into laughter. Then, still chuckling, she picked up the bill, ironed it out with her palm, and returned it to me. I confess that I felt better even though Intourist scored a clear victory in the face of flying greenbacks.

Provided they are not bent, torn or mutilated, lots of greenbacks and a willingness to spend them lavishly can ease the rigors of a visit to the Soviet Union. Foreigners must pay for their trip, including hotel accommodations and meals, in hard currency in advance. While here, theatre tickets, sightseeing tours and the only souvenirs worth buying, like good fur hats, lacquer boxes and dolls, also require real money.

* * *

In fact, a tourist can pass a week or two here without ever handling a ruble — which is not a bad idea since the Russians exchange their currency officially at the artificial rate of 90 kopeks per dollar, or about one-fifth its free market value.

The effort to squeeze the tourist in the Soviet Union is not casual and carefree, as in France or Italy. On the contrary, it is institutionalized. For example, a visitor can select his hotel only by paying Intourist a $25 premium; otherwise, he is assigned a room and may end up in a place like Moscow's Russiya, which looks like a tractor factory and is sometimes called the "Comrade Hilton."

On leaving the country, a tourist cannot cash in unused meal tickets or hotel vouchers that were originally purchased for hard currency. Nor will Intourist downgrade a tourists' class and reimburse him the difference. The agency will, however, upgrade a tourist upon additional payment. Or as an official in Moscow explained to me: "We take money, but we don't give back money."

Intourist also earns extra money through supplemental levies that occasionally seem to be somewhat inflated. To visit Lake Baikal from Irkutsk, for instance, I was compelled to pay Intourist $30 for the hire of a taxi. After completing the excursion, I noticed that the taxi meter read only 18 rubles, less than two-thirds the amount I had paid. In short, Intourist made a net profit of $12 on the trip. "Organized robbery," I muttered to my guide. "The system," she replied.

* * *

Very much a part of the system, too, is the class structure of the tourist business here, which the Russian enforce despite their claim to be working for a classless society. The tourist travelling first class must do his sightseeing in a group, while those who pay through the nostrils for de luxe receive a personal guide and automobile.

De luxe usually features a hotel suite, while first yields the equivalent of a broom closet. Tourists travelling in still lower classes are given broom closets without bath.

The one thing that transcends all classes is restaurant service which could be speeded up by employing snails for waiters. One theory has it that restaurant service is purposely slow so that customers will become so famished as to disregard the dreadful quality of the cuisine. The more accepted notion is that waiters and waitresses, like others in the Soviet service trades, lack the incentives to spur them to move fast.

Whatever the reason, actual scientific research indicates that it is usually impossible to dine in a restaurant that caters to foreigners in less than three hours. The only time I have eaten quickly in the Soviet Union was here in Leningrad the other day, when a Russian acquaintance telephoned the director of a restaurant to request that I be given special treatment. The restaurant turned out to be a cafeteria, and the experience was like getting VIP consideration at the Automat.

The first problem involved in entering a restaurant in the Soviet Union is to find the "administrator," or maitre d'hotel. He has a habit of disappearing at mealtimes. Without him the guest is doomed, since only he is authorized to issue table assignments.

* * *

Once seated, the next problem is to signal a waiter or waitress. This is an extremely difficult task, as Soviet waiters are especially trained to elude winks, nods, snaps of the finger and other gestures until they are ready to accommodate their clientele. At that point, they ration out grease-stained menus and vanish, leaving the guest for at least a half-hour to select his dishes.

The menus in Soviet restaurants apparently date back to prerevolutionary days. They are long and luxurious, offering such plats de resistance as wild duck with red cabbage and caviar-filled blinis. When the waiter returns, however, the guest is transported back to reality. "Nyet," he responds as the customer essays each romantic specialty.

In the end, the meal consists of borscht, shashlik and the inevitable cucumber salad. Incidentally, the food is usually delivered cool at 40-minute intervals. But at this stage, the guest no longer cares; he has been starved into submission.

* * *

The only thing slower than being served in a Soviet restaurant is getting the check. And paying it is further complicated by the fact that tourists must sort out the different colored coupons that vary according to meals and the class in which he is travelling. Waiters in some places simplify this process by arbitrarily taking a handful of coupons from unsuspecting foreigners. By the time a tourist has reached this point, though, he is prepared to tolerate almost anything to be allowed to leave the restaurant.

The hardest day's night I have had in a Soviet restaurant was at the Astoria Hotel here in Leningrad when, after finally being seated by the maitre d'hotel, I found myself next to a table occupied by an official delegation of minor French dignitaries.

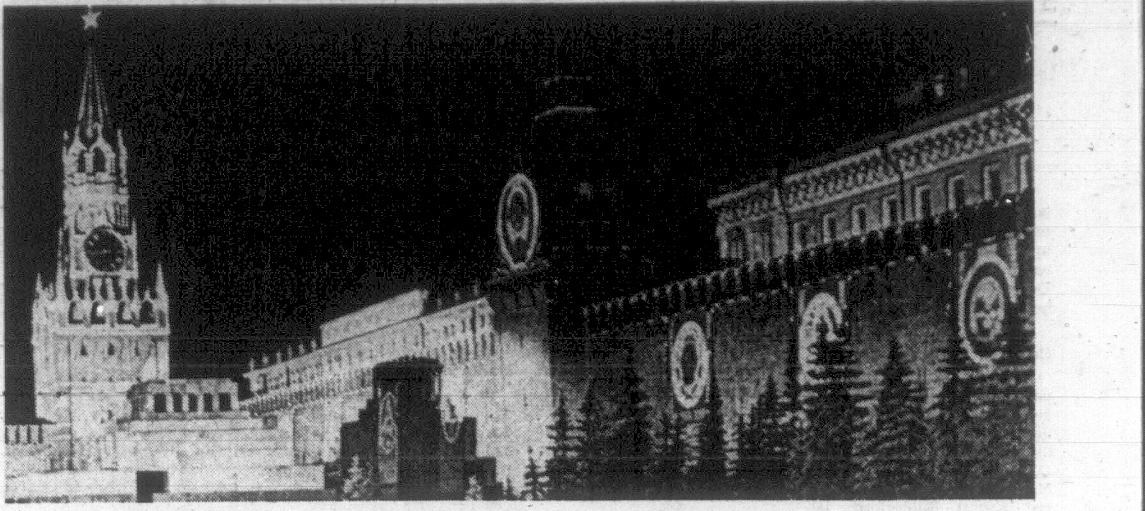
Official delegations take precedence over all other visitors to the Soviet Union. Therefore, the waiters did not even distribute menus to the neighboring tables until the Frenchmen had finished their dinner. The total elapsed time between my sitting down and rising was 4 hours 37 minutes. Nobody apologized for the delay.

* * *

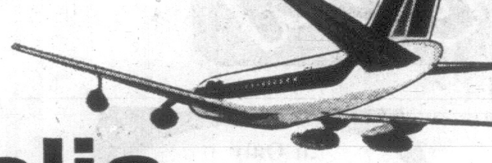
Being accompanied by a Russian guide sometimes — but not always — helps to make a tourist's existence easier. The question for a tourist, however, is whether he wants to have an Intourist representative with him from morning until night. Much depends, of course, on the guide.

In some places I was in the hands of dynamic, professional women guides who insisted upon going to the local hydroelectric plant and the municipal science library, which has 2,647,983 books and was once visited by Lenin. In the summer particularly, tourists may find themselves in the care of foreign language students, usually an easier-going lot.

Despite its gloomy officials, slow service, drabness and general lack of joy, the Soviet Union is a country that every traveller ought to visit — with his eyes and ears open. But a good many U.S. tourists, I surprisingly found, are too inclined to see the silver lining here, possibly because leftist leanings are fashionable these days, perhaps because they equate criticism of the Kremlin with the worst period of the Cold War.



THE KREMLIN . . . Given a Chance, It Could Be a Tourist Attraction



Milan it's a steal!

$478.00 return trip

Autumn days are soft in Italy. Warm. It is Italy's best time of year, and the favourite of knowledgeable travellers.

Grape festivals . . . the countryside is at its most beautiful. The cities . . . Milan, Venice, Genoa and Turin in the north share equally in their beauty, art and history. And some striking modernity, too.

And always the vivacity and extra hospitality which are the signature of Italy.

Italy offers you so much throughout the year. But during the fall months it offers a little more. And Alitalia, Italy's world airline, jets you there with real Italian warmth and gusto — and pride.

$478 gives you economy 29/45 day return fare to Milan from Victoria. Other fares for other durations of stay. Your travel agent knows it all. Call him today.

ITALY'S WORLD AIRLINE

Before setting out to see the world...

. . . there are a few things you should know.
Most of us develop the urge to get away from it all at one time or another. To cross new horizons; to meet people, and experience their culture. Despite the dazzling advances in the world of transportation, the lot of the aspirant traveler is not yet as simple as just packing a bag and leaving home on a dream. The very task of selecting the most advantageous air fare can be a mind boggling affair before starting on transfers, accommodations and sightseeing.

Many an experienced traveler has found that the surest and most enjoyable way to travel is on an American Express Escorted or Independent tour. Tours that cover Great Britain, Ireland, the Continent, South America, the Pacific, the Orient, Hawaii and the Caribbean plus the major tourist areas of the United States as well as a splendid "Around the World" program. When you travel with American Express you can be sure that you are getting the best possible value for your money on a vacation planned by a company experienced in every facet of travel and able to meet all its commitments.

So, before you leave home, visit your travel agent and ask for an American Express brochure on the destination that you are planning to visit. An American Express tour booked through a travel agent costs no more and you get the services of a man who's probably been down that road before.

N.Y. Times Faces Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — American Newspaper Guild members at the New York Times voted almost 15 to 1 Thursday to authorize a strike against the paper. No date was set.

Harry Fisdoll, chairman of the guild unit committee at The Times, reported the vote as 1,143 for a strike and 79 against.

Guildsmen at The Times, The Daily News and the New York Post have worked since March 30 without a contract because union and managements have not been able to agree on terms of a new pact.

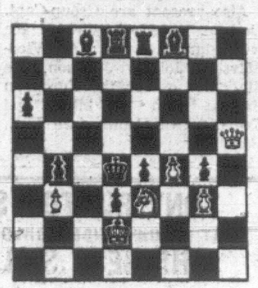
PROBLEM
By Sam Loyd, U.S.
BLACK: 10



WHITE: 6

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

* * *

Dr. Ossip Bernstein, the great Russian-French Grandmaster, one of the best in his day, and constant sparring partner of Dr. Alexander Alekhine, told me the following tale one day in 1937 in Paris.

"One of the tournaments I wish to forget most is one of the very first ones I played in. It was the Hauptturnier in Hanover, Germany, in 1902. We were going into the final round, and I was one point behind the leader, Walter John of Germany, who needed just a draw to be first. I could afford to lose my game and still come in second.

Half of our section was played on the first floor of the hotel where this event was being staged, and other half on the second floor. John was playing the strong amateur, Dyckhoff, and I had as my opponent Bernard Kagan, the famous chess editor, quite a strong master in his own right.

After every few moves, I would hurry down to see how John was doing, naturally hoping he would lose. My postition became better with each move, and at long last I won a pawn and things looked good.

I went down once again, and saw little to cheer about. In fact, it looked easy for John to win his game. Dejected, I climbed the staircase, sat down at my table and found that my opponent had made a brilliant countermove.

Now I really had to concentrate hard. It would come into a long drawn out ending, in which I still had good winning chances.

"After thinking for half-an-hour, I made my move, got up to go down once again to look at John's game. At the door, I met Dyckhoff and impatiently inquired how he had fared. 'We drew,' said Dyckhoff, smiling all over. That being the case, I had no chance to tie for first place. I turned back and offered my opponet a draw. Kagan looked up in surprise. 'That's funny,' he said, 'I was just on the point of resigning! Naturally I accept your kind offer.' I walked down to the first floor, took a look at the scoreboard, and couldn't believe my eyes! Dyckhoff had fooled me! He had beaten John! As I stood staring at the result, Carl Carls, another German master, took me by the arm and led me into the bar room, and ordered a schnapps for me. I don't honw how many of these I had, but it is the only time in my whole life that I really got drunk."

T. R. DAWSON

T. R. was one of the greatest English problem composers and was the outstanding authority on problems with conditions. He was chess editor of "Chess Amateur" for many years and edited many other publications. He compsosed more than 500 problems. He died at the age of 62. Here is an outstanding help-mate of his. By the way, in a help-mate problem, it is Black who moves first, and the idea is to HELP White mate him in the specified number of moves.

* * *

It appeared in the "Chess Amateur," 1922.

WHITE: King on KN5, Bishop on Q2, pawn on QB3. (3 pieces.)

BLACK: King on K4, Queen on QN2, Rooks on QB4 and KR3; Bishops on QR3 and QB2, Knights on KB7 and KN5, pawns on QR5, QN3 and KN6. (11 pieces.)

Black to play and help White mate him in four moves.

1. . . .	K-Q3ch
2. K-B4	K-B3ch
3. K-B3	K-N4ch
4. K-K2	K-R4ch
5. P-B4 mate

A really outstanding "tour de force."

The solution to the problem is: 1. Q-R5.

Victims Aided

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Canadian Red Cross Society has announced the society has donated $10,000 to assist the victims of the civil war in Jordan. Ian S. Johnston said the grant was in response to an appeal for aid by the League of Red Cross Societies.

RUSSIA'S ATTITUDE CAUSES CONCERN

Mideast Events Erode Europe Accord

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Reports in the last several days indicate that those who have been lauding the "detente" in Europe may have been premature.

West Germany, for one, is reported to have linked the Soviet Union's attitude in the Middle East with its future policies in Euorope.

The Netherlands is another country feeling some concern about the situation in the Middle East as related to that of Europe.

With the flames of conflict scorching the Middle East, and with the UN celebrating its 25th anniversary while still unable to do anything about the Vietnam war, speakers in the recently opened General Assembly have been pointing to the one area where there appears to be hope — Europe.

West Germany has concluded a non-aggression treaty with the Soviet Union. There is hope for a peace agreement between Poland and West Germany. The West German foreign minister, Walter Scheel, said in New York Friday that his country intends to conclude an agreement with Czechoslovakia.

CONSIDER CONFERENCE

At the same time, a European security conference is being considered by East and West, although Scheel is reported to have poured a drop of chill water on this. He is reported to have expressed concern, to Canadian External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp for one, that the Soviet attitude toward allegations that Egypt is breaking the Middle East ceasefire may be reflected in its future attitude toward the recently-signed Bonn-Moscow treaty.

His thinking is this: Egypt, ally of the Soviets, and Israel, ally of the Americans, agreed on a ceasefire.

Egypt broke the ceasefire agreement by moving Soviet missiles close to the Suez canal. The Soviet Union did nothing to stop it.

If the Soviet attitude on this agreement is so loose, what will its attitude be toward the West German-Soviet treaty?

Scheel attracted considerable interest when he met Friday with Deputy Foreign Minister Josef Winiewicz of Poland for discussions on a possible peace agreement between the two countries.

SEEKS CZECH PACT

Prior to the meeting Scheel addressed a luncheon of the Foreign Press Association at which he said West Germany intends to conclude an agreement with Czechoslovakia and "arrangements with the other part of Germany" at a later date.

This has been a depressing time for many at the UN. There has been nothing that the UN, dedicated to end the scourge of war, could do to end the conflict in Jordan. It has even been bypassed in the behind-the-scenes talks between involved powers, with most of the substantive discussions taking place in world capitals.

The negotiations that Gunnar Jarring, UN Middle East negotiator who is supposed to help bring about a peace settlement, have come to an abrupt halt over allegations of ceasefire violations.

To some, the UN has never looked more ineffective than in the last week.

So almost as though they were grasping at straws during the silver anniversary celebrations, Europe has become a major topic for many speakers.

Sir Alec Douglas-Home, British foreign secretary, devoted many of his public remarks to Europe. He linked the prospects of a European security conference—in fact the whole area of coexistence — with settlement of the problems of Berlin.

"If we cannot begin to eliminate the risks which have arisen there from time to time, there is no real hope of improving East-West relations," he said Thursday in the assembly.

In a news conference Friday, he said it would make considerable difference to prospects of a European security conference "if the Russians were accommodating on Berlin and would allow more civilized arrangements for the people of that city."

But he also said that the Soviet-West German treaty and German negotiations with her neighbors "hold the key to constructive coexistence in Europe."

HE COULD TRY HIS HAND AT FICTION

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Police said gasoline station attendant Danilo Battivelli, 44, reported being held up by three bandits and robbed of $1,040 in gas coupons and cash.

They said he later broke down and admitted making up the story to convince his wife that his job was too dangerous and he should look for other employment.

"I was going to call the office as soon as we got to Panama. But when we got there, I said the hell with it. It's nice to be able to forget the whole world for awhile."

"When I got back, Ralph Usina, my doctor, said my blood pressure had dropped 16 points."

"I was surprised at all the airline pilots that take cruises when they take a vacation."

"Everybody talks about riots and pollution and noise and LSD. They all ought to go out into the middle of the ocean for a few days."

"It's the first vacation I ever took where I didn't come back exhausted. Everything took on a new perspective. It sounds funny to say it, but maybe the Viet Cong and the South Vietnamese should take a 2 week cruise. I mean it."

"It's the first time Alan and I danced in 12 years."

"I brought along a lot of books I was going to read. But I never found the time."

"I wish I'd made my husband take a cruise with me while he was still alive. He might still be alive now. He never took a vacation in his whole life. I don't think men know how to relax anymore."

$27,054 WINDFALL PUT TO GOOD USE

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Prentise Sykes, 60, who makes $3.94 an hour as a government mechanic, opened his mail Sept. 12 and found a $27,054.49 government cheque made out to him.

Sykes paid off mortgages on his house and car and two outstanding loans.

But then the general services administration informed the secret service that somebody put a wrong number in a computer and Sykes got a cheque intended for a Kansas City firm that had submitted a $27,054.49 bill for painting a federal building.

Sykes said he thought the windfall came from a friend's statement that he once bought some stock and put part of it in Sykes' name.

Agents recovered all but $7,910 of the money. The secret service stressed that Sykes violated no law and said he agreed to repay the missing money in $300 monthly instalments.

Gun Fanciers Battle Controls

NEW YORK — Two years after the enactment of landmark U.S. gun control legislation, the regulation of private firearms remains a bitterly controversial political issue and local officials across the country complain that illegal gun possession is as widespread as ever.

Gun clubs and other groups that oppose gun control in almost any form have mounted carefully planned, well-financed campaigns in Montana, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Maryland in retaliation against Senators who have gone on record in favor of gun control.

While all four of their targets — Sens. Mike Mansfield, (D-Mont.), Hugh Scott, (R-Pa.), Philip Hart, (D-Mich.) and Joseph D. Tydings, (D-Md.) — are confident that they are strong enough to withstand the attacks, rhetoric has been sharp and at least one, Tydings, has had to contend with strenuous opposition from a citizens group heavily staffed by gun club officials.

In rural areas, politicians consider gun control anathema. Gale Williams, a downstate Illinois legislator sponsoring a bill that would let individual counties nullify a state gun control law, says its constituents are "violently opposed" to any legal restraint on firearms.

"They either think it's another form of taxation or a plot by the Communists to take their guns away," he said.

Meanwhile, almost anyone can legally buy a gun — including a $12.78 Mannlicher Carcano rifle of the type that killed President Kennedy, a $265.85 Remington deer rifle like that used to kill the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and a $6. Iver Johnson pistol of the kind that killed Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

And, local officials report, former convicts, children, narcotics addicts, mental patients, almost anyone can obtain weapons illegally — even in states with strict laws.

"It is perfectly obvious that illegal gun possession is rampant," says Stephen C. Swaim, secretary of the District of Columbia City Council. "It is perfectly obvious to the average citizen that guns are all over the place."

THE GALLUP POLL

Public Agrees With Trudeau

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION
(World Copyright Reserved)

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has said on more than one occasion that inflation is the most urgent problem before this country today. The general public agrees with him, with three-in-ten voters naming "the economy of the country; fighting inflation" as the biggest challenge facing Trudeau.

Unemployment is regarded as the next problem, with strikes in general and the postal strike in particular following.

In fourth place on the list of problems the Prime Minister has to cope with, is himself, named by 8 per cent of the citizens—"poor image, too many holidays, too many women."

The question:

"What do you think is the most urgent problem facing Prime Minister Trudeau at the present time?"

Fighting inflation; economy of country	30%
Unemployment	20
Too many strikes; postal strike; general wage unrest; 6 per cent guidelines unfair; labor unions too strong	13
Himself; poor image; hasn't done anything; too many holidays; incompetent; too many women	8
National unity; bilingualism; he should stop giving in to Quebec	6
Other	11
Can't say	17
More than one urgent problem mentioned.	105%

A wide variety of problems are mentioned under "other" —too high taxes; no incentive for investment; pollution; housing; hippies; lack of grain sales; drugs.

For the past three years Gallup Poll surveys have shown that the voters consider inflation the most urgent problem facing Ottawa, the country and individuals.

Germans Strike

BONN (Reuters) — More than 50,000 metal workers downed tools throughout West Germany in a continuing campaign of brief wildcat strikes for higher wages. Among the strikers were thousands of auto workers at the Ford Motor works in Cologne and the General Motors-owned Opel concern in Bochum.

CANADIAN AIR FORCE VETERANS HOLD MEET

German Air Ace Welcomed by Pilots

By DERICK HODGSON

WINNIPEG (CP) — Germany's most famous fighter pilot of the Second World War was greeted like a brother Friday by the men who fought him.

Lt.-Gen. Adolf Galland received a thundering ovation as he was introduced at the Commonwealth maritime aircrew reunion being held in Winnipeg and was made an honorary citizen of the city.

His voice cracking with emotion, the once commander-in-chief of the German fighter force said he was overwhelmed at the reception he received.

"If I remember 35 to 40 years ago ... we were forced by politicians to fight and shoot each other," he said.

Galland, credited with 104 victories in the sky, was a general in the Luftwaffe at the age of 29.

DISAGREED WITH HITLER

Although closely associated with Field Marshal Herman Goering and Hitler, he had serious difference of opinion with both. He was dismissed from his post in 1945 but was brought back later to lead the world's first jet-fighter squadron.

A total of 1,243 veterans have registered at the reunion with some Commonwealth flyers coming from Hawaii, South Africa and Florida.

Speaking to a hushed banquet audience Friday, the German asked the group to remember "everyone had to do his military duty."

He said since the war ended such rapport has been established that "it would be impossible for a war to take place now" between the Western world's 1939-45 adversaries.

Galland is sharing the spotlight at the reunion with three other top air commanders of the Second World War.

Also present are Group-Capt. Douglas Bader, the British ace with aluminum legs; Air Vice-Marshal Johnny Johnson, the top allied ace in the European theatre with 38 kills, and Canadian Air Commodore J. E. Fauquier.

Galland is probably most famous for an angry remark he once barked to Goering.

Goering, who had just finished dressing down his fighter pilots for what he considered inadequate tactics, turned to Galland and asked him what he needed to change the situation.

"A squadron of Spitfires," he answered.

"Goering was angry," Galland recalls.

Special Room Set Aside For First World War Vets

WINNIPEG (CP) — Buried amid one of the biggest and noisiest of all veterans' reunions is a quiet room where the conversation is kept low.

As more than 1,200 exuberant Second World War airmen flooded a Winnipeg hotel Friday, one room was set aside for 12 survivors of "the war to end all wars."

Two of these First World War veterans have waited 51 years for their reunion. T. W. B. Hinch of Winnipeg and J. E. Jackson of Port Perry, Ont., were flying mates in the Royal Flying Corps in 1919, and had not seen each other since.

They met again in the hotel corridor, before disappearing into a swarm of their younger compatriots, here from points as far-flung as Hawaii, Texas, South Africa and Great Britain.

For some of the first war veterans the get-together is a test of physical strength and stamina. Several are unable to walk without a cane, and at least one can't walk without guidance from a friend.

The reunion has many visiting aces of term denoting five aerial victories. Among them are Germany's Lt.-Gen. Adolf Galland, with 104 victories, and Britains' Air Vice-Marshall J. E. (Johnnie) Johnson, with 38 kills to his credit.

One of those aces has the distinction of never having been a pilot. He is Cpl. Peter Engbrecht, of Beausejour, Man., who shot down nine enemy aircraft from his position as upper gunner in a Halifax bomber.

Still in the services, Cpl. Engbrecht also served as an armorer to Air Vice-Marshal Johnson.

Belly Landing

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Kathleen Guerinni got the surprise of her life when a small private plane made a forced landing almost on top of her, its back wheels skimming over her stomach while she was sunbathing on Redondo Beach. The 24-year-old woman was taken to hospital with minor injuries. Pilot Steve Wilkins, 23, told police he thought the beach was deserted. He came down because of fuel line trouble.

No Prosecution Rule Observed in Calgary

CALGARY (CP) — Allegations of loose security and descriptions of how money was stolen from the Calgary Transit System were unfolded this week before a public inquiry into management of civic affairs during the last 10 years.

The inquiry, before Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow of the Northwest Territories court, was told that until last year the city had a policy of not prosecuting employees found stealing from the system.

Detective-Sgt. A. T. Caines testified Friday that on several occasions in 1966 he monitored closed-circuit television in the city hall cash-counting room and observed employees stealing coins.

Questioned by commission counsel Ronald Neuman, Sgt. Caines said the senior transit system personnel manager, Bob Wray, deputy manager William Kuyt and administrative assistant Bertram Freeman, told him it was against city policy to prosecute.

James Phillip Kromm, a city employee, testified Friday under the protection of the Canada and Alberta Evidence Acts that he stole coins while he worked in the counting room in 1966 and knew three other employees who did the same.

Angus MacDonald, president of Local 583 of the Amalgamated Transit Operators told the inquiry Friday that earlier testimony about 25 per cent of the drivers stealing from the system was an exaggeration.

He said testimony that bus drivers had lowered grasshoppers on a string into fare boxes to retrieved coins or tickets was a myth.

"It originated when a bunch of kids tried it once on a street car many years ago."

The inquiry is scheduled to reconvene Tuesday to continue its investigation into thefts from city departments.

The inquiry was requested by city hall after police investigations showed substantial thefts from the transit system and ensuing court action resulted in two men being convicted.

Missionary Finds Old Bomber

PORT MORESBY (Reuters) — An American missionary, alerted by stories told by primitive tibesmen, has found the wreckage of a Second World War United States bomber and the bodies of its three crewmen in a remote New Guinea mountain range.

Nazarene missionary Daryl Schindel said today he found the wreckage of a B-20 bomber in the Schrader range in the Madang district.

U.S. authorities since have identified the aircraft and confirmed it carried a crew of three.

Schindel said he found the plane after hearing stories from natives at Simbai patrol post, a lonely administrative centre. They told him they had seen "a great bird-like thing" in the sky.

'SO LONG, CHARLIE'

The Planting of McGraw

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — It was a loud yet sombre procession Wednesday—50 motorcycles long—that escorted the body of a 19-year-old member of a Tacoma motorcycle club to the old Tacoma cemetery.

Charles McGraw was killed Saturday night in a South Tacoma home. Police ruled the shooting, which also placed the president of the Tacoma motorcycle club, The Shifters, in the hospital, act of self-defence.

Bikers came from as far away as Oregon, California and Minnesota to pay their last respects in what became perhaps the most unorthodox funeral seen here in recent years.

During the sermon Rev. Harold Aalbue delivered on the great waste when the young die, the packed chapel was silent. The three-block-long processional from the funeral home to the cemetery was slow and well synchronized as 50 custom motorcycles followed the hearse in pairs.

At the point where most funerals end, McGraw's was just beginning.

At the graveside, as Rev. Aalbue ended the Lord's Prayer, a keg of beer was respectfully set near the coffin. The glasses filled, including one placed on the head of the coffin, a final solemn toast was made to "the best biker that ever was."

After the toast, the people decided they had come to bury their friend and were not leaving till this had been done. With the aid of a surprised funeral director, McGraw's young friends lowered the casket into the earth.

Oaths were made on the casket, a harmonica was placed inside the box, a foamy beer glass was placed beside him, flowers were torn from their plastic pots and wooden standards and placed on top of the coffin, and the body was slowly put to rest.

"Ain't nobody is going to hurt you now," a friend said.

FOR YOUTHS WHO KICK DRUGS

Mom Whyte Eyes B.C. Centre

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Bertha (Mom) Whyte, fully recovered from gangrene and a stroke, announced plans Friday for a mission training centre in British Columbia.

Its students and eventual missionaries would be "youths who have broken the drug habit and accepted the Lord Jesus, but who don't have anything to do because they don't want to fit back into the rut they've broken out of."

A greying, soft-spoken woman of 54, Mrs. Whyte said her home in Nigeria for 100 orphans is operating successfully.

She said she is planning an emergency centre for Biafran children and hopes to regain Whitehaven in Bowmanville, Ont., as headquarters for her mission work.

Whitehaven is the home where she cared for up to 150 children—in defiance of Ontario regulations—until the government moved in 10 years ago and removed the children.

Mrs. Whyte, her husband Bert, and their family moved to British Columbia where they leased a property on Giant Head Mountain near Penticton. The B.C. government also refused a licence for a children's home, and they left for Nigeria.

Mrs. Whyte said the non-denominational mission they founded there has survived both government opposition and "curses" put on them for settling on ancient sacrificial ground.

The mission, staffed by six volunteers, is supported by individual contributions from people like the ones who turned out for her announcement Friday.

She detailed her plans at a "Friends of Mom Whyte" meeting.

Mrs. Whyte has no association with any organized religion. "You couldn't fit me into any church I ever heard of."

Her death was predicted last spring when she was flown home to Bowmanville with a grangrenous leg and a stroke that left her totally paralysed.

Friday morning she was digging potatoes.

Mrs. Whyte's latest plans were sparked by a visit to her son in B.C. She said she met a U.S. youth leader who claimed a 70-per-cent success rate with spiritual therapy for drug addicts.

The training centre is to be on the property where she tried to establish her orphanage.

She has already decided to name it Mount Zion and expects that by the time she gets there enough money will have been donated to cover the $35,000 down payment.

Pilots Want Bulletproof Cockpit Door

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline pilots are demanding the shelter of bulletproof cockpit doors more than ever now that armed marshals ride their planes as guard against hijackers.

The Air Line Pilots Association emphasized this in a statement filed Friday with the Federal Aviation Administration in support of the bulletproof-cockpit requirement proposed by the FAA.

"Now that armed security guards have been placed on air carrier aircraft, the possibility of gunfire in the cabin has increased, and it is likely that bullets from the cabin may accidentally enter the flight deck," ALPA said.

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said Friday federal guards will not hesitate to shoot if other measures fail to halt a hijacking.

Capt. Charles H. Ruby, ALPA president, said the union has endorsed the secure-cockpit concept for several years and "wants action now."

ALPA said the FAA requirement that the door to the flight deck be kept locked has failed to prevent hijackings, sabotage or interference.

Boston Police Slayer Hunted by 800 Men

HAVERHILL, Mass. (AP) — More than 800 policemen searched through northeastern Massachusetts and New Hampshire late Friday and early today for William M. Gilday, one of five persons charged in the machine-gun slaying of a Boston policeman during a bank robbery Wednesday.

The police, from 18 communities, also manned roadblocks where Gilday, 41, of Amesbury, Mass., was spotted several times Friday. During the chase, police said, he stole three cars, took two persons hostage and was cornered once, but eluded capture after exchanging shots with police.

Also sought were Katherine A. Power, 20, Denver, Colo., registered as a senior at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass.; Susan Saxe, 20, Albany, N.Y., a June graduate of Brandeis', and Stanley R. Bond, 25, Cambridge, Mass. Police said they believed the three flew to Los Angeles Thursday.

WERE CONVICTS

Robert Valeri, 21, of Somerville, Mass., was arrested a few hours after the $26,000 robbery Wednesday of a branch office of State Street Bank and Trust Co. Patrolman Walter K. Schroeder, 41, was killed during the robbery.

Gilday and Valeri all served at Walpole, Mass., state prison and had been associated with Brandeis through a convict rehabilitation program.

A Brandeis official said Miss Power and Bond had registered there this fall, but "have not been on the Brandeis campus recently and apparently have severed all relationships with the campus."

Gilday was a night student at Northeastern University and Valeri had been accepted at Northeastern.

Police said ammunition and military supplies found in Miss Power's Boston apartment had been stolen in the bombing and looting of a National Guard armory at Newburyport, Mass., last Sunday. Boston Police McNamara said the equipment showed a "positive link" between the robbery-slaying and "radical, revolutionary campus groups."

Bond, Miss Saxe and Miss Power worked together last spring at the student strike information centre set up at Brandeis during protests against the dispatch of United States troops into Cambodia.

All five were charged with murder and armed robbery on state warrants Thursday, and federal warrants Friday charged the four fugitives with fleeing to escape prosecution.

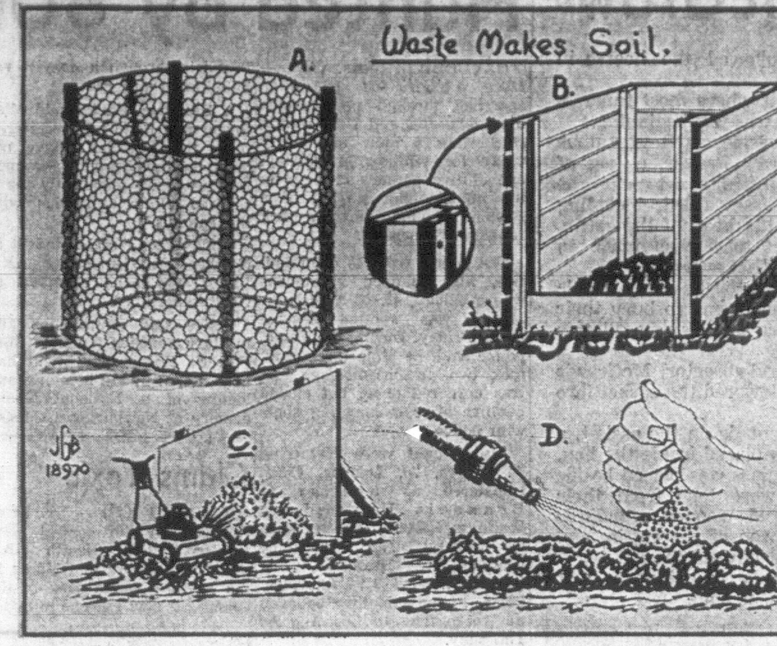
In Praise of Compost Heaps

Build It Right And Smile



By JACK BEASTALL

Soil, the medium in which we grow our plants, is composed of sand, clay, and fibre (humus). As pointed out in last week's column the humus is being constantly used by plants and the soil slowly reverting to its base of sand or clay.

To achieve success in growing plants we must maintain the humus content, replacing it as fast, or a little faster, than it is consumed.

Our problem now is to obtain a steady supply of humus.

The material we call humus is nothing more or less than decomposed plant and animal wastes. When decomposed, these wastes turn back to the soil from which they came.

•

Animal wastes come to us in the form of animal manures containing essential plant food, minerals, and hormones, plus the fibre of the bedding material if from barns and stables.

Plant wastes are the plants we discard, (annual bedding plants, vegetable tops, stems or roots), the parts removed from plants (herbaceous perennial tops, grass clippings), leaves and weeds.

All these, when decomposed, give us the fibre that is mixed with sand and clay to make a "good garden loam."

Decomposition of these wastes is also called composting and takes place in a compost heap.

The mention of compost raises the hackles of some gardeners. They mutter about organic cranks, smelly heaps, rubbish piles and rodents. In reality they are saying they have no knowledge of soils or how they are made.

Others fail in attempts at making compost for many reasons. Sometimes it is due to insufficient water; or not having enough material collected to make a good sized heap; or failing to build a heap that will generate enough heat (180 degs. F.) within 48 hours to start the decomposing process.

•

Or sometimes a heap of grass clippings is thrown in a corner with insufficient coarse material mixed in to "open up" the mass.

Compost heaps may be built in the open (see detail D in illustration), in bins (detail B) or in wire enclosures as shown at A.

Wire enclosures can be round, square, oblong, or the wire can be erected where two fences, or a fence and wall of a building meet, to form a triangle. They are excellent temporary enclosures for fallen leaves.

Bins of wood should be at least four feet each way, with about one-inch air space between each board. The front boards slide into a grove made by mailing strips to the front posts (see small detail). One-inch blocks nailed to top of each removable board (one each end) provide necessary air spaces.

•

Two containers are handy, one to collect discarded material day by day, the other for the decomposing heap which is made after sufficient material has been collected. This second step is essential to obtain the necessary heat mentioned above. It does not generate in a small heap made by day to day collection.

Other materials to add are vegetable discards from the kitchen, vacuum cleaner dust, human and animal hair, soaked and torn newspapers and cardboard cartons, and a few small metal cans for minerals. Rusty metal is good, pieces large enough to remove easily.

Never on any account add cooked foods, food scraps (except raw vegetable scraps) or fats or any kind. These produce objectionable smells, attract rodents, and throw a monkey wrench into decomposition.

Tips For Gardeners

The smaller the individual pieces the faster the material decomposes. Long pieces should be chopped up with an axe, or an easier way is to run over it with the rotary mower (detail C) throwing the cutting against a fence, wall, or a temporary fence of a piece of three-ply.

•

In any enclosure, build the heap on the soil after it has been turned over roughly. This permits soil organisms to enter the material and break it down.

Leave some soil on roots of discarded plants to inoculate the heap, or add an occasional sprinkling of the best soil in the garden.

Start the heap with a layer of well mixed loose material. Sprinkle this with a dusting of any complete fertilizer, or apply an activator according to directions or a layer of manure. Water well as in detail D.

Add another layer of wastes, dust with hydrated lime, and water thoroughly. Continue layer by layer, fertilizer and water on one, hydrated lime and water on the next, to a height of at least four feet. Lots of water is essential.

•

In 24 hours the centre should be warm to the hand; in 48 hours it should burn the hand. A week after building, the heat will have dropped to near 80 deg. F and the heap should have dropped to about half its original height.

There are several books in the library describing different methods of composting, elaborate and simple. I have used the method outlined above for some 40 years with success and had a good garden soil in which plants grew without severe attacks from pests or diseases.

WORK FOR WEEK

If frost has blackened dahlias, cut down the plants and lift the tubers for winter storage indoors in a cool, not too dry basement.

Plant daffodil bulbs now and all the narcissi.

As bulbs of the true lilies are available, plant at once to avoid drying and shrivelling of the scales.

Hazelnuts and filberts will soon be ready for harvesting. Their color will be a rich brown. Spread in warmth for several days to dry the shells.

Draw more earth up to celery and leeks. Both are blanched vegetables needing deep soil, and are used in late fall and winter.

Plant out young spring cabbage. A heavy brown paper bag with the bottom opened out, placed around each plant with the top spread flat and held with soil will give sufficient protection while being re-established. The bags will gradually soften and drop around the base of each plant.

Turn over top few inches of vegetable garden soil while it is still workable. This saves compaction of heavier soils, and exposes insect eggs to be destroyed by birds or frost.

Intertherm™
HOT WATER ELECTRIC BASEBOARD HEAT
That Provides
HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING

Why do people have to suffer the discomfort of cold, drafty rooms—when INTERTHERM HOT WATER ELECTRIC BASEBOARD HEATING gives them warmth where it's needed—not up at the ceiling where so much of it is wasted? For unlike central heating systems which heat the ceilings at the expense of the floors—the INTERTHERM provides uniform, floor-to-ceiling heat. Soft, gentle, comfortable, healthful, clean, safe, economical heat. Yet requires no furnace, boiler, pipes, ducts, flues, radiators, chimney or fuel tank.

The Patented Inner Works of the INTERTHERM—Shown in the Diagram Below—Makes this Possible. It consists of a copper tube inside of which an electric heating element and a water and anti-freeze solution — which never needs replenishing — are permanently, hermetically sealed. Electricity heats the water. And the water heats the rooms. Complete, permanently-installed systems for entire homes. Portable, plug-in models for single, hard-to-heat rooms.

GROOMING COURSE

A Bicycle Pump For the Ego

By KATHARINE WHITEHORN
(From London)

You look in the mirror, you groan, you wonder if there isn't something you could do about it, other than putting your head in a gas oven.

One thing women try is joining something: Weight Watchers, for example, or a grooming course, such as the Cherry Marshall one for over-30s that I was around this summer.

At first sight, most of the people at one could do with a dose of the other, too; but maybe more people can take the tactful fashion-and-deportment advice than can stand the revivalist fervor of the Weight Watchers.

It's understandable; they're up against an urge to eat that's almost as strong as sex; but their leaders do rather tend to appear with huge blown-up photographs of themselves Before, and to talk of lettuce and lemon juice as if they were the body and blood of a new religion.

They're probably a lot more successful than the mere diet sheets of the grooming course—but then the motives of the would-be groomed may be less passionate anyway.

What are they? Some have a lack of confidence brought on by years in the back kitchen raising daughters who say 'Oh, Mum! Not that!" or the sort of husband who boosts his own ego by using his wife's as a trampoline.

WISH TO SWING

Some come in from Kenya or Little Wool, Australia, wishing to swing in the London manner.

And plenty are faced by a change—new town, new husband's job or just a new determination to get out of a downtrodden job and grab a man; now's the time, they feel, to get their looks going for them, too.

Something can certainly be done. Makeup can be updated—even the younger ones seemed to come to false eyelashes as to a first communion.

Posture—they're all taught to walk better, and the ones I questioned seemed to think that being able to come into a room with poise was one of the best lessons they learned.

Indeed it's sickening how badly most of us move. I even taught in a charm school once, but even so the teacher on this course sternly said that when I straightened out my Groucho Marx scuttle I'd probably feel as if I were falling over backwards (dead right—only some days later I caught sight of myself in a shop window and I was leaning over backwards.

Even getting these ladies up on a catwalk broke down a lot of shyness—though they were let off those extraordinary stances that models used to show they really are wearing culottes.

STUCK AT 30

Teaching fashion isn't so simple: it's got too much to do with the image women have of themselves.

They don't want to look like teen-agers. Yet some women, by wearing what is "suitable," get stuck at 30 in clothes which others of 50 would consider ageing.

And Audrey Hepburn herself has said looking young is partly a matter of rolling with the fashion tide.

More: most of these women don't really want to turn staggeringly fashionable overnight: they still want to belong in the lives they lead, only being, like George Orwell's pigs, a bit more equal than others.

But at least the school can talk them out of defeatist phrases like "It only looks good on young pretty girls" (all fashions look better on young pretty girls) or "It isn't practical"—as if any women's clothes ever were.

And they can risk a little harsh honesty about shoes, on which over-30s have a blind spot.

LEARN ABOUT COLORS

"You always see your shoes as they were when they were new," a friend once said — and also as they were when you were new: I bet today's brides will go on clomping around in 1970's landing craft, however quickly the new oval toe takes hold.

The school uses scarves to show which colors really suit a woman (and stop her thinking a scarf is just something that hangs limply round the neck when you take off your suit jacket, come to that); it's amazing how many women can't distinguish between a color they like (as for a flower or a sofa) and a color that makes them look more like a sofa than a flower. A group of other women saying "But it looks super on you!" does more good than all the fashion mags in the land.

And do they, in fact, go back to Hampshire and Giggleswick and Potters Bar and stun one and all with their new sleek sleeves? Well, not quite.

Unappreciative husbands take more than that to shift them; and no grooming course can be more than the launching pad in a bid to reach the honeymoon. The course can't provide a new face or a new wardrobe, and the crucial new hairstyle may barely last the week.

LACK COMPETION

And for most, there won't be enough to keep them up to the mark: for without ceaseless competition you just don't get that fine hard polish that some women achieve.

It's the difference between the effort you put into a new outfit — the right tights, eyeshadow, jewel — and the same thing six months later, when the gold chain's bust, you can't find the eyeshadow and these shoes will do all right, just for now.

In offices, you rarely get a stunner among the duds; and no housewife wears rouge to hoe the rosebed unless she's got her eye on the gardener.

But for all that, the picture's cheering: for most of them think it's all done wonders.

They come back, ages later, looking exactly the way they did when they first appeared, but pleased as Judy with their continuing elegance. Flushed with the course, they've had the confidence to behave as if they looked great — and that is half the battle.

Confidence is cheap at any price; and when it comes to that, grooming is in the eye of the horse.

FASHIONS IN WOOL — FOR ART'S SAKE

Model Sandra Hoey, atop Jack Ritchel's Figures in Architecture, models a hand-knit poncho and cap, one of the outfits to be seen at fashions shows at the Art Gallery Monday. The two shows, at 1:30 and 7:30 p.m., are sponsored by the Women's Committee to the Gallery and will feature hand-knit clothes ranging from bikinis to wedding gowns. Mrs. Hoey is convener and the shows have been arranged by Vi Taylor of the Boutique de Laine. Most outfits will be modeled by the women who made them. Sherry will be served at the start of each show. the man who likes midis

There's a man in town who likes midis and wants people to know they'd better accept them.

He called to comment on an article in the Times women's pages suggesting that Women's Wear Daily publisher John Fairchild was responsible for pushing midis at a reluctant public.

"Stop berating Fairchild," he said, his voice rising several decibels. "Fairchild is right.

"Remember how everybody thought the mini was crass and vulgar when it came in? Rembember everybody said they'd never wear it, they didn't have the right legs for it?

"Isn't that what you're all saying now about the midi?

"Well, just you wait till spring and listen to the comments then," he continued.

"After you women start wearing these attractive feminine styles, you'll see the mini disappear and you'll be hearing how crass and vulgar it always was."

He is very firmly anti-mini. His wife has just bought a midi.

"She really looks great in it," he says. (Since she is tall, dark and beautiful, this is possible.)

He also admits he's been seeing a lot of nostalgic movies about the 20s and 30s, which may help to account for his conversion to the Fairchild bandwagon.

YWCA Offers Five New Courses

Aerobics is one of five new courses being offered by the Victoria YWCA in the 1970-71 program.

Mrs. G. C. Main, associate physical and health education director for the women's program, describes the new class in aerobics as a course of exercises designed to condition the heart and lungs, and to promote cardio-vascular fitness.

The exercises are simple enough that class members can work out daily at home and have their progress tested at the weekly sessions.

Three new swim courses are being offered.

Ladies' endurance and survival swimming will teach members such basic techniques as how to remove outer clothing and use it as a flotation device.

Swim for therapy is a half hour when the pool will be reserved for slow traffic—the reserved for slow traffic—the men and women whose doctors have advised them to swim for therapeutic reasons.

Basic diving, for Y members only, will teach the fundamentals of diving.

The Watch Your Weight Club has been re-organized to include half an hour of diet advice and group therapy for overweight women. Guest speakers have been arranged. A nurse will offer advice on eating habits and supervise the weighing and measuring.

After half an hour of exercises designed for weight reduction the class finishes with a swim in the pool.

Registration for the 1970-71 program is being held this weekend and all next week at the YWCA, 880 Courtney St.

Dessert Party On Tuesday

The Association for Childhood Education, Victoria International, is sponsoring a dessert party Tuesday at the Art Gallery, Moss Street, at 7:30 p.m. The event is open to the public.

Free Baby-Sitting At Luncheon Meet

A free baby-sitting service will be available at the Tally-Ho Travelodge, 3020 Douglas Street during the luncheon planned by the Full Gospel Women's Fellowship. The luncheon will be held Tuesday at 11:45 a.m. at the lodge. The guest speaker is Thelma Moe, a Seattle Bible teacher.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Time for another visit to Wilson's! . . .

If you haven't visited Wilson's in the past couple of weeks, we suggest you make a point of dropping in soon because a lot of quite exciting new clothes have been coming in . . . and while some of them will undoubtedly have been snapped up by the time you read this . . . there are certain to be more just as delectable! . . . There's a stunning suit in a bone shade . . . little stand-up pastel mink collar, and silk frog closing and back belt trim . . . Not the sort of thing you'd wear to the supermarket, of course, but perfect for dressy occasions . . . We like the new Cojana coats from England . . . A number of them are in solid colors . . . as opposed to tweeds . . . You'll find blacks . . . browns . . . a lovely deep shade of lilac . . . as well as several misty plaids in avocado and rusty tones . . . A black Mayfair coat has big gold discs for buttons . . . a stiffened band around the bottom which could be removed if you don't care for the midi length . . . A very striking new ensemble is black and white with a hand-woven look . . . long-sleeved dress top all black . . . This is a size 12, and priced at $210 . . . And don't miss seeing Wilson's new orange Clove pomanders from Malta . . . they're adorned with braid in red, green or gold . . . and smell simply heavenly! Also, they discourage moths! . . . W & Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Patou does a knicker suit in poppy red and white tweed . . . short jacket fronted with currant-colored suede.

Let Eaton's cater your wedding reception . . .

Not long ago, we were guests at a truly memorable wedding reception . . . held in one of our local church halls . . . The bride's table was a picture . . . beautifully appointed . . . sparkling with silver and crystal centered with a magnificent wedding cake . . . And the food! Simply delicious, and served to perfection! . . . So impressed were we with all this that we later enquired about the catering . . . and learned that the whole thing had been handled by Eaton's . . . So off we went to chat with Mrs. Robertson at Eaton's Bridal and Gift Registry . . . who arranges and acts as hostess at these Eaton-catered weddings . . . to get the low-down . . . We learned that Eaton's will cater wedding receptions in church halls, private homes, or wherever else facilities are suitable . . . You may choose menus for anything from a tea to a hot dinner . . . or Eaton's will arrange a special menu to suit the client . . . They'll take the whole business in hand, if you wish, with hostess and servers . . . Provide silver, lace cloth, bud vases and tapers for the bride's table . . . silver serving trays, dishes and crystal for everyone . . . Or, if you don't want all this done for you, Eaton's will provide just the food . . . or food with servers . . . If you've a wedding coming up . . . do have a talk with . . . Eaton's Bridal and Gift Registry, 382-7141, local 373.

Elegant stoneware by Denby . . .

From the day Denby Pottery of England first started making their beautiful stoneware more than 150 years ago, shape and design have always been contemporary to the times . . . and this is just as true today as ever it was . . . Montague Bridgman have an especially fine collection of this famous Denby Stoneware . . . which is oven-proof . . . freezer, dishwasher and detergent-proof . . . and so strong it's almost impossible to break . . . It comes in all manner of pieces . . . from place settings to casseroles and platters and bowls . . . to the most wonderfully shaped tea and coffee pots . . . "Arabesque" and "Mayflower" patterns are exclusive to Bridgman's . . . the former a dark brown with rich crimson, yellow and dull gold on all pieces, as well as plain plates . . . The latter, a warm expresso brown, with colorful pattern on plates only . . . "Sherwood" is another lovely design in forest green tones . . . pieces are the same shape as "Mayflower", and mix very well . . . Then there's "Manor Green" . . . especially nice for odd pieces . . . "Ode," plain gold . . . and "Echo", plain blue . . . There are more than 30 different items in the Denby stoneware, and every piece can be bought separately . . . Do see it . . . it will add an elegant new dimension to your table . . . Lovely for gifts, too! . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Velvets with a regal air . . .

For the look of sheer luxury . . . opulence . . . elegance . . . you have to go a long way to beat velvet . . . which is probably why, in former ages, velvet was the favored fabric of the rich and noble . . . Today, thank goodness, it's in practically anybody's reach . . . But we never realized how many different kinds of beautiful velvets there are until we saw the latest arrivals at Saba's . . . who freely admit that they themselves have never had such beautiful velvets before! . . . There are printed panne velvets in paisleys and florals . . . $11 to $16 a yard . . . These drape beautifully, and colors almost glow as they catch the light . . . Plain velvets at $6 come in colors to co-ordinate with these . . . Velvet designs on nylon sheer, in all sorts of color combinations . . . would be lovely for long evening gowns, or pant suits . . . We saw some newly-arrived French velvets which are absolutely crease resistant . . . twist them up as much as you like and they won't show a mark . . . Exotic colors like avocado, crushed raspberry, bottle green, purple . . . 39" and priced at just $6 . . . 54" antique velvets are $10 a yard . . . There are others, too, which we haven't space to tell you about . . . so go see them all at . . . Saba's 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

Duffle coats for the young set . . .

We popped down to Wilson's junior department just as they were bringing in a new shipment of English duffle coats . . . and because these are in such great demand by mothers . . . for their children of all ages . . . we thought you'd be glad to know you can get the real McCoy . . . original Gloverall duffle coats . . . in sizes from 4 to 20, and priced from $29.50 to $42.50 according to size . . . Warm . . . weather proof . . . hard wearing . . . one of these coats is all your child needs to keep him . . . or her . . . cosy and dry this winter come rain, snow or icy winds . . . Gloverall coats are made of heavy loden cloth in camel, brown, grey and navy . . . with attached hoods, real buffalo horn toggles, and rawhide loops . . . Interchangeable for both boys and girls . . . (which is nice because they can be passed down to younger members of the family regardless of sex) . . . Wilson's do sell them out fast, though . . . so don't wait too long if you'd like one for your child . . . We saw some other duffle coats too . . . these from Austria . . . and a bit less expensive than the English coats ($25 to $29.50) . . . Wooden toggles and rope loops . . . separate wool linings, and detachable hoods . . . These come in navy, teal and camel, and in sizes from 6 to 14 at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Tuck-in blouses are back for wear with the longer skirts . . . the look pulled together with a wide-ish belt.

English oak has ageless charm . . .

Next time you're on Fort St., make a point of visiting Home Furniture and take the elevator up to their English Village . . . where you'll see as fine a collection of English oak furniture as any on this continent . . . displayed in a particularly appropriate setting . . . (Some nice oak pieces on the main floor too . . . just enough to whet your appetite for more!) . . . For warmth, charm and a gracious "lived-in" look . . . we think this hand-carved oak . . . faithfully reproducing furniture of a by-gone age . . . cannot be equalled . . . Oak grows on one . . . and its beauty and charm have stood the test of time . . . What's more, it's lower in price than much of the more ordinary furniture . . . and a lot of pieces are cheaper even than good maple . . . We saw a beautiful wine cabinet with hand-carved linenfold design, priced at $275 . . . and no one but Home on the North American continent can sell such a choice little carved oak desk for a mere $219! . . . There are stools with genuine leather tops . . . either plain or braided, with fringe . . . A Gothic hall seat with high back, and lift-up seat . . . a fantastic value at $195 . . . Dozens of pretty small pieces like swivel tables . . . slipper boxes . . . coffin stools . . . grog tables . . . library steps . . . All of them typical Old Country pieces to lend individuality to your home . . . See them at . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

CORNED BEEF BALLS ON RICE RING

Rice Is Nice With Herbs

Rice being bland in flavor, is the perfect foil for herbs and spices. Chili powder, nutmeg, parlic salt, rosemary, marjoram and thyme are but a few that make rice more flavorful. Chili powder, a blend of spices, is known best as an ingredient of Chili Con Carne, but it can also enhance many meat and rice dishes such as the Corned Beef Balls and Rice recipe below.

CORNED BEEF BALLS IN RICE RINGS

12 oz. can corned beef (unchilled)
½ cup fine cornflake or bread crumbs
1 egg beaten
1 Tbsp. dried chopped onion
½ tsp. chili powder
Pinch garlic salt
Freshly ground pepper
Pinch nutmeg
4 cups hot cooked rice (1⅓ cups uncooked)
1 Tbsp. dried parsley flakes
Pinch of saffron (optional)
1 cup drained canned peas
10 oz. can condensed cheddar cheese soup
2 Tbsp. milk
1 tsp. bottled horseradish

Add a bouillon cube or a teaspoon of chicken broth mix as well as salt to water in which you cook the rice. Prepare beef balls by first flaking the corned beef with a fork. Then combine it with crumbs, egg, onion and seasonings. Shape into about 24 small balls. Arrange on lightly greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees until lightly browned — about 12 minutes.

When rice is cooked, combine it with parsley, saffron and peas and press it firmly into 4-cup ring mold. Cover and keep warm in a pan of hot water or a slow oven.

In a saucepan heat soup with milk and horseradish. Unmold rice on serving platter. Fill hole in centre with meat balls and ladle cheese sauce over all. (Makes six servings).

DEAR ABBY . . .

Brother's Keeper

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old happily married woman. My problem is my brother who is 19. Rick was the "favorite" and always knew how to get what he wanted. Mother waited on him hand and foot, and Dad gave him money for just breathing. He was spoiled rotten. For his 16th birthday the folks gave him an expensive car, although his grades were barely passing.

Rick didn't qualify for one of the better schools, so Dad pulled some strings and got him into a junior college. He flunked out and came home. Now my parents have decided to wash their hands of him. My father says a psychiatrist friend of his advised him to throw Rick out and let him sink or swim.

Rick has taken up with some "way out" characters. I'm sure they're going the drug route. Rick has a lot of good in him and I can't stand to see him ruin his life. I want to offer Rick a home with my husband and me. My folks say if I take Rick in they will never speak to me again—that bailing him out now will only convince him that someone will always come to his rescue. I need your help.—Rick's Sis.

DEAR SIS: A spoiled child makes an emotionally crippled adult. Your parents, though well-intentioned, "crippled" Rick, and now they're blaming him because he can't walk straight. I don't know what kind of a psychiatrist would advise a sink-or-swim solution for a young man who has never been taught to swim.

Take Rick on the condition that he gets a job, tries to straighten himself out and becomes a contributing member of society. And if your folks never speak to you again, it will be their loss.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to offer some advice to "Pestered in Summer," whose gabby neighbor leans over the fence and talks a blue streak. Instead of a higher fence, plant a New Dawn rambler rose. It grows fast, has vicious thorns, and beautiful pale pink roses all summer long. Cuttings start readily when planted under glass jars. You could soon have the whole fence covered. Your neighbor won't lean long on those thorns, and the foliage will soon obstruct the view.—Mrs. L.W.R., Clarington, Ohio.

DEAR MRS. R.: Now that's what I call "saying it with flowers."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl with a problem. I have a whole collection of dolls. Some are old and some are new, but they are all in excellent condition. I have doll houses and clothes—lots of them.

My father says I am too old for dolls and he wants me to give them away. I realize I am too old to play with dolls, Abby, but I still like to comb their hair and look at them once in a while. I was thinking I might even want to keep them for my children when I get married. Is that so dumb? I am really very much attached to these dolls. I can't help it. I've had some of them for years.

My father says my dolls and doll houses take up valuable room, but you should see all the junk he has just sitting around.

How can I explain to my parents that I want to keep my dolls?—Confidentially Yours.

DEAR CONFIDENTIALLY: I don't know how many dolls you have, but perhaps there are some you could give away to little girls who have no dolls at all. Why not keep those dolls you are especially "attached to" and give away the rest? And don't be ashamed of "playing" with dolls at your age. Doll collectors come in all ages.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Now Is the Time for Drying Parsley, Sage, Basil and Thyme

By HILDA BEASTALL

The fragrance of drying herbs in the home will win the same approval as their careful use in meal preparation.

A few kinds may be gathered fresh from the garden or balcony box in winter as in summer, but in most parts of Greater Victoria we rely on a supply of home dried herbs for savory smells and flavors in winter.

The first picking and drying is usually at midsummer; the second and last in September.

Herbs are easy to dry.

Those with small leaves like thyme and summer savory need only to be washed, stems and all, as picked and then hung in the warm kitchen.

The bunches can be placed in paper bags to keep off the dust, for it will take a day or two for them to dry. When the leaves are quite crisp, they are stipped from the stems but not powdered.

Flavor is retained much longer if the fnal crushing is done with the fingers when the herb is being used at cooking time.

Larger, thicker or more hairy leaves such as sweet basil, parsley, mint, sage sweet marjoram and lemon balm take longer to dry.

Remove the leaves from the stems and wash. Shake them in a cotton dishtowel to remove excess moisture.

Next spread the sweet basil and sage leaves on a cookie tray and place in a cool oven about 120 deg. F. You may need to leave the oven door unfastened to prevent a rise in temperature, depending on the type of range being used.

Shake the leaves around after a few minutes and you'll be able to guess how close they are to the properly crisp conditon. It should only take an hour, perhaps less.

Again, don't crumble the leaves before storing them. They must go into small jars with screw top lids.

Parsley and mint can be dried with a brighter color by giving them the following simple treatment: Tie each kind into a piece of cheesecloth (or very thin cotton material) and dip, after washing, into a boiling solution of common baking soda. Swish quickly around; then out again. The solution of soda (soda bicarbonate) is 2 level teaspoons to a pint of water.

Drain on a dry dish towel for a few minutes and then spread the leaves on a cookie sheet or pie plate in the cool oven recommended for the leaves which were not soda dipped.

When quite crisp and dry, store in small jars.

Remember to label each container with the herb name, for you won't like coming up with a mint flavor instead of the exotic sweet basil.

Dried herbs must be stored in a dark cupboard. The attractive racks of jars for diplaying herbs on the kitchen counter do not keep the contents as fresh as storage in a cool dark cupboard.

When you prepare your own, they are worth greater care.

Rosemary is one herb which we have fresh all winter by cutting little pieces from this evergreen shrub as wanted, but most of the more popular kinds sooner or later get spoiled by frost or rain.

Women's Institutes: Can They Live Through Urban Sprawl?

By JUDI FREEMAN

Jean Robinson of Sooke is typical of the Women's Institute members on Vancouver Island.

She attends Shirley WI meetings regularly; supports the WI's campaigns; and actively recruits new members.

She is noted for her precise and beautiful embroidery.

Indeed, her stitchery is one of the reasons the Shirley WI is a thriving organization.

Some years ago, its membership had dropped to five.

Mrs. Robinson and several other women became interested in old-style embroidery and crewel work.

Determined to revive interest in the rapidly disappearing art, they offered courses in the different stitches. Now, the Shirley WI has approximately 25 members and just about as many interests.

Mrs. E. G. Woodward, past president of the provincial WI, says Mrs. Robinson is the "epitome of the WI member, working to interest young and old members alike."

Mrs. Robinson tells how Mrs. Woodward and her fellow members define their group: "The Women's Insitute is all things to all women."

PROMOTE FRIENDSHIP

And that's as close a definition as one can find.

The Women's Institutes were formed in 1897 as farm women's groups to promote friendships and give instruction in the home arts.

While the ladies met over coffee and the latest neighborhood news, they also picked up handy hints for the cook, practical nurse, psychologist and home manager that each farm wife represented.

Today, farms are linked to each other and to cities by telephone, radio, TV, and super highways. Rural women are educated and 'with it.'

Are Women's Institutes sill needed?

Members, and the B.C. government, seem to think so. The women firmly state that 'Home and Country' and the WI will never die.

The government, in particular, has a tangible way of showing its support: Money.

B.C. gives each of the 193 women's institutes in the province, with total membership of 4,000, $10 a year; provides a Victoria head office and executive secretary; and oversees all official business under the WI banner.

"The department of agriculture still keeps a paternal eye on the Women's Institutes," says Mrs. Woodward. "Indeed, some of us would like more help from the government, particularly in the form of more home economists."

PROVIDE LECTURERS

Lectuerers in nutrition, health and child care have been the bulk of government help for WIs, just as lecturers in animal husbandry are provided to the Farmer's Institutes.

It's been this way ever since founder Adelaide Hoodless addressed her first group of farm women in Stoney Creek, Ont. on the night of Feb. 12, 1897.

Mrs. Hoodless was convinced that women needed to be taught the basic elements of cleanliness and home arts, and with the help of government supervisor Erland Lee and the Ontario Farmers' Institutes, she formed the first Women's Institute.

Government organizer Laura Rose, helping to establish several more institutes in Ontario, formulated the motto, For Home And Country.

In 1909, Miss Rose came West. The first four WIs formed in B.C. were on Vancouver Island: Lake Hill, now the oldest; Sooke; and Colwood.

Gordon Head WI, the first to be organized in 1909, is now defunct, asis the Metchosin WI, established in 1910.

Miss Rose formed 15 institutes that first year. By 1916, 60 institutes were dispensing friendship and solid advice to the pioneer farm women of the West.

The B.C. government officially recognized the infant group in 1911 with the Agricultural Assistance Act and appointed the WI advisory board.

"It definitely wasn't all heart on the part of the government," says Mrs. Woodward. "The officials could see that a satisfied Mary would keep John down on the farm."

When the British Columbia Women's Institutes met at their 20th biennial conference in June, the "satisfied" delegates tried to work on more than 30 resolutions they wanted to present to the government.

Len Johnson, retiring provincial agriculture supervisor of WIs, pointed out that the women had breached parliamentary procedure with two resolutions they had passed, after a full morning spent discussing them.

The women promptly voted the offending resolutions out of existence.

But the delegates really couldn't be blamed for the slip-up. Their hearts were not in the conference room at UBC, but the small room adjacent.

There, the lifeline of the 193 WIs could be traced from embroidered aprons to crocheted doilies, from traditional crewel-worked curtains to modern shoulder bags.

HANDICRAFTS IMPORTANT

The women, freed from long business sessions, made their way to this room. Here, they examined the mill felt ravellings worked into rugs by the members of the Delta WI. They learned how to make a handbag from a $1.50 worth of upholstery webbing.

And, most interesting, they could see what those in the far reaches of the province were making.

The handicrafts were, and still are, an important part of the WI program. The hobbies take the women away from their work for awhile, and give them a reason to attend lectures and programs.

Most important, however, is the fund-raising aspect of these handicrafts. When an institute holds its fall bazaar or spring tea, the hand-done articles are snapped up.

Money raised usually goes to "good works" or charities.

Chief among these are the Queen Alexandra Solarium for Crippled Children in Victoria and the Vancouver Children's Hospital, both of which the BCWI is credited with establishing.

The women still support the hospitals with money and crafts, although the main financial burden is now carried by the provincial government.

The impression one gets of the WI is of a vaguely government-dependent group of farm women interested in keeping their 'Home and Country' together. But what is happening to the organization as rural areas begin to slide into suburbs?

Mrs. Woodward admits that the image of the WI hasn't changed over the years and some older members are "hidebound." This stops many younger women from joining.

Then there is general talk of most women's groups fading because their interests are too narrow and old-fashioned for the younger generation.

"In some ways this is true," says Mrs. Woodward. Four or five WIs have folded in the past few years, and the membership is getting older.

The Brendwood WI had 32 members four years ago. Today, there are nine women left in the group.

Provincial president for 1970, Mrs. John Mertler of Fort St. John, says dropping BCWI membership is due to the completion of the Hugh Keenleyside Dam in 1968. The disruption of villages and farms made four institutes obsolete.

LOOK TO FUTURE

Otherwise, new members and institutes are appearing in the Caribou and Bulkley-Tweedsmuir areas.

"Our national organization wants us to change our 'jams and jellies' image," says Mrs. Mertler. "We are looking to the future."

She points to the resolutions the convention considered. The BCWI went on record against oil drilling off the B.C. coast and unsightly bottle littering.

They were for more stringent water license qualifications; more storage dams on the Thompson and Fraser rivers; more garbage disposal areas near government subdivisions; and more aid to enable every household in B.C. to obtain electricity.

Mrs. Mertler and her publicity chairman, Irene Stewart of Ganges, are emphatic when they say the BCWI will continue to grow.

"The future of B.C. is in the north," Mrs. Stewart says for both of them. "That's where WI membership is growing — among the farm families settling the areas."

MISPLACED IN CITY

Mrs. Woodward, however, sees a future for the farm-oriented group in the cities.

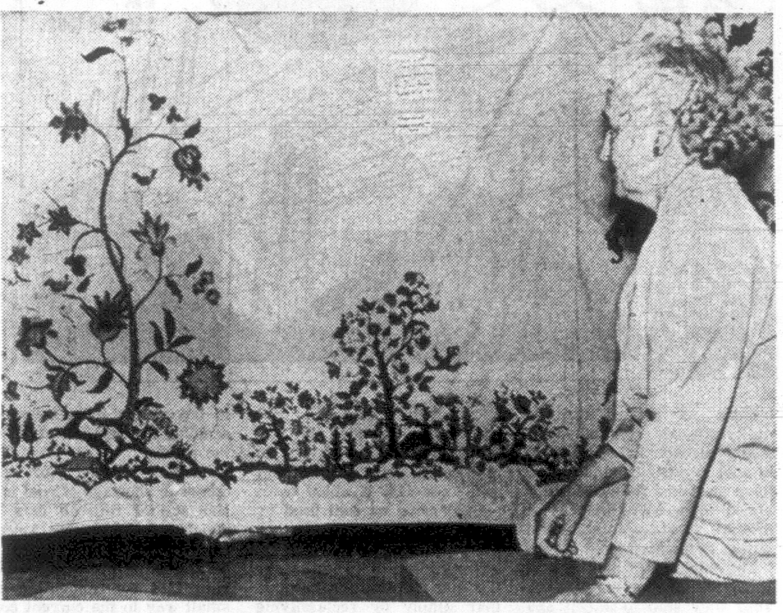
"I would like to see the earlier concept of the WI aimed at the rural women be changed to fit the city woman. Many city women are rural women misplaced and they need the comfort and familiarity of the WI," she says.

In addition, the pioneering spirit of self-education in WI form might catch on in the poorer urban areas.

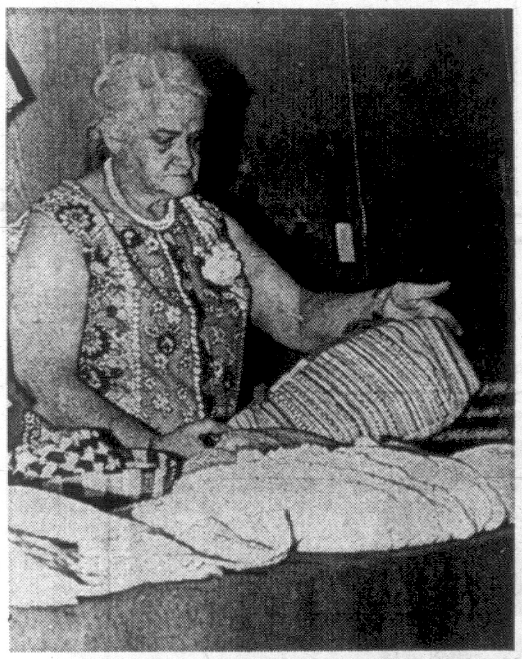
"These women might not like the authority image of the welfare department," she says, "but an independent body of institutes would be able to help them."

Optimism, and everlasting faith that 'Home and Country' are solid principles to adhere to, permeate the Women's Institutes.

"I don't think the Women's Institutes will ever die," states Mrs. Woodward. "There is a corner where we are still needed, where pioneering is needed."



Mrs. William Bird, life member of Sayward Women's Institute and member of the Campbell River WI, admires original crewel drapes, designed and worked by Irma Poyntz of the Campbell River WI.



Jean Robinson of Sooke is shown setting up displays in the crafts room at the 20th biennial convention of the British Columbia Women's Institutes, held in June at Totem Park, University of British Columbia. Mrs. Robinson holds a handbag she made which features different embroidery stitches.

New Book Links Industry, Travel

Travel Industry Minister Ken Kiernan turns author in a 100-page book on the outdoors of B.C. issued Thursday by his department.

The book, second volume of "This . . . Is British Columbia," has a general conservation theme written by Kiernan. The book is subtitled "Our Natural Heritage."

It will sell for $2 in the soft-cover edition, of which 100,000 will be printed, and $4 in the hard-cover version, of which 5,000 have been printed. There have been 46,600 advance orders by distributors.

Volume 1 of the series was primarily a pictorial book and sold about 100,000 copies.

Kiernan said Thursday the new book is intended "to entertain, educate and involve" people. It contains 115 full-color photographs from Beautiful B.C. magazine.

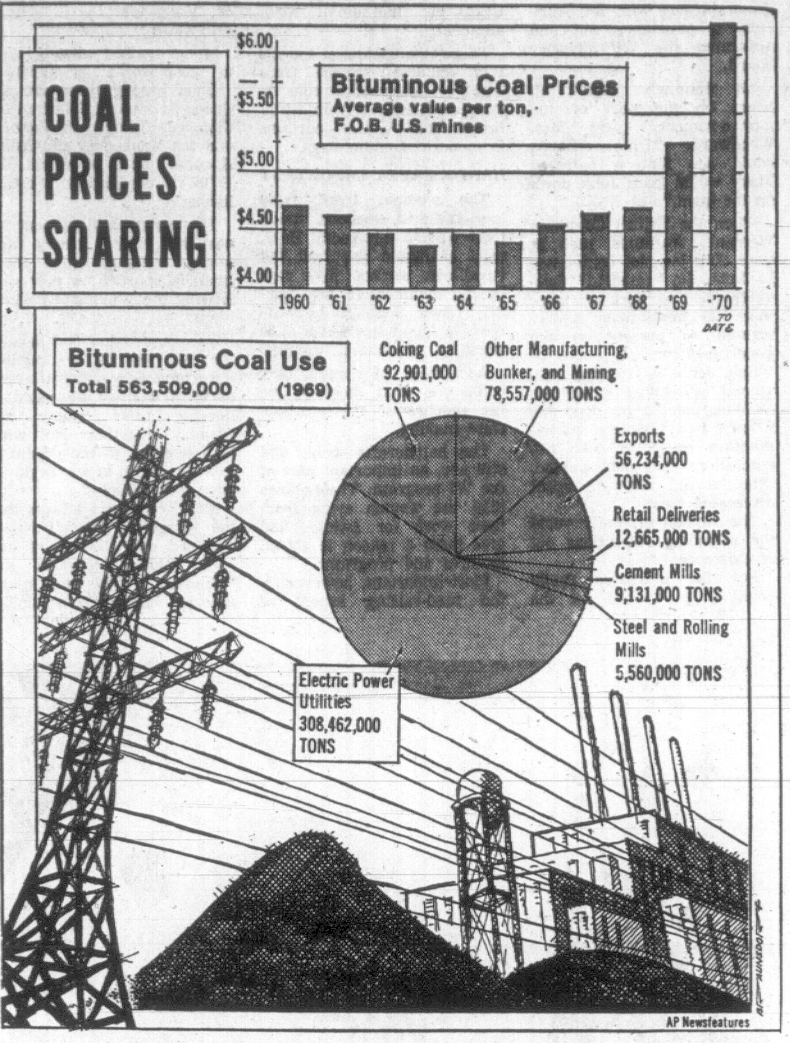
GRATE STUFF, THAT COAL

1,000-Year Supply but Price Burns



AP Newsfeatures

By The Associated Press

Coal experts have identified deposits in the United States which are expected to last 1,000 years. But at the same time, a shortage of coal is driving prices up to unprecedented heights.

Although the average price of coal used by steel companies and utilities around the nation has not been calculated for the past year, it is believed to have been in the neighborhood of $5.25 a ton. That compares with $4.67 a ton in 1968. This year, it is estimated, the price will be close to $6.25 a ton.

An increase of $1 per ton in the price of such coal over one year is substantial, considering that in 1960 the price was about $4.70 a ton and had dropped to about $4.45 by 1965.

Why should there be 1,000 years worth of coal ready to be removed from the earth, and at the same time a shortage of coal on the market that is driving prices of the basic commodity skyward?

A major reason is that over the past decade, there have been many rosy predictions about the coming preeminence of nuclear power for generating electricity and other uses. Planning for new coal production took those predictions into account, but, unfortunately they were too optimistic. The nuclear generating plants did not spring into existence as quickly as predicted, and the coal industry was left with a shortage of facilities for producing coal.

But there have been other reasons. They include a sudden consciousness for mine safety, which is causing mining companies considerable new expense they never had to worry about before and is leading some companies to abandon some of their mines as too uneconomical to work.

Another reason is that many coal companies have found it more profitable to export great amounts of coal — at great prices — to such nations as Japan. Electric utility officials have called for sharp restrictions on exports of coal to other countries, and have predicted that if it is not ended soon, there may be a drastic shortage of electric power by this winter.

The coal companies defend themselves by saying that the stuff they ship to Japan and other industrialized countries is a high grade of coal specifically intended for refining into coke for use in manufacturing steel. That coal, they say, is about twice as expensive as coal used by domestic utilities, and they wouldn't want to use it anyway. But the utilities say the coal industry gets around that simply by reclassifying the same grade they are used to buying for the purpose of sending it overseas at twice the price.

Another reason for the domestic shortage of coal is a shortage of railroad cars in which to haul it. With American railroads in sad shape, a serious shortage of hopper cars has contributed in no small way to the current coal shortage.

SEX SYMBOL SOPHIA SAYS:

'Spaghetti Helped Fill Me Out'

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Sophia Loren, holding a news conference before 6,000 fans at Radio City Music Hall, discussed the issues.

Spaghetti is good for toddlers, she said, and the maxi is OK — if it has a slit.

The Italian star, in town with her husband and son for the New York debut of her film Sunflower, answered questions from more than 100 reporters at a combination news conference and jam-packed public appearance on the flower-filled stage.

The fans, mostly middle-aged, began lining up outside the theatre shortly after 7 a.m. and had the famous midtown moviehouse filled three hours later.

Why did they stand on the long, hot line?

Sophia is beautiful, sexy and voluptuous, was the composite male response.

"And she keeps her clothes on," a housewife from Queens added emphatically. "She doesn't go running around in the nude."

Miss Loren, in a cherry-colored tunic, black slacks and jewelled necklace, was asked about being a sex symbol.

"What's wrong with it?" the long-haired actress said with a shrug of her shoulders and a giggle as the crowd roared its approval.

Fans booed when a reporter asked whether she, the mother of a small son, would appear nude in a picture. She replied that skin is more "natural than crime and violence" and she wouldn't mind if it was done tastefully.

Miss Loren quickly dismissed questions on the women's liberation movement, saying:

"A woman shouldn't forget her duties and responsibilities as a woman."

The ideal woman, she said, takes care of her physical appearance, is not boring and "shows intelligence or does not show it if she has too much."

On the subject of spaghetti, another crowd pleaser, Miss Loren said her son Carlo Jr., almost 2, liked it and added: "It helped fill me out."

Ottawa Fish Talkers Not Talking at All

OTTAWA — Participants in the Canadian-Russian talks on west coast fishing problems were not biting at reporters' question today.

"Well the weather's nice outside and the atmosphere is friendly inside too," was the most informative comment from several delegates as the two groups met for their second session behind closed doors.

However, it was learned that a militant group of self-invited west coast fishermen have been admitted to the talks as official advisers to the federal government negotiating team.

This brings the Canadian group to a total strength of 27. Facing them are six senior officials and experts from the ministry of fishing in Moscow.

The newcomers in the Canadian group include Skip Butterfield, John King, Roy Robinson, Elling Reite, Barry Robinson and Gerry Caborin. They were among the fishermen who organized the 300-boat "sail-in" last month in Victoria to protest the Russian trawler fleet's tactics.

They joined the 13 selected representatives of Canadian fishermen and companies acting as a consultative backup group for the eight Canadian government officials in the talks.

The meeting was called to try to iron out Canadian complaints that the Russians are threatening perch, hake and herring stocks by relentless overfishing as well as harassing smaller Canadian boats through a series of "accidents" at sea.

Sessions are expected to break off for today and then resume throughout next week with possibly an interim joint communique and a closing official statement to reveal results of the talks.

In the meantime all delegates are keeping mum as requested by protocol officers.

Suicide Rate On the Way Up

Illegitimate births and suicides are on the rise in British Columbia, according to statistics released Friday by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

Illegitimate births stood at 13.4 per cent of live births in 1968 and rose to a preliminary estimated figure of 13.7 in 1969, sell up from 12.7 in 1967.

The suicide rate of 15,2 per 100,000 in 1968 was the highest since 1953. It soared to 16.1 in 1969, according to preliminary estimates.

Heart disease caused the largest number of deaths in 1968, followed by cancer, strokes and accidents.

The birth rate hit its lowest point since the Second World War — 16.8 per 1,000 compared with the national average of 17.6 in 1968. The preliminary 1969 figures show the B.C. rate up to 17.1.

The death rate was 8.4 per 1,000 in 1968, close to the record low of 8.3 established in 1967.

Sea Cadets Honored At Dinner

Sea cadets who performed the 1970 series of sunset ceremonies were honored Thursday night at a wind-up dinner in the Empress Crystal Ballroom.

Guest of honor Mayor Courtney Haddock said that when the cadets first took over the ceremony some years ago the performance was "awful," but that in 1970 it was "the best anywhere in Canada."

Haddock promised continued support from Victoria for the ceremonies, which last year numbered 23.

MUSHOOMS, CAR DEALER ON CARPET

CHICAGO (UPI) — James Motycka of suburban Berwyn bought a new car a while back. A week later he found 25 mushrooms growing from the carpeting in the rear.

Still later the infestation had grown to 50 fungi, ranging up to an inch and a half long.

Mrs. Motycka said she hates mushrooms but still likes the car.

Health Courses Set To Start Next Month

The fall program of the health education centre, 3019 Shakespeare opposite Hillside Shopping Centre, will start next month.

It is organized by a group of doctors, social workers and others. There is no charge and anyone can attend.

On Mondays — Oct. 5, 12, 19, 26 and Nov. 2 — the course will deal with exercise and health including weight control and how to keep fit.

On Tuesdays — Oct. 6, 13, 20, 27 and Nov. 3 — the course will be devoted to dental problems and cancer in women.

Wednesdays — Oct. 7, 14, 21, 28 and Nov. 4 — will be about skin care.

Thursdays — Oct. 8, 15, 22, 29 and Nov. 5 — will deal with heart disease.

The fifth series — Nov. 9, 10, 11 and 12 — will be concerned with food and nutrition, presented by Dorothea Van Gunday Jones, nutritionist and editor, from the International Nutrition Research Foundation in Arlington, Calif.

The sixth series will be about smoking—do you want to quit? It will run Nov. 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19.

All courses start at 7:30 p.m.

End Near To Regional Hospital?

The next few days could bring a "tragic end" to the regional hospital concept in the Victoria area, Dr. George Scott Wallace, Social Credit MLA for Oak Bay, warned Thursday night.

His warning about the "very, very serious situation" stirred the Oak Bay Social Credit Association to draft and pass a resolution affirming the principle of regional control of hospital planning.

The resolution will go to the provincial party's annual convention in November in Vancouver.

Wallace told the meeting the capital region hospital board "might as well give up" if Health Minister Ralph Loffmark overrules it in the current dispute with St. Joseph's Hospital over its planned expansion.

MEET LOFFMARK

The hospital society and regional officials were to meet with Loffmark today on the subject.

Wallace criticized the hospital for "repeatedly" going over the head of the regional board to Health Minister Loffmark and endangering the principle of regional planning.

The regional board last month killed St. Joseph's planned expansion on adjacent property after months of tangling.

Wallace said he wasn't involved in the dispute but felt the bitterness and mistrust that have developed could be solved in amicable negotiations without risking the destruction of the regional concept.

"The differences aren't nearly as wide as has been interpreted," he said, blaming both sides for the dispute.

The resolution to back the regional concept came from the floor of the meeting, attended by about 30 persons at St. Aidan's United Church Hall.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies were generally clear over southern and central B.C. early this morning but cloudiness persisted along the north coast and in the Bulkley Valley. Temperatures at 3 a.m. ranged from 32 at Cranbrook to 56 at Prince Rupert.

A stationary ridge of high pressure over the interior will keep skies generally sunny Sunday in southern and central sections of the province. However, it will remain mostly cloudy along the north coast as an onshore flow of moist air continues.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Now is the time to make jam and if you are the domestic type who does so you must follow grandma's advice which was "never make jam or jelly or fudge when it rains."

Careful review of the scientific knowledge concerning the making of both jams and fudge has not revealed the reasons why grandmother's words of caution were timely. What possible effect could increased relative humidity have on the chemistry going on within the cooking pot? The boiling point is altered only a degree or two during rain, which is not enough to botch the job.

But since Jam-making and judge-making involve working with sugar at high temperatures and then allowing them to jell at lower temperatures, the outside weather really must affect those processes in some fashion.

Good cooks say that jellies and fudge do not set correctly during storms and any grandmother will tell you that's exactly what happens.

Police Court

A 24-year-old woman was fined $250 in provincial court Friday after pleading guilty to a charge of theft under $50 — stealing four heads of cabbage and some carrots.

When Charlotte A. Croquet, 611 Admirals Road, a food handler, was asked by Judge William Ostler why she had taken the vegetables from a parked delivery van, she replied: "I thought they were good vegetables and I helped myself, which is wrong, I know."

★ ★ ★

Arthur Goertsen, Metchosin, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was fined $400. His licence was also suspended.

Police said Goertsen backed his car from a parking lot and damaged two parked cars.

★ ★ ★

Thomas James Lemery, 26, 2174 Cadboro Bay Road, was also fined $300 for impaired driving.

Move On, Judge Orders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Kelly, 31, of Buffalo, N.Y., was found guilty Friday of obstructing police in a downtown demonstration and was ordered to leave British Columbia before midnight Monday.

"You have abused our hospitality and I have no intention of sending you to jail to become a further burden on the taxpayer,' said provincial judge John Davies.

"I note from the presentence report that you intend to go to Europe, take up professional boxing and eventually live in Switzerland . . . I see no reason why you should remain here."

DO YOU KNOW?

The fur industry has stopped inflation. Prices are Lower now than they were in 1950. Reason why? Better control of production.

FOR SIX VIOLENT DAYS THEY SURVIVED IN AMMAN

Newsman Asked for Bread—And Got a Bullet

The following story is from Ibrahim Noori, a 40-year-old Pakistani who has worked for Reuters for the last 12 years covering the mercurial situation in most Arab countries.

By IBRAHIM NOORI

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters) — Mohammed Attallah, Reuters chief correspondent in Jordan, asked a soldier for bread. He got a bullet instead.

It richocheted off the office wall and a splinter hit Attallah in the neck.

"You fire at us and expect us to give you bread," the soldier shouted, even though none of us had a gun.

For six days Attallah, two Morse operators, a messenger and myself have shared the experience of the 500,000 people of Amman—an ordeal of fear, hunger, and total isolation in a city torn by shells and machine-gun fire.

Through the windows of the office, a limestone villa standing on the exposed hilltop of Jebel Amman, we could see columns of smoke rising above the capital.

The whole building shook as armored cars posted nearby opened up on guerrilla positions.

COUNT SHELLS

When the fighting started early Thursday we counted the shells exploding on the hilltop. We soon lost count.

As I crouched on the floor in a corner of the office one night listening to a transistor radio a bullet bounced off a metal stove beside me.

The five of us kept crawling from corner to corner of the office as the battle raged outside.

Through the nights without any light but the dull glow of fires burning in the city, we huddled in a small hallway outside the office bathroom.

For the local staff the fear of death and the ever-growing hunger were overlaid by anxiety for their wives and children living in guerrilla-held areas being battered by army guns.

None of us had ever been so frightened—or so hungry—before.

PLAYCARDS

We played cards hour after hour to calm our nerves, and to help us forget the pangs of hunger.

On the first day of the fighting the five of us lived on two cans of corned beef, some bread and cheese and two bottles of beer.

They next day there was no bread, but a few tomatoes and cucumbers and another can of corned beef.

We risked bullets the third day to beg a plate of rice from a neighbor.

On the fourth day a Bedouin soldier gave us a loaf of bread and some tomatoes.

On the fifth day Attalah tried to get some more food from the soldiers and nearly lost his life.

That day we lived on a few pieces of stale crusts found on a dusty shelf. We toasted them over a camping stove. They tasted delicious with a cup of tea.

That night the Tunisian charge d'affaires, who lives next door, sent us over two packs of cigarettes and a bowl of hot soup.

Today the curfew was eased and Attallah and the other staff left for the perilous journey across town to homes that may lie in ruins.

'Political Pollution' Explained

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — George Tatlock, president of the Manitoba Insurance Agents Association, described the recent confrontation of the insurance industry with the NDP government of Manitoba as a soul-destroying experience and his first exposure to "political pollution."

Tatlock made his remarks at the convention of the New Brunswick Insurance Agents Association in Moncton.

Tatlock said political pollution is "a system where dogma and expediency are deemed more important than the genuine well-being of the public."

He warned the agents that such pollution was not merely a Manitoba phenomenon or an NDP phenomenon but threatened each provice in Canada and thus the insurance agents' very existence.

Parking Extended

VANCOUVER (CP) — Woodward Stores Ltd. plans a $2 million parking arcade with space for 600 cars and Sunday and night-time parking. The arcade will be faced with old brick to fit into the historic Gastown area in which it will be located.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

☆ ☆ ☆

Tonight

GALLOPING GOURMET 6:30 p.m., Channel 2. Ever had a stuffed salmon? Salad? If not . . . well, even if you have . . . tonight the galumphing gourmet is going to show you how to do it right.

THE ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Liberace and Billy Daniels present quite a study in contrasts as tonight's guests. And an even wider variety of styles comes from Ike and Tina Turner and the Ikettes. They swing to "Higher" and are joined by Andy for "Country Man-City Girl." Jonathan Winters also guests in another of his periodic appearances, helping Andy with the opening and later joining the Weirdos. Daniels offers his classic version of "That Old Black Magic," and Liberace gets serious long enough to play "Moonlight Sonata."

PRO FOOTBALL 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Hamilton and Edmonton meet at Edmonton in what could be a critical match for the Vancouver Lions, still hanging on in second place by the skin of their fangs. Hamilton is coming up fast, and a win tonight could make all the difference.

THE MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW 8 p.m., Channel 8; 9:30 Channel 7. The kind of shallow writing contained in this script is not going to help Miss Moore become a world beater. The girls get down to cases here, coming right out and admitting they are looking for a man. After the admissions they compile a list of eligibles and learn that the available men are exactly two, one for each.

ADAM-12 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. This is a light and easy episode presenting officers Reed and Malloy with an unusual problem. When arresting a drunken motorist they could have yelled "we've got you covered." The man steps from his car in his birthday suit, having forgotten to get dressed after a midnight dip. Sidney Miller plays the drunk.

ARNIE 9 p.m., Channel 7. Herschel Bernardi is again appropriately confused and vexed by one of the facts of executive life that is most frustrating: income taxes. Like many another man who has finally found himself in a high-income bracket, Arnie suddenly discovers how much money he can make and how little he can take home. He even learns that he was richer when he was a dock foreman in actual cash income than he is with his big salary boost.

HOWDY. 9:30 p.m., Channel 4. Imagine a first-class segment on "Hee Haw" that was good enough to stretch into an hour musical variety special, and you've got this program. It begins in New York where a decision is made to originate a show from TV station H.O.W.D.Y. in a small town named Mildew. The program then switches there with Ferlin Husky playing the local emcee as he hosts the program. The program has a sizable cast, including Glenn Ford as the town founder, Nanette Fabray as Dr. Martha, heroine of the local soap opera, Terry-Thomas, the conductor of the Mildew Symphony, and Lyle Talbot as the local inventor-eccentric. There are also small bits of comedy from Jimmy Durante, Henry Fonda, Jack Jones, Phil Silvers, Eva Gabor, Eddie Albert and Barbara Eden. Ferlin Husky's narrating chores are interrupted for one song, "Walk Through This World with Me."

MANNIX 10 p.m., Channel 7. Jo Van Fleet, Jack Carter and Robert Reed are the cause for this episode being a step above the average for this series. Mannix is once again in trouble with the law, being suspected of jewel robbery, and, possibly, a murder. When his license is suspended, a gangster's widow comes to his aid, offering him a job as her bodyguard. Actually, the offer is a cover through which the detective is to be involved in another crime.

☆ ☆ ☆

Sunday

GUNSMOKE 5:30 p.m., Channels 6 and 8. Richard Kiley appears in a guest role as a gunfighter who has struck it rich. He's making a sketchy living as a bounty hunter when he captures the son of a wealthy rancher . . . and thoughts of blackmail immediately enter his mind.

THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF DISNEY 6 p.m., Channel 2; 7:30, Ch. 5. "The Boy Who Stole the Elephant" (Part II). Take one small boy and one big elephant, and start them out on a cross-country journey, alone and on foot, and be prepared for anything. That's what happens when Davey (Mark Lester) takes Queenie and runs away from the circus, rather than see her sold. June Havoc and David Wayne are starred as the circus owners.

WILD KINGDOM 7 p.m., Channel 5. Marlin Perkins and Jim Fowler really put on the theatrics in this episode. For one thing, Marlin captures a giant octupus with his bare hands, which sounds incredible. Actually, a "giant" octupus is not the awesome size we see in drawings. In another segment, a fishnet for rare fish comes up with a sizable catch. Then Jim gets fowled in the net, along with a pack of sharks and what a merry mixup that is.

THE YOUNG REBELS 7 p.m., Channel 4, "The Ring of Freedom." The British have taken the Liberty Bell down from Independence Hall for a dual purpose: to destroy the symbol of freedom and to melt it down for cannon ammunition. The Yankee Doodle Trio urge General Lafayette to free them so they can recover the Bell and bring it back to Philadelphia, a delicate course of action since the British expect such an action to take place and are prepared for it.

LASSIE 7 p.m., Channel 7. There'll be oohs and aahs aplenty across this entire country as the wounded but acutely aware Lassie gives birth to her three near perfect collie puppies.

THE ED SULLIVAN SHOW 8 p.m., Channel 2, 6, 7, 12. Our stone-faced host is making good his boast of presenting a series of specials instead of straight variety shows this season. Tonight, it's "Holiday on Ice" with the full hour devoted to that famed revue. Besides the skaters and corps de ballet, guest stars include Bobby Vinton, Karen Wyman and the singing group, Rare Earth. The revue highlights include separate tributes to French chantuse Edith Piaf, and Sonja Henie, plus a Russian Cossack production, the Cinderella story and a comedy-on-ice routine.

THE FBI 8 p.m., Channel 4, "The Traitor". An elevator accident has Inspector Erskine hurrying to Boston. One of the victims was found with highly confidential documents on his person, and it appears he was mixed up in espionage. As he delves into the possibilities, Erskine finds the principles have not separated industrial espionage from acts that are traitorous. Bradford Dillman guests as the scientist who discovered, too late, the differences.

BONANZA 9 p.m., Channel 5. "The Weary Willies". The men of the Ponderosa and the people of Virginia City are at odds again, only this time it appears that the Cartwrights may be wrong. A group of young, itinerant ex-soldiers are camping on Ponderosa property and the townspeople fear them. When they ask Ben to clear them out, he reverses their action by offering to help the young men. His good faith in them seems misplaced when a girl in town is attacked.

THE SUNDAY NIGHT MOVIE 9 p.m., Channel 4. "Hurry Sundown" (1967) Michael Caine and Jane Fonda. Michael Caine fans won't care for the disagreeable characterization he creates in this adaptation of the K. B. Gilden best-seller. It's a story of tensions in a small Georgia town brought about by social and racial problems, aggravated by financial greed. The immediate problem is land, and a major real estate deal being pushed by Caine. In order to finalize it, he must get two parcels, besides his own, held by a black, and a white farmer who have joined forces to thwart him. His wife (Jane Fonda) turns against him, too, and he resorts to violence. The sizable cast includes Diahann Carroll, Robert Hooks, John Philip Law, George Kennedy, Burgess Meredith, Jim Backus, Robert Reed and Faye Dunaway.

HAGGARD SWEEPS CMA NOMINATIONS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer and writer Merle Haggard has been nominated nine times in six of the 11 categories for this year's Country Music Association awards.

Johnny Cash, who swept five of the 11 awards last year, picked up four nominations for the Oct. 14 presentation, along with Charley Pride and Conway Twitty, also with four each.

Haggard was nominated for Entertainer of the Year, single record two times, album two times, Song of the Year two times and male vocalist and, with his wife Bonnie Owens, duo.

CMA officials say the final ballots for the awards are in and are being counted, with the deadline for voting by CMA members set for Oct. 7.

BOB AND RAY—The Two and Only

NEW YORK (AP) — Radio found them, TV nabbed them and now Broadway is lucky to have those masters of the soft-sell gag and casual comedy, Bob Elliott and Ray Goulding.

The pair of farceurs, with nothing but a stageful of attic junk for maniacal trimming, opened Thursday night at the Golden Theatre in a totally ingratiating gloom-chaser, Bob and Ray—The Two and Only.

As anyone who has tuned in on the airwaves since 1951 should know, Bob and Ray mine mirth from everyday exasperations, the crises of trivia and embarrasing moments that all of us share.

A lot of their interview sketches are corny, certainly, and escapist. The closest they come to topical events is a hokum beauty contest winner and tangentially, political hanky-panky.

But one would have to be dour indeed to sit unmoved through that story of the inverted animal act wherein the chief poodle gives its trainer a martini for jumping through the hoop, or the cosmic absurdity about a leading man who forgot his lines for 40 minutes on opening night. Then there's a man with wild boards in his apartment and a baseball gaffer who threw his bat into the sky.

DOES YOUR LIFE NEED NEW MEANING?

Maybe what you need is a new concept of what life is. It begins with the Bible, which tells us that God, Spirit, is the source and substance of life.

An understanding of the spiritual nature of life can bring freshness to your daily experience. It has brought healing to many people today.

Mrs. Florence C. Southwell, a teacher and practitioner of Christian Science, will tell how in a lecture titled "Awakening to Newness of Life."

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: We brought home this strange-looking little stray dog a couple of years ago. He has become a good pet but we would like to ask one question about him. He has this strange skin which seems to stretch and stretch and stretch — but it always snaps back. Is there such a thing as a rubber-skinned dog—S.A.

DEAR S.A.: Cugis hyper elastica is an extremely rare congenital condition, but it does occur in dogs. If your dog is such a rare one he would, indeed, have hyper-elastic skin capable of stretching far beyond normal limits and, fortunately, capable of returning to near normalcy when released.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: How do you handle a boy friend who is hung up on fish? He's got fish tanks all over his apartment. They are practically all he ever talks about. And most of the silly things are so small they wouldn't even make a meal for my cat. Then the other night he couldn't take me to dinner because he had just paid a $15 vet bill. For a fish? He wasn't handing me a line, either. I saw the fish and I know he spent half the night sitting up with it. I'd like to know if many fish need this kind of attention — and not incidentally, do you think the fish I'm hooked up with here is worth landing?—B.A.

DEAR B.A.: Fortunately few failing fish need night nursing, or at least few benefit from it enough to make the sacrifice worth while. I can't say whether your friend was following doctor's orders (the veterinarian's) in staying up half the night with a sick fish but he may well have been. You are apparently considering these fish on the basis of cat food and-or competition, and this is understandable. Your evening's sacrifice in food and friendly companionship may have helped save a $250 fish — some bring that price or more. A far as friendships are concerned, it's just possible one who has that much compassion for a cold fish might prove particularly comforting to a warm-blooded species, especially if properly reoriented.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Tailspin is a very average cat. No problems. I just want to know the best kind of brush to use one him.—C.S.

DEAR C.S.: The best kind of brush for most cats is a comb with round teeth, smoothed on the ends, spaced to about 12 teeth per inch.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Winifred, my waltzing mouse, doesn't dance. Does this mean she is sick?—G.T.

DEAR G.T.: Depends on whether Winifred's a wallflower all of the time or only part of the time. Waltzing mice, even the most enthusiastic dancers, do take plenty of time out for other activities. If she is eating, eliminating and resting in the normal fashion, your mouse is probably all right and just doesn't care to dance.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Recently, for the third time in the last few months, my dog has been treated for an infection. Different infections, I guess. But he has been treated with penicillin before and now this last time penicillin didn't work and the doctor had to switch to a different antibiotic. I thought the second time he used the antibiotics it wasn't too good an idea. I was afraid this sort of thing might happen but he said it was necessary. Now what is going to happen when my dog becomes resistant to the good effects of this antibiotic. Pretty soon we will run out of antibiotics and then what wll we do?—E.J.

DEAR E.J.: Hopefully your dog will run out of infections long before the doctor runs out of antibiotics to combat them with. You can be sure the doctor is well aware of the hazards of over-use of antibiotics and the dangers of development of bacterial-resistant strains. However, when antibiotics are the most effective weapons available to fight an infection, it is logical to use them. Infections resistant to antibiotics ranging from penicillin through the tetracyclenes even including chloronphenacol, streptomycin and amphycillin may be encountered. And a bacterial resistant strain may occur in your pet even though he had never had any of the antibiotics in his system before.

* * *

Canaries tend to get down in the beak during the moulting season and to express their enervation by ceasing their snging. However, by providing a diet of up to 10 per cent protein, you can offset the effects from loss of feathers — which are largely protein themselves. Optimum protein may not keep your canary in full feather, but it is likely to keep him in good spirits and good voice.

Public Speaking Classes Open For Young Boys

The Victoria, Oak Bay and Evening Optimist Clubs will sponsor public speaking classes for boys between 11 and 16 years of age, classes being held every Tuesday from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. in Oaklands School.

Registration will be held Oct. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the school and the classes will continue from then until April 15.

The instructor will be Rev. F. W. Hayes.

Further information may be obtained by phoning A. W. Collier.

White Collar Crime Pinpointed As Society's Biggest Threat

(Times News Services)

MONTREAL — White collar crime and the Swiss bank account are the greatest criminal threats to society, Canadian chartered accountants were told Friday at their 68th annual conference.

The [illegible] Institute of Chartered Accountants was urged by Chief Inspector H. Patenaude, co-ordinator of the Quebec Research Bureau on Organized Crime, to be the "eyes and ears" of law enforcers in stamping out white collar crime.

He spoke on the subject Organized Crime and the Financial Executive, and said he believed the illegal use of Swiss bank accounts illustrates "perhaps better than any other white collar crime, what the poor would call a 'rich man's crime' which frequently goes unpunished.

"It is a white collar crime whose dimensions and seriousness have only recently begun to be appreciated ... the most difficult to investigate and uncover.

"And perhaps most disturbing ... the persons who use these secret accounts are all too frequently highly respected corporate executives, businessmen, brokers, accountants and lawyers—men who would be the first to complain about a robbery or mugging in their neighborhood," Patenaude said.

EVADE TAXES

He said secret bank depositors include not only hoodlums of organized crime but stock swindlers, corporate officers profiting from inside information, businessmen hiding wealth from tax collectors and "enormous numbers of stock market investors who, through foreign banks, evade income taxes on their trading profits."

They account for tax loss in the millions of dollars, he said.

The officer also drew a parallel between the organization of the Cosa Nostra and customary corporate structure: the boss is equivalent to a president, the family his operating or holding company over which he has nearly absolute control.

The commission, comprised of bosses in the more powerful families, is analagous to a legislature, supreme court and board of directors combined, and may overrule an individual boss.

Patenaude said the consigliere in a Mafia organization is equivalent to a counsellor, and the underboss to an executive vice-president, a caporegime or lieutenant to a sales manager or plant manager.

Cosa Nostra has invaded all levels of society and the general public, company leaders, accountants, government and police agencies must all co-operate in fighting it, Patenaude said.

OTHER SPEECHES

In other speeches and papers delivered at the conference ending today, accountants were told:

- White paper legislation will change thinking on foreign investment by Canadians and more money will be invested at home.
- Steps should be taken now to avoid financial pitfalls which could open with tax reform.
- A 30-year look ahead by a special task force on accounting shows knowledge as a central economic resource and calls for new ways to measure operations of the community, including human resources, social costs and quality of life.
- Ownership of property is being challenged as a foundation of society, which must adapt itself to new thinking or perish as a way of life in Canada.

Views of the young must be considered in order to close the generation gap, the affluence gap and the technology gap and thus give greater wealth and spiritual gain to the greatest number of people.

Toronto CA Robert Brown forecast adoption into legislation of white paper proposals relating to foreign investment, largely unchanged. These would create important incentives to investment within the country and offer disadvantages to Canadian businessmen operating abroad.

TRENDS RECOGNIZED

Although open to charges of parochialism, this view recognizes political trends in Canada, said Brown. Only persons who are not aware of these trends and "who have not read the Watkins Manifesto or the Wahn committee report are likely to come to any opposite conclusion."

Attractiveness of "fun and games" enjoyed with tax haven subsidiaries—manipulating Nassau corporations, Cayman Island trusts and Liechtenstein holding companies—will also disappear with new legislation, Brown said.

The task force report, which CICA said is the first of its kind anywhere, said the current world revolution is one of knowledge, and that labor having required knowledge is the scarce factor.

Forecasting needs and demands of the market must be done at least as far ahead as the time required to develop a product or service.

There is no longer time in which to react to change. "We must anticipate it," said the task force, predicting challenges caused by disparities of science and technology, population growth, mass education and human values.

Frank Capon, vice-president of DuPont of Canada Ltd., said the capitalist civilization can produce affluence and leisure for all only through use of private property, open market, capitalist structures and institutions, while socialism will produce only lower generation of wealth, misery for underprivileged and economic mediocrity.

If a capitalist structure can be found to make all households owners of progressively larger amounts of equity capital instruments, they would receive a bigger share of income from them, Capon said.

"At the same time there would be ultimately no need for social welfare, government pensions, family allowances, medicare and the guaranteed annual income—in short, the end of any major need for state redistribution of income."

Sorry . . . Wrong Ship

SCARBOROUGH, England (Reuters) — Retired army nurse Madge Thompson, 82, looked forward to a nice, quiet, Mediterranean cruise, but after several days afloat she realized something was wrong.

Instead of the Mediterranean, she found she was on a ship full of emigrants heading for New Zealand. And when the ship, Fairsky, arrived at Wellington, Miss Thompson had to stay aboard until it made the return voyage to England.

LIST OF ELECTORS

1970 - 1971

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that persons OTHER THAN PROPERTY-OWNERS whose names do not appear in the 1970-1971 List of Electors for Municipal Elections and who desire to have their names included in the 1970-1971 List of Electors, must deliver to the undersigned ON OR BEFORE 5:00 P.M. on SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1970 a Statutory Declaration in the Form presented, which form may be obtained from and taken before the undersigned.

The names of property-owners are automatically included on the List of Electors and others who may be included by declaration are Canadian citizens or other British subjects of the full age of nineteen (19) years who are:

(a) Resident-Electors; being persons who are Canadian citizens or other British subjects and have resided continuously for not less than six months within the Municipality immediately prior to the submission of the declaration.

(b) Tenant-Electors: being persons who are Canadian citizens or other British subjects and corporations which are, and have been continuously for not less than six months immediately prior to the submission of the declaration, tenants in occupation of real property within the Municipality.

(c) Spouses of Veterans holding an agreement to purchase land under the Veterans' Land Act. For full particulars in this regard consult the local V.L.A. Office or the undersigned.

For the name of a corporation to be entered on the List of Electors, either as an Owner-Elector (property-owner) or as a Tenant-Elector, it is necessary to have on file with the undersigned on or before SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1970, a written authorization naming some person of the full age of nineteen (19) years who is a Canadian citizen or other British subject to be its agent to vote on behalf of the corporation (forms for which are obtainable from the undersigned) and in the case of a Tenant-Electer, the declaration referred to above.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Modern Day Statue of Jesus Shocks Delicately Pious

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

A statue of Jesus, made by the late Sir Jacob Epstein, was the cause of a nasty row in an English parish church in 1959. The artist tried to express in stone the meaning of a verse from John's Gospel: "So Jesus came out, wearing the crown of thorns and the purpole robe. Pilate said to them, 'Here is the man!'." The statue's title is "Ecce Homo", the Latin for "Here is the man"!

The vicar and the churchwardens were willing to have the statue placed in the church. But some 430 parishioners thought differently, and they signed a petition which demanded that the statue not be accepted by the church. They described it as "hideous in the extreme." The issue was taken to a church court, and the ruling was that the statue was not to be placed in the church.

I have seen a picture of this controversial statue, and I can tell you that it is not a pretty thing. I can sympathize, a little, with the irate parishioners who signed the petition. The statue is a crude, rough-hewn thing, about twice life-size, weighing nearly six tons. It does have a certain rough, massive beauty.

* * *

Some critics have declared it blasphemous. It can give a rude shock to the delicately pious. But I must say that I find it far less offensive, both aesthetically and religiously, than I find those sentimental pictures of the sweet, well-scrubbed, blue-eyed Nordic Jesus which have been so popular in our day.

Perhaps much of the offence in Epstein's statue is in its way of insidiously sneaking up on a Christian viewer and disturbing his easy conscience. Perhaps we do not care to be reminded so forcefully that Jesus was a rugged character and that he made rugged demands on his followers. Jacob Epstein, the sensitive Jewish artist, reminded Christians of that and warned them against trying to keep Jesus in a cage of cosy, ingrown piety.

The real Jesus, the Jesus of the Gospels, was a rugged character, a strong character, a disturbing character. The impulse from Jesus which has worked creatively in the world for nearly two thousand years did not come from the soft nonentity, the rather pretty and rather boring figure of so much of our popular religious art and popular religious discourse.

* * *

Let me tell you now about another statue of Jesus. It stands over the pulpit of St. Mark's Church in Frankfurt, Germany. During the Second World War the church was damaged in an air-raid. The statue remained in its place, but both of the hands, which were outstretched, were knocked off. When the church was repaired after the war the hands of Jesus were not replaced. Now the handless Jesus stands above the pulpit, reminding all who worship there that the only hands which he has are those of his followers.

These two statues offer together a corrective to the ambiguity in which Jesus is often approached.

The Chrstian religion is not a matter of keeping Jtsus tethered within the Church for the comfort and satisfaction of the Church's people. One of the fundamentals of the New Testament understanding of the Church is that the Church exists primarily for the sake of those outside it, not primarily for the sake of those within. But history shows that all through the Christian centuries Christians have been tempted to tame Jesus (that is what Epstein protested) and tether him within the Church. History also shows that Jesus tamed and tethered is Jesus betrayed. These two statues are a sharp challenge to the complacency and ingrowness of those of us today who profess to be followers of Jesus but hold back from the wider demands of that followership.

Ric Masten To Speak Sunday

Ric Masten, of Big Sur, Calif., will make another of his annual visits to Victoria this weekend. He has developed quite a following here, having appeared other years in several local places.

This year, however, his only appearance will be at the Unitarian church, 106 Superior, at 11 o-clock Sunday morning.

Mr. Masten is a songwriter, poet, singer, "lecturer," (although he would protest the term, preferring an air of informality) and contemporary philosopher.

South Africa Orders Priests To Get Out

STELLENBOSCH, South Africa (UPI) — The government Friday ordered two Anglican priests to leave South Africa before the end of October.

The priests, the Rev. Robert Mercer of Rhodesia and the Rev. Bernard Chamberlain of Britain, had been in South Africa about two years.

The expulsion order follows a parliamentary statement by premier John Vorster that steps would be taken against the author of a pamphlet circulated among Anglican congregations in Stellenbosch.

The pamphlet referred to the World Council of Churches decision to provide funds for guerrilla movements in southern Africa.

Guest Preacher Back To Speak

Rev. David Murphy, former minister of Knox Presbyterian Church, will be guest preacher on Sunday at 11 a.m.

Murphy has recently returned from Guyana where for several years he worked for the General Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

He will be conducting meetings in Sooke, Duncan, Nanaimo annd Port Alberni next week.

Hendrix Leaves $500,000 Estate

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock musician Jimi Hendrix, who died in London Sept. 18, has left an estate estimated at $500,000.

A petition filed in Surrogate's Court Friday says Hendrix, whose full name was James Marshall Hendrix, did not leave a will for disposal of his estate.

Hendrix's father, James, will be the sole beneficiary under the law, although a brother, Leon, 22, also survives. Both live in Seattle, Wash.

No Celebrations For Pope's Birthday

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul turned 73 today but for the second year in a row he planned no birthday celebration.

Vatican sources said the pontiff has been deeply saddened by the bloodshed in Jordan and is even less inclined to make his birthday a festive occasion than he might have been otherwise.

The Pope gave two brief addresses this morning, one to the World Convention of Secular Institutes and the others to pilgrims from Brescia, Italy.

This afternoon he planned to receive 7,000 pilgrims from rural areas.

The pontiff and his staff also were putting the final touches on plans to receive President Nixon in an audience Monday; Nixon, who starts a five-country tour Sunday, will be seeing Pope Paul for the second time in 18 months.

Bible Secretary Visits City

Rev. K. G. McMillan, secretary of the Canadian Bible Society, will visit Victoria Sunday and Monday.

McMillan returned to Canada Wednesday after a tour of Europe in which he conferred with church leaders and heads of state on the world situation.

McMillan will speak at 9:30 a.m. in Christ Church Cathedral and at 11 a.m. in First United. He will be accompanied by Rev. R. J Tingley, B.C. secretary of the Bible Society, who will speak at 9:30 a.m. in Emmanuel Baptist Church and in the Church of Our Lord at 11.

At 7:30 p.m. there will be an ecumenical service which will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at which Dr. McMillan will be the preacher.

Corny Death

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A corn cob ended the life of Skipper, the performing dolphin, Thursday at the Tri-State fair. An autopsy showed Skipper died from swallowing the corn cob, apparently thrown into the outdoor tank. The mammal's handlers said Skipper was worth $15,000.

NO STIMULATING WINDS OF CHANGE

Trudeau Reshuffles the Same Old Team

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Never has a prime minister been more complacent about his cabinet than Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

His ministers are all splendid fellows doing first-rate jobs. It is only with great reluctance, after long delay, that he makes minor changes, to meet a request for a new job or to answer some unavoidable problem.

Stability and continuity are the watchwords, no stimulating winds of change, no response to criticism, not even a new image.

* * *

There has not been a major cabinet shake-up for two years, but we in the press gallery never seem able to grasp the full measure of the prime minister's conservatism.

We stood for more than an hour outside the East Block on Parliament Hill, waiting for the official word. Some 50 newsmen with notebooks, cameras, tape recorders and the endless supply of political gossip which makes us good company for each other.

There are still a few tourists around under the cool, grey skies of fall, and the came to join us at the door. The PM's shiny Cadillac with the hot-line phone in back edged up to the curb, waiting to whisk him away to play host at lunch for all his old, old friends in the cabinet.

The Mounties worried about keeping a passage open to the door, and press secretary Romeo LeBlanc appeared from time to time, probably to ask us to be patient, but we could not hear because a couple of pneumatic drills were repairing the sidewalk.

The first minister out of the door and into the crowd was Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien fending off the questions with his boyish grin: "New job? Do you think I should have one?"

Some Indians thought he should because they did not like his policy white paper. But Trudeau does not make changes for that sort of reason.

Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier, who has been cast by critics as the sinister French-Canadian subverting our institutions, passed quickly through our ranks because no one expected him to move. Veteran George McIlraith, 62, has been demoted to the senate so often by the pundits that it is now a joke, and nobody bothered to ask if he was still solicitor-general—he is—when he came out, pulling down his veteran soft grey hat—the only minister, in fact, who regularly wears a hat.

Treasury Board President C. M. Bud Drury stalked out, stiff and remote controller of the government's costs, hard-liner on inflation and still among the PM's closest advisers.

* * *

Finally we were admitted to the East Block and crowded up the stairs to the executive suit on the second floor.

At the top was Bryce Mackasey, the exuberant labor minister, shaking our hands. "The reception line?" we asked.

"Bryce has got a new job, chief greeter," quipped Energy Minister Joe Greene, who enjoys his share of attention.

Ushered into the PM's empty office, we were given a few minutes to wire up the microphones, fix the cameras, arrange ourselves around the desk and admire the glowing modern art on the white walls.

Trudeau made his entrance, in a beautiful blue suit and blue shirt, with a red rose in his lapel and flowing silk tie. As his hair has thinned, he has abandoned the forehead fringe and swept the locks back onto his neck and now he reminds one constantly of some past political master—of course, Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

His acting is better too. He was surprised to see us all, he said. He had read our advice about the cabinet in the papers and taken it, more or less.

He meant that the forecasts of his intentions had been fairly accurate, and there were no big surprises to draw our big crowd.

In truth, the shuffle is the absolute minimum that could have been expected, reflecting no change in government programs and priorities.

When Donald Macdonald agreed in 1968 to become House leader to press changes in Common's procedure, he asked to be relieved after two years and given a regular department. So Trudeau had to shift him this year.

* * *

At the same time, the PM wanted to send a minister to Paris as ambassador, underlining the fact that relations with France are now on the same footing as those with Britain where the high commissioner has often been a senior political figure. Defence Minister Leo Cadieux was persuaded to go to Paris.

So the transfer is easily made. Macdonald to defence, where his jovially aggressive style will be quite a change after the mild-mannered Cadieux—and not reassuring to those who regard him as the PM's hatchet man.

Macdonald's departure leaves the leadership of the House vacant. Try someone new? Never. Send for Allan MacEachen, who did the job well for Prime Minister Pearson and has now modernized his image by growing bushy grey sideburns.

When Otta Lang, 38-year-old law professor from Sakatoon, was put in charge of wheat policy he was supremely confident that the power of pure intellect would turn slump into boom, no matter what the horny-handed farmers thought. We scoffed, but this week he announced record grain sales.

Clearly he is just the man to take over manpower and immigration where things have been dragging under MacEachen.

* * *

And then there was poor Eric Kierans, impatient to get on with the push-button world of satellites, computer and wired cities of the future, in his communications portfolio, but bogged down instead with human problems of staff relations in the old post office.

Kierans showed Trudeau a cartoon in which he is begging on his knees to be relieved of the post office, and the PM naturally obliged.

If Trudeau wanted Kierans to take manpower, as some sources insist, he lost the argument. The other loser is Jean Pierre Goyer, 38-year-old Montreal MP who was among the first Trudeau-for-PM boosters and was tipped to take over communications if Kierans left.

Jean Pierre Cote, 44-year-old father of eight children, never got into much trouble when he was postmaster-general from 1963-68.

But after going to national revenue, he had a heart attack and the department's problems piled up, and now seem to require the attention of a hard-nosed, hard-working lawyer.

So Trudeau is sending Cote back to the post office to restore quiet there, and Windor yawyer Herbert Gray is moving up to revenue.

A tidy arrangement.

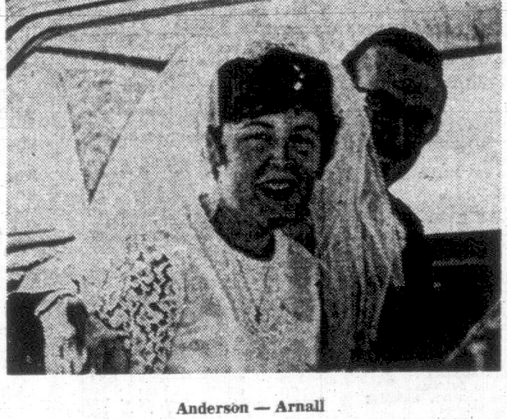
The marriage will take place on Saturday, October 10, 1970 in St. Joseph's Church, Gander, Newfoundland.

Weddings

Sawyer — Melville

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on September 4, 1970, at 7 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral when Janice Louisa Melville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Melville, 500 Transit Road, exchanged marriage vows with Evan Dean Sawyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Sawyer, 1940 Woodley Avenue. Reverend Father Hoult officiated.



Anderson — Arnall

A double ring ceremony was solemnized on August 22, 1970 at 1:30 p.m. in First United Church, when Nancy Marilyn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Arnall, 1634 Pinewood Avenue, exchanged vows with Mr. Ronald James Anderson, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Murray Anderson, 3523 Redwood Avenue. Reverend Arthur Anderson, brother of the groom officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a full length gown and matching train of peau d' elegance with panel and sleeves of lace with pearl insets. Her bouquet of stephanotis and roses was centered with an orchid. Miss Miriam Rudland, Miss Dorothy Chattell and Miss Sharon Jordan as attendants were dressed alike in floor length gowns of mauve crepe with sheer sleeves. Miss Margo Anderson, niece of the groom as Junior bridesmaid wore a matching figured sheer dress. Their bouquets were of pink and white carnations with trailing ribbons. Mr. Robert Tate attended as best man and Mr. Rick Calderbank and Mr. Philip Squires ushered the guests.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Deep Cove Chalet where Mr. Reg. Edwards proposed the toast to the bride. The three-tiered cake was centered on a drawn-thread work cloth, sewn by the bride's grandmother, the late Mrs. W. Hyslop.

For her going away outfit, the bride chose turquoise crepe dress with a coat of mauve and turquoise tweed. Following their honeymoon the couple will reside in Vancouver.

Sproule — Karagianis

A pretty wedding was solemnized August 29, 1970 in Oak Bay United Church, when Harriet Blanche Karagianis, daughter of Lieutenant Commander Aubrey Karagianis, RCN (Retired) and Mrs. Karagianis, became the bride of Mr. Patrick Dale Sproule, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Sproule. Reverend D. B. Sparling officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length white velvet gown, which featured large puffed sleeves and small round standup collar. Her cathedral length veil fell from a small pearl Juliet cap. Completing her ensemble, she wore a antique sterling cross and carried a bouquet of white gladiolas with yellow rosebuds and trailing ivy. Her bridal attendants were Mrs. R. (Deyl) Wilkins, matron of honor, Misses Jo-Ann Frumento, Donna Frumento, Debbie Frumento, Inger Trones and Sandra Gallagher as bridesmaids, and Miss Sheila Karagianis as flower girl. They were attired in identical floor length gowns of sapphire blue and white daisy designed voile and wore white flowers in their hair. They carried bouquets of white spider mums tied with blue ribbon and net.

The groom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Howard Tweed, as best man. Ushers were Messrs. Douglas Holmes, David Williams, Jerry Williams and Terry Marson. Master Robbie Gallagher was ring bearer.

The marriage united two old families of Lower Vancouver Island — the bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. Harriet Ordano, formerly of Cowichan Bay, the groom is the grandson of Mr. G. Scott Coulson and the late Mrs. Coulson, residents of Oak Bay for over 50 years. He is the third generation to be married in Oak Bay United Church. Mr. and Mrs. Coulson's was the first marriage solemnized in the new Church June 30th, 1915.

Following the service, a reception was held at the Carlton Club where Mr. Patrick Frumento, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast.

For her going away outfit, the bride chose a navy blue dress trimmed in white, white hat and navy accessories. After a brief honeymoon on Vancouver Island, the newlyweds left for an extended stay in Europe.

Out-of-town guests came from Honolulu, Los Angeles, Edmonton, New Westminster, Ottawa and Vancouver.

Robinson — Donaldson

In a double-ring ceremony solemnized by Reverend Laura Butler September 18, 1970, in Spencer Memorial Chapel, Metropolitan United Church, Heather Lydia Donaldson and Stephen Murray Robinson exchanged marriage vows. The bride looked radiant in her short white dress, with bodice of embroidered georgette over satin underlay. A dainty floral arrangement held her four-tiered chapel veil and she carried a cosy of pink sweetheart roses and white daisy chrysanthemums. The matron of honor Mrs. Vincent Fourt was vivid in a short moss crepe dress of marine blue and the bridesmaids Miss Stephanie Belton and Miss Tanta De Staffany were lovely in identical dresses in soft tones of pink and blue, each carried a cosy of tinted white chrysanthemums. Mr. Bill Kempster Jr., cousin of the groom attended him as best man and the ushers were friends Mr. Roger Harmston and Mr. Peter Shewring. Mr. Erick Boothroyd presided at the organ.

A reception was held in Royal Oak Hall, where, during the evening Mr. Roy Wakefield proposed the toast to the bride. For her going away ensemble, the bride chose a suit of lime green wool with navy accessories. After a few days on the Mainland, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson will reside in Victoria.

Out of town guests included the bride's grandparents Mr. and Mrs. A. Shewan, Rawdon, Quebec, Mrs. E. L. Sather, Edmonds, Wash., Mr. and Mrs. Z. Stone, Whidby Island, Mrs. W. Roecklien, Campbell River, V.I., Mr. and Mrs. Norman Billy, Ladner, B.C.

Gill — Bell

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bell, 225 Helmcken Road, are pleased to announce the marriage of their only daughter, Joanne, to Mr. Dennis Gill, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Gill of Quadra Street. The wedding took place September 12, 1970 in Centennial United Church with Reverend John Travis officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white lace with matching train, and tulle chapel veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses. Maid of honor Miss Sue Stevenott, bridesmaids Miss Karen Heisman and Mrs. Edna Deeprose wore floor-length gowns of peacock blue satin. They carried colonial bouquets of pink carnations. Flower girl Miss Kim Bell, niece of the bride, also wore a floor-length gown of peacock blue satin and carried a basket of pink and white carnations. Best man was Mr. William Deeprose. Ushers were Mr. Monty Gill and Mr. Barry Gill. Ringbearer was Master Roger Stevenott.

At the reception held at Holyrood House, Mr. George Morgan proposed the toast to the bride. The young couple left on a honeymoon trip to the Mainland. For her going away outfit the bride chose a yellow dress and coat ensemble with black accessories, and wore a peach gladiola corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Gill will reside in Victoria.

Blewett — Tighe

Padre J. H. MacIntosh officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the C.F.B. Uplands Protestant Chapel, on July 11, 1970, at 1 p.m., when Jacqueline Yvonne, eldest daughter of Mrs. Leslie Tighe, 1270 Topaz Avenue, and the late Mr. Leslie Tighe, exchanged marriage vows with Pte. Donald Sidney Blewett, son of Sgt. and Mrs. J. S. Blewett, of C.F.B. Uplands, Ottawa, Ontario.

The bride was attended by Mrs. William McLeod, and Mr. James Blewett was groomsman.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents. Following a honeymoon in Victoria and Peterborough, the young couple are making their home in Ottawa.

Bacian — Abercrombie

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Abercrombie, Victoria, B.C., are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter Claire Frances, to S. Sgt. Kurt W. Bacian, "U.S. Army," son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hickel of San Fernando, California.

The wedding took place on September 5th, 1970, at Fort De Russey Chapel, Hawaii with Chaplain Heywood P. Knight officiating. Miss Ida Joramo, Hawaii, attended as bridesmaid and best man was Wm. McCormack.

McKerns — Hiebert

Mrs. Grace Cozens, 820 Pembroke Street, takes pleasure in announcing the marriage of her eldest daughter Enez Grace Hiebert on September 4th, 1970, to Mr. Donald Charles McKerns, only son of Mrs. E. M. McKerns, 113 Island Highway, and the late Mr. C. H. McKerns.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Peggy Smith and Mr. Lloyd McBratney was groomsman. After a honeymoon on the Mainland, the couple will reside in their new home at 3836 Carey Road.

Rankin — Zak

On September 4, 1970, the marriage of Annie Zak, daughter of Mrs. A. Zack, 640- 240th Street, Langley, B.C. to Mr. Edward John Rankin, only son of Mr. John Rankin 7101 Wallace Drive, Brentwood Bay, B.C., took place in Victoria at the District Registrar's Office. The bride was attended by Mrs. Sharon Dovey, a close friend. The best man was Mr. Vernon Gait. They will live in Victoria.

Gibson — Moreau

Dr. and Mrs. Jos. H. Moreau of 2028 Runnymede Avenue, wish to announce the marriage of their eldest daughter, Mary Lucy, to Mr. William Allen Gibson of Phoenix, Arizona.

The wedding took place in St. Patrick's Church on September 14, with Fr. Jackson officiating. They will reside in Claremont, California.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our many friends and neighbours for their love and kindness, and beautiful floral arrangements, etc., during our recent bereavement.— Maimie, Sid, and David Marcinew.

It is impossible to thank so many individually but we are deeply grateful to Organizer Mr. Harvey Symons; Mr. John Nicol of Retail Foods and Drugs; and Safeway Unions; Mr. Watson Borthwick; and the Victoria Yachting Associations, and to the many hundreds who attended to make the recent Collis-Goodman Benefit Dance a tremendous success. Thank you one and all. — Aunt (Mrs. G. A.) Kathleen Pole, Sisters Catherine and Helen.

We wish to thank most sincerely, those who have offered sympathy and understanding when Bill Tuson, 510 Oliver St., passed away Sept. 9, 1970. We miss him so.—E. Tuson, Margaret and George Bowditch and family.

On behalf of my brothers and sisters of Victoria and Vancouver, I wish sincerely to thank friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy, floral arrangements and cards in the bereavement of our father George Bach. Also special thanks to the Doctors and nurses of Veterans' Hospital, the Esquimalt Police Department, and Mr. E. Peterson (Sands). Mrs. L. J. Howe.

I wish sincerely to thank the many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and the beautiful floral offerings in the recent bereavement in losing my dear husband, Thomas Alfred Goodridge. Also thanks to Dr. E. P. Kardera and Dr. D. J. Forth and nurses at the Jubilee Hospital.—Mrs. Sarah Goodridge.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOUSE BOAT
AT A STEAL!
36 long feet by 12 wide feet that can sleep 8 in 4 huge double berths and keep its crew happy with refrigerator, stove and oven, hot water system, pressure water, electric heads, holding tank, furnace, and twin power plants. All equipped and ready to go. Used perhaps 65 hours. Fast and able. Slow or comfortable. You choose. A huge covered cockpit that makes fishing real lazy fun. You could even fish from your double bed. An ideal boat for extra revenue from chartering. Should cost $21,000. How does a $3,500 saving sound. Try $17,500. Trades accepted and financing available.

PRIME LOCATION
ONLY $28,300

A perfect family home situated on ST. ANN STREET with schools, shopping, playgrounds, etc., all nearby and just 3 short blocks to a SANDY BEACH. You simply could not anticipate everything this attractive WHITE STUCCO HOME has behind its neat picket fence. The only fair way to describe it is — FABULOUS VALUE.

On the main level it has a carpeted entrance hall, delightful GLEAMING ELECTRIC KITCHEN with eating area and also handy WASHER-DRYER HOOK-UPS, the living room has a fireplace and "in-line" dining area (all the LIKE-NEW fitted Carpeting is a SOFT GREEN color), plus TWO GOOD BEDROOMS AND A 4-PIECE BATHROOM.

A FULL DAYLIGHT lower level has been professionally developed to provide THREE bedrooms, a 3-piece bathroom, a children's play area, a workshop and the almost NEW HOT WATER heating plant has its own room.

Yet another LARGE bedroom is on the top level.

There just could not be any hitch to PARKING your BOAT or HOUSE TRAILER as there is plenty of room off a rear lane and the yard has some beautiful FRUIT and SHADE TREES, TOO!

You MUST SEE to believe SO MUCH can be yours FOR SO LITTLE in SUCH A GOOD DISTRICT. If you can manage about half cash down then the PRINCIPAL and INTEREST payments would be only $130 a month — but even if you can't do this TRY YOUR OFFER anyway and don't forget to ASK about the FANTASTICALLY LOW TAXES.

Police Grab Pool Tickets

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal police arrested one man and seized more than 60,000 hockey pool tickets Thursday in a series of raids throughout the city, exactly two weeks before the National Hockey League's regular season begins.

Andre Hotte, 46, was arraigned in municipal court and pleaded not guilty to charges of printing, or having printed, the tickets administering a lottery and resisting police.

Handicap Award

VANCOUVER (CP) — Andy Morgan of Peace Portal Golf Club won the fall edition of the British Columbia Golf Association seniors' tournament Friday with an 18-hole total of 78. Morgan broke a tie with Ernie Brown of McCleery on the last nine holes for the win. Brown won the low-handicap class.

Fred Walton of Glen Meadows, with a handicap of 23, won the low net class. He toured the 6556-yard course in 91 for a net of 68.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS
NOTICE OF LEASE OF PROPERTY

PROPOSALS for lease of a portion of Hangar No. H2 situated in the South East quarter of the Victoria International Airport with access via East Saanich Road from the South, are invited by the Minister of Public Works, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, British Columbia on or before October 23rd, 1970.

The area to be leased is the East half of the floor area of the building and contains sheet metal shop and mezzanine above, component paint and fabric shop and heat treatment and plating shop, together with washrooms and ancillary store rooms, a total floor area of about 25,000 square feet. The lease permits the use of such scheduled machinery, equipment, tools, office furniture and office equipment as are located in the said building, which at the expiry of the rental term are to be delivered up in as good order and condition as at the commencement of the term. The term of the lease is five years with a renewal provision for a further five years at rental rate to be agreed by both parties.

The lesee will be responsible for payment of proportionate shares of all services such as light, water, heat and taxes, and will not be allowed to assign or sublet the property or any part thereof without the express consent of the Minister of Public Works. The Department of Public Works will not entertain or be responsible for any claim or liability whatsoever.

The agreement will be subject to cancellation by either party upon six months notice in writing and subject and subordinate at all times to any ground lease or leases affecting the land on which the said building or buildings, or any part thereof, stands, which lease or leases restrict the use of the premises for aircraft purposes only.

All proponents are required to submit by certified cheque a sum equivalent to three months rental as a guarantee deposit, which sum in the case of the lessee will be held pending final expiry of the lease; the cheques of all other proponents will be returned. The Minister of Public Works reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

Further details as to location and appointment to view the premises and schedule of equipment may be obtained by telephoning Mr. J. Jamieson, Department of Highways, at 656-2551.

Reduced Hunting Area Considered for Sooke

Continued population growth in the area may soon result in the closure of most of Sooke Harbor and Sooke Basin to the discharge of firearms.

Dr. James Hatter, director of the fish and wildlife branch, announced Thursday that consideration was being given to the closure because private property and houses now surround most of the harbor area and residents affected have requested the ban under the Firearms Act in the interest of human safety.

The section closed to shooting would embrace most of Sooke Harbor and Basin below the high water line south of a line between Parson's Point and Company Point, including all of Whiffin Spit.

However, the tidal flats at the mouth of the Sooke River would remain open to waterfowl hunters.

This area is described as "that portion of Sooke Harbour enclosed by a line commencing at Helgeson Oyster Plant on the north shore of Sooke Harbor projected in an easterly direction along high water mark to the west bank of the west channel of Sooke River, thence southerly along the west bank of the west channel to the intersection of a line from the point of Billings Spit to Helgesen Oyster Plant."

Tottenham Beats Manchester City

LONDON (CP) — Martin Chivers and Alan Gilzean scored for Tottenham Hotspur today and destroyed Manchester City's unbeaten record in English soccer's First Division Tottenham won 2-0.

Liverpool, the other hitherto-unbeaten team in the top division, also lost, 1-0 to Southampton.

Leeds, held to a 0-0 draw by Nottingham Forest, clung to top place in the standings with 16 points. Manchester City was second with 14. Then came three London teams — Tottenham, Arsenal and Chelsea — all with 13.

Cuba Sub Base Worries U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States defence department disclosed evidence Friday of what it said appears to be a submarine support base under construction in the harbor at Cienfuegos, Cuba, possibly for use by missile-firing Russian subs now positioned in the Atlantic.

Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird said that "while we have seen activity along this line as far as Cuba is concerned, it is a little early to determine the extent of Russian naval" involvement there.

White House officials quickly responded by saying the U.S. "would view the establishment of a strategic base in the Caribbean with utmost seriousness." However, no diplomatic representations have been made to Moscow.

Officials here immediately drew a parallel with the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, when President John F. Kennedy said peace in the Caribbean could be preserved if Soviet offensive weapons were removed from the area and kept out in the future.

The magnitude of the new naval development in Cuba is not the same as eight years ago, when Russia placed offensive missiles on the island 90 mile from the U.S. mainland.

At that time, the Soviets had no Polaris-type missile-firing submarines. Today, with 13 nuclear-powered submarines armed with 16 missiles each and 15 more subs under construction, the Soviets can strike deep inside the United States without the need for land-based missiles in Cuba.

A support base would enable the Russians to keep more submarines on station for longer periods of time without the need for returning to home ports for servicing and resupply. U.S. Polaris subs use bases at Holy Loch, Scotland; Rota, Spain, and on the Pacific island of Guam for this purpose.

Information on the Russian activity at Cienfuegos came from American U-2 reconnaissance planes, the same aircraft which furnished the first evidence of Russian missiles in Cuba Oct. 24, 1962.

Although no submarines now are in Cienfuegos, Friedheim said, a submarine tender and three other Soviet ships are anchored in the harbor. The vessels are part of a Soviet naval force which arrived in the Caribbean earlier this month.

Contract Talks Break Down

A government mediation officer will be brought into contract talks between Victoria Newspaper Guild and Victoria Press Ltd.

The guild, which represents 130 employees in the commercial and editorial departments, announced Friday it would apply for mediation, following a breakdown of negotiations.

Negotiations on a new two-year agreement started in January. The old contract expired April 30.

Guild members voted Sept. 4 to reject a tentative agreement. Guild President Roger Stonebanks said major issues include salaries, scheduling of hours of work, vacations and other items.

Victoria Press General Manager J. C. Melville declined to comment on the contract dispute.

Ex-Censor Hired As Critic

EDMONTON (CP) — Jack Day, who was suspended as Alberta film censor in December, will be the subject of a CBC television program and was hired as a freelance movie critic by the network, it was announced Friday.

Day, whose resignation as censor was accepted by the provincial cabinet this week, was suspended after two morals charges were laid against him.

He was later acquitted on a charge of indecent assault on a girl under 14 and a charge of incest but the government refused to reinstate him and this week submitted a financial offer of about $12,000 which was accepted.

Ralph Horley, manager of the CBC's Edmonton station CBXT, said Day's background and knowledge of motion pictures will be valuable in his new role as film critic.

"We would have liked to have used him previously but could not because of his government connections."

Double-Barrelled Rasslin' Offering

Two main events will highlight a professional wrestling card beginning at 8:15 tonight in Memorial Arena.

In the first fight, Man Mountain Mike tangles with Bulldog Brown for the right to meet Don Leo Jonathan in what is billed as the Pacific Coast championship.

The other half of the double bill brings together Gene Kiniski and "judo-expert" Chatti Yokuchi.

Bombers Talk Gabler Trade

WINNIPEG (CP) — Wally Gabler, one of the central figures in the big trade with Toronto Argonauts last year that saw Dave Raimey go to the Eastern Football Conference club, has been placed on waivers by Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Bomber general manager Earl Lunsford said Friday that the quarterback was put on waivers Wednesday "but that doesn't mean he's been cut."

"We're talking trade with a couple of clubs now," he said.

Esks Take Gamble

EDMONTON (CP) — R. C. Gamble, a six-foot-three 222 pound fullback cut by Boston Patriots of the National Football League, has been signed by Edmonton Eskimos to replace injured Alan Pitcaithley.

BRISTOL GETS YEAR ADDED TO CONTRACT

MILWAKEE (CP) — Milwaukee Brewers of the American League gave manager Dave Bristol an extension of his present contract Thursday to run through 1972 in recognition of what general manager Marvin Milkes called a "dedicated workmanlike job" this season.

Bristol, who managed Cincinnati Reds of the National League in 1969, was signed as manager of Seattle Pilots in November of that year and moved to Milwaukee last spring when the club's franchise was shifted here. His two-year contract ran through the 1971 season. Milkes announced Thursday that the contract had been extended for a third year. No salary was disclosed.

Taxes On Aged Probed

A five-man committee to investigate and report on income tax policies that affect old age pensioners, has been set up by Voice of the People.

Pat A. Codyre, founder and chairman of the organization, claimed that persons living on "tea and toast" are often penalized by income taxation when their earnings exceed that of their pensions.

Codyre, who is opposing expropriation of his property by B.C. Hydro for use as a right-of-way for a transmission line from Jordan River, said he had been offered an unfair price for his land and home.

He did not disclose the price, but indicated he would take Hydro to court over the issue of the price.

Garden Club To Hold Meet

The Gordon Head Garden Club will meet Oct. 5 at 8 p.m. at the community hall, Tyndall Ave. Mrs. Jessie Woollett will speak and show slides on the plants of the sand dunes.

RIDERS DROP WEISS

REGINA (CP) — Former National Football League performer Gary Lane was conceded the backup quarterbacking role with Saskatchewan Roughriders after the Western Conference leaders released Don Weiss.

Power Struggle Endures

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — For more than four decades an apparently endless internal power struggle has smouldered within the bounds of the nearby Six Nations Indian reserve.

The 46-year conflict, which to the white man seems difficult to interpret, is a curious blend of historic tradition and modern politics.

The first legislative shot was fired back in 1924, when the federal government decreed an end to hereditary power in favor of an elected council.

The hereditary chiefs of the Six Nations Iroquois Conference held power long before the first white man set foot on North American soil, and they were obviously not prepared to bend after such a long tenure.

Such is the situation today and, occasionally, the dispute pops up in the news.

The latest episode occurred this year when Confederacy backers changed the locks on the council house door and shut out the elected councillors. The elected members followed by obtaining an injunction from the Ontario Supreme Court banning the Confederacy action.

The two groups have little in common except ancestry and the same land.

Supporters of the elective council view the role of the Six Nations people as one of establishing independence as North American citizens within the modern laws of the country.

GUIDED BY TRADITION

Retention of ancestral rights is the key to Confederacy ideology, and their strongest agrument is histoy. Confederacy backers are guided by tradition and the codes of the Long House religion. Supporters of this faith see it rlevent today as it was many ceturies ago.

As a result, some Long House people have appealed for their right to govern to the Ontario human rights commission.

"I believe the Canadian government and the elected band council are acting contrary to the Ontario code of human rights," wrote Mrs. Ivan Thomas, wife of an elementary school principal on the reserve.

"By using discrimination they are endeavoring to have me change my religious beliefs."

The provincial commission replied that it "does not have jurisdication to enforce its legislation on an Indian reserve which is regulated by the policies and legislation set forth by the federal government."

Victor Porter, a successful sales manager with a Brantford car dealership, is displeased over what he terms excessive publicity given a minority group on the reserve.

REFLECTS ON ALL

Mr. Porter is a former councillor who now is chairman of a group providing active support to the elective council, in opposition to the Confederacy people.

"They the Confderacy make a laughing stock of the whole reserve," Mr. Porter said. "We get enough bad publicity as it is without something like this recurring . . . If a minority group put locks on what is in effect the city hall, then it comes out in the papers as the Six Nations Indian reserve. It reflects on the whole resere — even though most of the people don't go along with what the group wants."

A federal study made in 1966 indicated that 19 per cent of the Six Nations population were followers of the Long House religion. The Confederacy backers stick to their historical roots and oppose what they call the materialistic approach of the elected council supporters.

Drug Charges Examined

VANCOUVER (CP)—The British Columbia Pharmacists Society put its $1 surcharge on welfare prescriptions only after negotiations with the provincial government had "broken down," Mr. Justice Peter Seaton was told Thursday.

The Supreme Court judge was hearing charges laid under the Combines Investigation Act in which the B.C. professional Pharmacists Society and the Pharmaceutical Association of B.C. are accused of conspiring to unduly lessen competition by imposing the $1 surcharge on welfare prescriptions.

The court was told the two pharmaceutical groups had been trying for some time to get an increase in the amount of money paid them by the provincial government for welfare prescriptions, on which they claim they lose money.

Lawyers for the two groups will apply on Monday for dismissal of charges on the grounds that the Crown's evidence does not support the allegations.

Hussein Names Palestinian Prime Minister

BULLETIN

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said today that the remaining hijacked airline hostages in its hands will be released "within the next 24 hours without any conditions."

An Egyptian embassy official told newsmen at Amman's Intercontinental Hotel that the captive group—believed to be 38 Americans — would be handed over to the International Red Cross through Egypt's embassy here "without conditions."

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — King Hussein of Jordan formed a new government today under a civilian, Amman Radio reported.

The new cabinet replaces the military government formed Sept. 16, a day before the king's tanks rolled into Amman to try to crush the Palestinian guerrillas. The military premier, Brig. Mohammed Daoud, resigned Friday.

The king's mandate to Toukan, a Palestinian, charged him to do everything possible to return life in the country to normal after nine days of fighting between royal troops and guerrillas and to heal regional differences between East Bank Jordanians and the Palestinians.

Toukan also will be foreign minister in the 13-man cabinet, which includes at least five soldiers.

At least five cabinet members, including the premier himself, are Palestinians.

IN FORMER CABINET

Five of the soldiers in the new cabinet were in the former military cabinet, which has been denounced by the Palestinian commandos and for whose replacement the Arab heads of state in Cairo had been pressing.

They are Brig. Mazen Ajlouni, who also is deputy to Field Marshal Habis Majali, military governor; Brig. Saleh Al-Shari; Col. Abu Ghosh, Maj. Mukley Al-Awdatallah and Maj. Adnan Abu Odeh.

Meanwhile, Palestinian guerrillas said today they released 16 of their 54 air-hijack hostages Friday because the food and water they were using was needed for Palestinian children.

U.S. Plans To Rearm Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP) —The United States will replace the arms and ammunition that the Jordanian army lost battling guerrillas and Syrians, deputy secretary of defence David Packard said Friday.

Assessing the aftermath of a week of bitter fighting in Jordan, Packard told newsmen at a breakfast meeting Friday that the Pentagon had come to "two or three rather important conclusions."

● "Though there is lots of speculation about why the Syrians pulled out," Packard said "in my judgment one of the most important reasons was the Jordanian army's ability to give them a rough time."

Life Terms Ordered For Grim Reapers

CALGARY (CP) — An immediate appeal will be launched against the non-capital murder conviction of 13 men charged following the death of a motorcycle gang president, defence lawyers said Friday.

The men, all but two members of the Grim Reapers motorcycle club, were the largest group ever convicted in a single murder case in Canada, a justice department source said.

They were brought to trial in Alberta Supreme Court after Ronald George Hartley, 23, leader of the Outcasts motorcycle club, died March 7.

Evidence during the five-day trial indicated he died after one of the accused hit him on the head with a length of chain during a confrontation between the gangs on a rural road southeast of the city.

The jury was out for almost nine hours before they returned their guilty verdict Friday and Mr. Justice Neil Primrose passed the mandatory life sentences.

JUROR SHAKES HEAD

As he passed sentence one of the 11 jurors shook his head and the judge asked him why he had done so.

"My Lord, I just don't understand this. What was the charge?"

"The charge was murder," the judge replied.

"No, I mean the sentence, Your Lordship."

As the member continued to shake his head the jury was polled and the judge said:

"You were polled . . . guilty as charged. You know the charge, you saw the indictment. Is there some mistake? Mr. Foreman, what do you say?"

The foreman answered:

"The only . . . there is no dissension within the group,

DEMONSTRATORS in St. Jerome, Que., hold up effigy representing United States interests and placards denouncing the "sale of Quebec" to American business interests. About 400 persons Friday marched through the city, throwing Molotov cocktails and smashing windows, but no arrests were made. Demonstrators gathered a short distance from where Premier Robert Bourassa and Jean Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, were speaking to businessmen.

TO COMBAT VIET CONG PRESSURE

Saigon Arming Peasants

SAIGON (Reuters) — Arming South Vietnamese peasants to fight the Viet Cong would have been considered madness a few years ago.

But the Saigon government has already handed out 500,000 weapons and plans to distribute another million next year to a vast segment of the population traditionally considered most susceptible to Viet Cong pressure and recruitment.

The arms are going to a loosely controlled 3.5 million-strong army called the People's Self-Defence Forces. A type of militia, its members are pledged to defend their own homes and hamlets.

United States Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker has called the peasant army an increasingly important and psychological force in the search for peace in Vietnam.

"When the people take and bear arms publicly, they openly commit themselves to the government," he said. "It also shows, incidentally, that the government of Vietnam has faith in the people that it is arming."

But what the move really means is that the war here has changed course, with the Viet Cong and Saigon competing for popular support in the countryside rather than trying to win on the battlefield.

Some Americans here are so confident that Saigon is on the right path that they see no reason why U.S. troop withdrawals cannot be speeded up.

Certainly South Vietnam's regular troops appear to be showing a new aggressiveness ever since operations in Cambodia started in March.

This may be responsible for the Viet Cong's apparent switch in recent weeks to selective and small-scale guerrilla attacks instead of the large battles waged a few months ago.

Or it could be — as many observers here believe — that the Viet Cong is so understrength that it has to be more economical with manpower than in the past. Still others suggest the guerrillas are merely giving the Americans the chance to pull out gracefully.

The Americans have seen comparatively little action in the last two months and their casualties are down to new low levels.

The United States now has fewer than 400,000 soldiers in this country, a drop of 143,000 in 18 months.

Ky Speech Off

PARIS (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam has decided not to address a win-the-war rally in Washington in October, it was learned today.

His decision removes a potential point of irritation between Saigon and the Nixon administration. U.S. officials had been lobbying quietly to convince Ky to change his mind.

Hickel Raps Agnew 'Rhetoric'

WASHINGTON (WP) — In what appeared to be a critical slap at Vice-President Spiro Agnew, Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel told college students and administrators Friday night that he rejects the "rhetoric of polarization" just as he rejects rioting and violence.

"As hard as we try, we cannot tear the nation together," Hickel said in a speech Friday night to college and student body presidents from some 325 schools.

I don't ask the youth of America to be quiet," Hickel told the Association of Student Governments conference. "I ask you to be committed — committed in terms of a lifetime."

'SO LONG, SUCKERS'

HONG KONG (UPI) — Twenty photographers and newsmen turned out today to see a Filipino Chinese Buddhist monk make good his claim he could float on water in a sitting position.

Ko Sing Tsun, 58, said he would demonstrate his rare ability in Aberdeen Harbor.

Instead he went swimming — all the way to a nearby sampan which rowed out to sea, leaving the angry photographers and newsmen on shore.

IDENTITY POSITIVE

Suspect Urged To 'Face Music'

Citizenship Unclear

United States authorities say they are encouraging a young suspect in the robbery Thursday of a Victoria bank and the wounding of two city police officers to "face the music in Canada."

The young man, apprehended in U.S. waters early Friday morning, has been positively identified by Victoria RCMP as Berkhard Bateman, 19, of Ontario.

His citizenship, however, has not been established. RCMP say he has resided in Ontario for the past nine years, possibly in Belleville, but is believed to be originally from Hamburg, West Germany.

SEATTLE COURT

Bateman, who identified himself to U.S. authorities as Rory Shayne, appeared in King County Court at Seattle Friday on a charge of kidnapping Roger Smith of Vancouver, one of three hostages held aboard a sailboat in Thursday's chase following the bank robbery.

Bateman is expected to be returned to Victoria next week to be charged with armed robbery. City police Friday signed an information before a justice of the peace, serving notice of the charge.

If the suspect does not resist deportation, and if he is a Canadian citizen, he will be returned here, and the kidnapping charge would be dropped, U.S. Attorney Stan Pitkin said Friday.

"I would expect to stand aside in favor of the Canadian charges, Pitkin said.

"We're encouraging him to face the music in Canada."

California Home Toll Reaches 150

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dry, hot winds fanned fires on tinder-dry brush and forest land today and flames raged out of control on the fringes of this sprawling city, driving hundreds of persons from their homes.

Two major fires broke out to the west and north of the downtown area 25-30 miles away, destroying expensive homes in the Malibu area near the Pacific Ocean and sweeping through mountain passes in the northern and western parts of the populous San Fernando Valley.

One major fire started at a public dump in the Santa Monica mountains along Las Virgenes Road Friday just about the same time another blaze erupted on the northern side of the mountain ridge in the San Fernando Valley.

A third major fire broke in the Simi Valley of Ventura County.

By noon today, the flames charred more than 50,000 acres and destroyed at least 150 homes. See earlier story Page 3.

Arbitration Invoked In Mill Strike

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday invoked compulsory arbitration in the dispute between 55 electricians and the Port Alberni pulp and paper division of MacMillan Bloedel.

Peterson sent telegrams to the union and the company following an emergency cabinet meeting and passage of an order-in-council invoking compulsory sections of the provincial Mediation Commission Act.

The electricians, members of Local 230 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, called their strike and set up picket lines Friday afternoon.

FIRST TIME

It was the first time compulsory arbitration has been invoked on a union following mediation. The union rejected a settlement offer Wednesday.

Earlier this summer, the Teamsters Union agreed to go into mediation and to accept the settlement as binding. Compulsory arbitration was also used in a police dispute last year in Saanich.

It was also the first time the government has invoked compulsion against a union affiliated with the British Columbia Federation of Labor, a bitter foe of compulsory sections of the act.

The union later said it would obey the order even though it did not agree with it. "But we would like to see Mr. Peterson and have him justify the government's decision and listen to our arguments."

'NO RIGHT TO COMPLAIN'

PM Raps Demonstrators

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday that people who demonstrate in public have no right to complain if their names and pictures appear in newspapers.

The prime minister had been questioned at the annual meeting of l'Association des Hebdos de Canada — the association of French-language weekly newspapers of Canada — about journalists being asked to testify in court.

Reporters' notes on demonstrations and protestors were also being subpoenaed, the publishers said.

Trudeau replied that violent demonstrations "are a social phenomenon which has taken on a strength that it didn't have 20 years ago."

"I don't know why they (demonstrators) would complain if their pictures are taken and if journalists are called into court to present them as evidence."

Obviously they were not hidden during the protest.

The prime minister added that it seems demonstrators "have the right to hit the police, but the police don't have the right to hit them back."

DEMONSTRATED ONCE

Trudeau said he personally demonstrated against conscription during the Second World War "but I knew that if I rioted in the streets I ran the risk of getting a boot on the tail from the police."

Discussing the 1968 St. Jean Baptiste Day parade in Montreal when a violent demonstration was staged in front of the reviewing stand where he was sitting, Trudeau said:

"If you demonstrators have the courage to do that, you should have the courage to take it if the police rough you up a bit."

He said he understands professional secrecy when it concerns protection of the individual but added he "understands it less" when it involves people who break the law during demonstrations.

There wuz a lot o' doubt as t' who th' bandit really wuz, an' he seemed t' share it.

The Whole Mess Is Your Fault, Dr. Spock!

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Vice-President Spiro Agnew read from the baby care book of Dr. Benajmin Spock Friday night and blamed its advice to parents for helping foster a "pervasive policy of permissiveness."

Agnew told a $150-a-plate fund-raising dinner the book has sold more than 25 million copies. "Don't knock it," he said, and then read:

"You have to compromise. Overlook some of his (the child's) less irritating bad habits, realizing that they are not permanent."

Spock's book, Agnew said, advocates careful avoidance of "bossiness."

"Who do you suppose is to blame when, 10 years later, that child comes home from college and sits down at the table with dirty, bare feet and a disorderly faceful of hair?" Agnew asked.

"As much as sociological soreheads hate to admit it," the vice-president said, the recent "pervasive policy of permissiveness has turned out to be a tragic mistake. The age of indulgence, has eroded personal responsibility and corrupted discipline. It has replaced respect for authority with fear of repression."

Police arrested at least four persons outside the auditorium when a small group left a peaceful protest march and smashed about a dozen windows.

Earlier about 300 young persons passed out bologna sandwiches to passers by with leaflets asking, "Why pay $150 for balogna inside when you can get it free outside?"

Agnew told the audience of about 2,000 persons his recent campaign trips have a double mission: "Specifically, to help elect men to public office who will lean hard against the trend toward permissiveness;" and, in general, to mobilize a silent majority which has been "bulldozed for years" into thinking their values are "embarrassingly out of style."

But, the vice-president said, "the age of indulgences is at long last coming to an end. The time of individual responsibility is at hand."

SPONSOR DROPS EVENT AFTER $500,000 BATH

NEW YORK (AP) — Dow Jones announced Friday that it has temporarily dropped the $300,000 Dow Jones open, the world's richest golf tournament.

The inaugural tournament was staged in August at the Upper Montclair Country Club in Clifton, N.J. It followed by only a couple of weeks the $250,000 Westchester Classic in Harrison, N.Y.

"The tournament was a success in every phase except financial," said Ed Roll, Dow Jones vice-president and tournament director. "It cost us about $500,000."

"We don't intend to get out of golf. We hope to sponsor a pro-amateur event in 1971 and perhaps return to the regular tour schedule in 1972.

"If so, our plans would be for another $300,000 event."

The Upper Montclair tournament carried a first prize of $60,000 won by Bobby Nichols.

Yanks Cruising To Easy Victory

MADRID (Reuters) — The United States team continued to play steady, unspectacular golf and increased its lead in the Eisenhower Trophy world team golf chompionship to nine strokes Friday with one round to play.

Marvin Giles and Allen Miller each shot one-under-par 71 over the Puerta de Mierro Club course Friday. U.S. amateur champion Lanny Wadkins had a 72 to give the U.S. 214 for the day and a three-round total of 640, eight under par.

The top three scores of each four-member team count toward the total.

South Africa moved into second place with a third-round total of 216 for an over-all score of 649. Australia was third with 651 after 212 in Friday's round. New Zealand was fourth at 652.

Canada also fared badly Friday with 228 for a three-round total of 662 and is in sixth place. For Canada, Stu Hamilton of Brampton, Ont., had his third straight 75, Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., shot 76 and Wayne MacDonald of Brampton, Ont., and Keith Alexander of Calgary each carded 77.

Stars Clash With Vikings In Opener

All local clubs in the Vancouver Island Hockey League commence two-hour workouts Monday at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Defending-champion University of Victoria Vikings take to the ice at 6:30 a.m., Butler Brothers take over at 6 p.m., Stockers North Americans start at 8 p.m. and Victoria Cubs begin practice chores at 10 p.m.

Chemainus Blues, the other squad in the five-team league, will be practicising on home ice in Fuller's Lake Arena.

The VIHL season opens on Friday, Oct. 2, with the annual all-star game. Vikings will battle an all-star team made up of players from the other four teams at 8:30 p.m.

City Canoeists Enter Fraser River Contest

Twelve members of the Victoria Canoe Club are competing today in the first leg of the fourth annual Fraser River race.

Victorians entered in the 40-mile, two-day marathon include Dave Thompson, Ron Steele, Pat Townsend, Virginia Sauter, Wilf Harper, Kitsie Harper, Paul Pearlman, Jim Tillinger, Nils Lovenmark, Bev. Lovenmark, John Williw and his son, John.

Views, Tyees On Right Foot

Mount View Hornets and Victoria Tyees, the "top dogs" last season, launched their 1970-71 High School Senior Boy's Soccer League on the right foot while Reynolds came along Friday to fashion the first upset.

Last season's playoff champs, Hornets collected two-goal performances from Doug Marshall and Bob Bolitho to ring up a 4-1 victory over Oak Bay.

Oak Bay, down 3-0 at the half, got its only goal when Danny Lomas connected on a penalty kick.

Tyees, defending league champions, flashed early power in an impressive 7-0 romp over Mt. Douglas. Stu Taylor sparked Victoria's attack with three goals while Garnet Moen (2), Don Rainier and John Roodbol added the others.

Victoria led 2-0 at the half.

CLAREMONT UPSET

Reynolds upset Claremont 3-1 as Mike Finlayson scored three times. The Cees, who finished in a tie for second last season, got their only goal from Brett Smyth early in the second half.

In a fourth game Friday, played under the lights at Royal Athletic Park, Esquimalt blew a 3-0 advantage before squeezing past Belmont 4-3.

The league's eight teams will play a 14-game schedule.

The playoff for the B.C. championship will be decided under a new format this year. In past years, the provincial finalists wese decided after advancing through zone and district eliminations.

This year, an eight-team B.C. tournament will be staged in Victoria. The eight zone representatives will be divided into two divisions who will play a round-robin semi-final series. Survivors step into the final.

Chew Excavating Hornets will be trying to stretch a winning streak and retain sole possession of the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League lead Sunday when they tackle Cowichan Timbermen in Duncan.

Hornets are unbeaten in four games and Timbermen have three wins and a loss.

In the other league game, Oak Bay Farmer Construction meets James Bay Mustangs at Centennial Stadium.

Both games start at 2 p.m.

'Singles' Also Help In Baseball Drive

A $200 donation is sort of a "home run" gift, but officials seeking to raise $3,500 for the Victoria Centennials' baseball club feel "singles" also would do the job.

Centennials need at least $3,500 in order to represent Canada in the world amateur baseball tournament at Columbia in November.

A donation of $200 Friday by Molson's Brewery has helped swell the fund almost to $2,800.

Before the Molson's donation came in, Victoria Amateur Baseball Association president Gar Taylor expressed dismay that "some sports fans feel ashamed about contributing only a dollar."

While large donations are welcome, Taylor seemed determined to make an issue about how welcome small donations could be.

ALL ADDS UP

"They seemed to be ashamed to offer a dollar. Gee, I wish we could get the point across that they shouldn't feel that way. We'll take anything . . . a dollar . . . 50 cents . . . anything . . .

"It all adds up . . ."

Donations to the fund may be mailed or taken at the Gorge Hotel, Ingraham Hotel, Imperial Esso Centre, Radio CFAX, Canada Trust or Bell's Men's Wear.

Three Share Triple Hopes In Net Finale

Three players started out the day with triple hopes, but no more than two could achieve the sweep as the Victoria Racquet Club's tennis tournament headed for a windup.

The sweep hopes were held by Rober Skillings, Sally Wood and Ruth Trelawnly.

Skillings, third-seeded, qualified for men's singles final Friday by defeating second-ranked Marty Taylor 10-8, 8-6. He was to face top-seeded Ernie Cockayne, who defeated veteran Ted Smuthe 6-1, 6-2, in the other semi-final.

Skillings also teamed up with his brother Pat to move into the men's doubles final against Cockayne and Taylor, and with Mrs. Trelawny in the mixed against the Wood-Smythe pairing.

Mrs. Wood and Wendy Cuppage downed Brenda Cunningham and Sandra Moss 6-4, 6-1, to reach the women's doubles final against Mrs. Trelawny and Vivien Davies.

Mrs. Trelawny and Mrs. Wood also are the women's singles finalists.

Gretel Appeal Denied; Fifth Race Postponed

BULLETIN

Today's scheduled fifth race was cancelled at noon because of dense fog and lack of wind and rescheduled for Monday.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Gretel II met Intrepid, the United States defender, in the fifth America's Cup race today and it could be curtains for the Aussie challengers following a long night of wrangling over a race she won, then lost, almost a week ago.

What had seemed to be a 3-1 American lead in the best-of-seven series was thrown into turmoil Friday when the Aussies decided to reopen the disqualification of Gretel II following a collision in the second race last Sunday.

The New York Yacht Club race committee, after pondering the appeal all evening aboard Incredible, the committee boat, ruled that its original decision would stand.

But it was not until well after midnight that the NYCC committee notified Sir Frank Packer, head of the Aussie syndicate, that the Australian's case had again been denied.

OVERSHADOWS RACE

The uproar overshadowed fifth race which would keep the cup in America if Intrepid wins.

Southwest winds of 10-15 knots were forecast, the type of breeze in which Intrepid and her skipper, Bill Ficker, took in their sailing triumphs. But a heavy fog lay on Newport overnight and fog has forced cancellation of one race already in this uproariuous contest.

Light winds washed out another.

Protests have been a dime a dozen in this series which has seen a man fall overboard, a scare from a mistakenly-identified floating mine and a bee sting that caused an Intrepid crewmen to be rushed ashore by helicopter.

There has also been some racing in which Gretel II has proven herself, if not the best challenger ever, then the best since Endeavour from Britain 36 years ago.

Hussein Names Palestinian Prime Minister

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — King Hussein of Jordan formed a new government today under a civilian, Amman Radio reported.

The new cabinet replaces the military government formed Sept. 16, a day before the king's tanks rolled into Amman to try to crush the Palestinian guerrillas. The military premier, Brig. Mohammed Daoud, resigned Friday.

The king's mandate to Toukan, a Palestinian, charged him to do everything possible to return life in the country to normal after nine days of fighting between royal troops and guerrillas and to heal regional differences between East Bank Jordanians and the Palestinians.

Toukan also will be foreign minister in the 13-man cabinet, which includes at least five soldiers.

At least five cabinet members, including the premier himself, are Palestinians.

IN FORMER CABINET

Five of the soldiers in the new cabinet were in the former military cabinet, which has been denounced by the Palestinian commandos and for whose replacement the Arab heads of state in Cairo had been pressing.

They are Brig. Mazen Ajlouni, who also is deputy to Field Marshal Habis Majali, military governor; Brig. Saleh Al-Shari, Col. Abu Ghosh, Maj. Mukley Al-Awdatallah and Maj. Adnan Abu Odeh.

Gen. Akkash al-Zabin, a former chief of staff who replaces Maj.-Gen. Mutlaq Eid as defence minister, is new to the cabinet.

Toukan, the new prime minister, is a former deputy premier. He was chief of Hussein's royal court.

Meanwhile, Palestinian guerrillas said today they released 16 of their 54 air-hijack hostages Friday because the food and water they were using was needed for Palestinian children.

U.S. Plans To Rearm Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP) —The United States will replace the arms and ammunition that the Jordanian army lost battling guerrillas and Syrians, deputy secretary of defence David Packard said Friday.

Packard said the Pentagon was encouraged by the success of King Hussein's army, equipped largely with American and British tanks and planes, and that the arms replenishment would be made "to make sure they have a continuing military capability."

Assessing the aftermath of a week of bitter fighting in Jordan, Packard told newsmen at a breakfast meeting Friday that the Pentagon had come to "two or three rather important conclusions."

● "Though there is lots of speculation about why the Syrians pulled out," Packard said "in my judgment one of the most important reasons was the Jordanian army's ability to give them a rough time."

Life Terms Ordered For Grim Reapers

CALGARY (CP) — An immediate appeal will be launched against the non-capital murder conviction of 13 men charged following the death of a motorcycle gang president, defence lawyers said Friday.

The men, all but two members of the Grim Reapers' motorcycle club, were the largest group ever convicted in a single murder case in Canada, a justice department source said.

They were brought to trial in Alberta Supreme Court after Ronald George Hartley, 23, leader of the Outcasts motorcycle club, died March 7.

Evidence during the five-day trial indicated he died after one of the accused hit him on the head with a length of chain during a confrontation between the gangs on a rural road southeast of the city.

The jury was out for almost nine hours before they returned their guilty verdict Friday and Mr. Justice Neil Primrose passed the mandatory life sentences.

JUROR SHAKES HEAD

As he passed sentence one of the 11 jurors shook his head and the judge asked him why he had done so.

"My Lord, I just don't understand this. What was the charge?"

"The charge was murder," the judge replied.

"No, I mean the sentence, Your Lordship."

As the member continued to shake his head the jury was polled and the judge said:

"You were polled . . . guilty as charged. You know the charge, you saw the indictment. Is there some mistake? Mr. Foreman, what do you say?"

The foreman answered:

"The only . . . there is no dissension within the group,

DEMONSTRATORS in St. Jerome, Que., hold up effigy representing United States interests and placards denouncing the "sale of Quebec" to American business interests. About 400 persons Friday marched through the city, throwing Molotov cocktails and smashing windows, but no arrests were made. Demonstrators gathered a short distance from where Premier Robert Bourassa and Jean Marchand, federal minister of regional economic expansion, were speaking to businessmen.

TO COMBAT VIET CONG PRESSURE

Saigon Arming Peasants

SAIGON (Reuters) — Arming South Vietnamese peasants to fight the Viet Cong would have been considered madness a few years ago.

But the Saigon government has already handed out 500,000 weapons and plans to distribute another million next year to a vast segment of the population traditionally considered most susceptible to Viet Cong pressure and recruitment.

The arms are going to a loosely controlled 3.5 million-strong army called the People's Self-Defence Forces. A type of militia, its members are pledged to defend their own homes and hamlets.

United States Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker has called the peasant army an increasingly important and psychological force in the search for peace in Vietnam.

"When the people take and bear arms publicly, they openly commit themselves to the government," he said. "It also shows, incidentally, that the government of Vietnam has faith in the people that it is arming."

But what the move really means is that the war here has changed course, with the Viet Cong and Saigon competing for popular support in the countryside rather than trying to win on the battlefield.

Some Americans here are so confident that Saigon is on the right path that they see no reason why U.S. troop withdrawals cannot be speeded up.

Certainly South Vietnam's regular troops appear to be showing a new aggressiveness ever since operations in Cambodia started in March.

This may be responsible for the Viet Cong's apparent switch in recent weeks to selective and small-scale guerrilla attacks instead of the large battles waged a few months ago.

Or it could be — as many observers here believe — that the Viet Cong is so understrength that it has to be more economical with manpower than in the past. Still others suggest the guerrillas are merely giving the Americans the chance to pull out gracefully.

The Americans have seen comparatively little action in the last two months and their casualties are down to new low levels.

The United States now has fewer than 400,000 soldiers in this country, a drop of 143,000 in 18 months.

Ky Speech Off

PARIS (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam has decided not to address a win-the-war rally in Washington in October, it was learned today.

His decision removes a potential point of irritation between Saigon and the Nixon administration. U.S. officials had been lobbying quietly to convince Ky to change his mind.

Hickel Raps Agnew 'Rhetoric'

WASHINGTON (WP) — In what appeared to be a critical slap at Vice-President Spiro Agnew, Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel told college students and administrators Friday night that he rejects the "rhetoric of polarization" just as he rejects rioting and violence.

"As hard as we try, we cannot tear the nation together," Jickel said in a speech Friday night to college and student body presidents from some 325 schools.

"I don't ask the youth of America to be quiet," Hickel told the Association of Student Governments conference. "I ask you to be committed — committed in terms of a lifetime."

'SO LONG, SUCKERS'

HONG KONG (UPI) — Twenty photographers and newsmen turned out today to see a Filipino Chinese Buddhist monk make good his claim he could float on water in a sitting position.

Ko Sing Tsun, 58, said he would demonstrate his rare ability in Aberdeen Harbor.

Instead he went swimming — all the way to a nearby sampan which rowed out to sea, leaving the angry photographers and newsmen on shore.

Suspect Urged To 'Face Music'

Citizenship Unclear

United States authorities say they are encouraging a young suspect in the robbery Thursday of a Victoria bank and the wounding of two city police officers to "face the music in Canada."

The young man, apprehended in U.S. waters early Friday morning, has been positively identified by Victoria RCMP as Berkhard Bateman, 19, of Ontario.

His citizenship, however, has not been established. RCMP say he has resided in Ontario for the past nine years, possibly in Belleville, but is believed to be originally from Hamburg, West Germany.

SEATTLE COURT

Bateman, who identified himself to U.S. authorities as Rory Shayne, appeared in King County Court at Seattle Friday on a charge of kidnapping Roger Smith of Vancouver, one of three hostages held aboard a sailboat in Thursday's chase following the bank robbery.

Bateman is expected to be returned to Victoria next week to be charged with armed robbery. City police Friday signed an information before a justice of the peace, serving notice of the charge.

If the suspect does not resist deportation, and if he is a Canadian citizen, he will be returned here, and the kidnapping charge would be dropped, U.S. Attorney Stan Pitkin said Friday.

"I would expect to stand aside in favor of the Canadian charges, Pitkin said.

"We're encouraging him to face the music in Canada."

California Home Toll Reaches 150

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dry, hot winds fanned fires on tinder-dry brush and forest land today and flames raged out of control on the fringes of this sprawling city, driving hundreds of persons from their homes.

Two major fires broke out to the west and north of the downtown area 25-30 miles away, destroying expensive homes in the Malibu area near the Pacific Ocean and sweeping through mountain passes in the northern and western parts of the populous San Fernando Valley.

One major fire started at a public dump in the Santa Monica mountains along Las Virgenes Road Friday just about the same time another blaze erupted on the northern side of the mountain ridge in the San Fernando Valley.

A third major fire broke in the Simi Valley of Ventura County.

By noon today, the flames charred more than 50,000 acres and destroyed at least 150 homes. See earlier story Page 3.

Arbitration Invoked In Mill Strike

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Friday invoked compulsory arbitration in the dispute between 55 electricians and the Port Alberni pulp and paper division of MacMillan Bloedel.

Peterson sent telegrams to the union and the company following an emergency cabinet meeting and passage of an order-in-council invoking compulsory sections of the provincial Mediation Commission Act.

The electricians, members of Local 230 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, called their strike and set up picket lines Friday afternoon.

FIRST TIME

It was the first time compulsory arbitration has been invoked on a union following mediation. The union rejected a settlement offer Wednesday.

Earlier this summer, the Teamsters Union agreed to go into mediation and to accept the settlement as binding. Compulsory arbitration was also used in a police dispute last year in Saanich.

It was also the first time the government has invoked compulsion against a union affiliated with the British Columbia Federation of Labor, a bitter foe of compulsory sections of the act.

The union later said it would obey the order even though it did not agree with it. "But we would like to see Mr. Peterson and have him justify the government's decision and listen to our arguments."

'NO RIGHT TO COMPLAIN'

PM Raps Demonstrators

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday that people who demonstrate in public have no right to complain if their names and pictures appear in newspapers.

The prime minister had been questioned at the annual meeting of l'Association des Hebdos de Canada — the association of French-language weekly newspapers of Canada — about journalists being asked to testify in court.

Reporters' notes on demonstrations and protestors were also being subpoenaed, the publishers said.

Trudeau replied that violent demonstrations "are a social phenomenon which has taken on a strength that it didn't have 20 years ago."

"I don't know why they (demonstrators) would complain if their pictures are taken and if journalists are called into court to present them as evidence."

Obviously they were not hidden during the protest.

The prime minister added that it seems demonstrators "have the right to hit the police, but the police don't have the right to hit them back."

DEMONSTRATED ONCE

Trudeau said he personally demonstrated against conscription during the Second World War "but I knew that if I rioted in the streets I ran the risk of getting a boot on the tail from the police."

Discussing the 1968 St. Jean Baptiste Day parade in Montreal when a violent demonstration was staged in front of the reviewing stand where he was sitting, Trudeau said:

"If you demonstrators have the courage to do that, you should have the courage to take it if the police rough you up a bit."

He said he understands professional secrecy when it concerns protection of the individual but added he "understands it less" when it involves people who break the law during demonstrations.

'The Whole Mess Is Your Fault, Dr. Spock'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Vice-President Spiro Agnew read from the baby care book of Dr, Benajmin Spock Friday night and blamed its advice to perents for helping foster a "pervasive policy of permissiveness."

Agnew told a $150-a-plate fund-raising dinner the book has sold more than 25 million copies. "Don't knock it," he said, and then read:

"You have to compromise. Overlook some of his (the child's) less irritating bad habits, realizing that they are not permanent."

Spock's book, Agnew said, advocates careful avoidance of "bossiness."

"Who do you suppose is to blame when, 10 years later, that child comes home from college and sits down at the table with dirty, bare feet and a disorderly faceful of hair?" Agnew asked.

"As much as sociological soreheads hate to admit it," the vice-president said, the recent "pervasive policy of permissiveness has turned out to be a tragic mistake. The age of indulgence, has eroded personal responsibility and corrupted discipline. It has replaced respect for authority with fear of repression."

Police arrested at least four persons outside the auditorium when a small group left a peaceful protest march and smashed about a dozen windows.

Earlier about 300 young persons passed out bologna sandwiches to passers by with leaflets asking, "Why pay $150 for balogna inside when you can get it free outside?"

Agnew told the audience of about 2,000 persons his recent campaign trips have a double mission: "Specifically, to help elect men to public office who will lean hard against the trend toward permissiveness;" and, in general, to mobilize a silent majority which has been "bulldozed for years" into thinking their values are "embarrassingly out of style."

But, the vice-president said, "the age of indulgences is at long last coming to an end. The time of individual responsibility is at hand."

Consumer Debt Shows Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian consumers increased their debt to banks, stores and finance companies by less than six cents on the dollar in the year to midsummer, although the pace of borrowing picked up sharply in July.

By contrast, consumer credit had expanded between the summers of 1968 and 1969 at a rate of about 17 cents on the dollar.

About one-fifth of the growth during the most recent 12-month stretch took place in July alone.

Figures published Friday by Dominion Bureau of Statistics show that the expansion of consumer credit in the year to the end of July came through personal bank loans, borrowing on life-insurance policies and individual loans of $1,500 or more from finance and loan companies.

Debts for purchases of family cars declined. So did small cash borrowings from loan companies. Credit for furniture and appliances was unchanged.

The consumer debt in all categories tallied monthly, which makes up about four-fifths of all such debt in Canada, amounted to $8,875 million at the end of July.

That was an increase of 5.7 per cent from the $8,400 million at the end of July, 1969, but it was up by more than one per cent in the month of July alone from $8,778 million in June. A year earlier, the total debt held steady in July.

Fasteller Service Adopted

A leading Canadian bank's solution to the noon-hour wicket jam reached Victoria this week and was being eyed by other branches eager to speed up the flow of customers at peak banking hours.

Fasteller Service, marked by a green carpet and roped off with a gold cord, was instituted by the Douglas and Pandora branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

So simple it should have been conceived years ago, the idea merely separates the wicket area from the waiting area, with all persons wishing a teller's services queuing in a single line along the green carpet.

As quickly as one customer leaves any of the open wickets, the person at the head of the line moves into his place. At no time does the one being served have anyone breathing down his neck.

And best of all, the persons waiting get served at the fastest moving wickets.

Those customarily prone to picking the shortest queus (invariably the slowest moving) are thus saved the agony of making the wrong choice.

Buying Spree Marks Week on Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — Moments before the closing bell in last Thursday's session, a cheer went up from some 2,000 men on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

They had good reason to cheer: turnover that day soared to 21,340,000 shares — second only to the 21,350,000 shares traded June 13, 1968.

The swollen volume that session plus a turnover Friday of 20,470,000 shares — the fifth highest volume in exchange history — provided fresh evidence that investors have shaken off the despair that gripped them after the market's 18-month decline.

"Before August, no matter how good news was, it wouldn't lift the market," commented John Smith, analyst for Fahnestock and Co. "Now it's the other way around."

Thursday, encouraging news from the Middle East, and a labor department report of progress in the fight against inflation combined to lift the industrial average almost five points.

Investors went on a buying spree, purchasing particularly many of the so-called glamor issues that had suffered such a beating last spring. Institutions — mutual funds, pension funds, banks and insurance companies — waded deeply into the market. The result of all this activity, of course, was a breathtaking volume of 21,340,000 shares.

Friday's modest gain in stock prices, well reflected in a 2½-point gain in the industrial average, was attributed primarily to news that opposing forces in the Jordanian war had reached a ceasefire agreement.

Of the 1,774 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange this week, 1,128 advanced while 519 declined. New lows were touched by 98 issues and highs by 20.

Big board volume this week rose to 83,420,550 shares from 65,274,270 shares the previous week.

During the week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.28 points to 761.77. The Associated Press 60-stock average advanced 2.5 to 257.1. Standard and Poor's 500-stock index climbed 1.35 to 83.97 while the New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks rose 0.78 to 22.26.

The American Stock Exchange index advanced .49 to 22.34.

Of the week's 20 most-active issues on the New York Stock Exchange, 15 advanced, four declined and one was unchanged.

DOES A MAN HAVE TO RIOT . . . . . . TO GET THE MESSAGE ACROSS?

Toothless Welfare Laws Are Gnawing at the Poor

By PETER McNELLY

The British North American Act must be rewritten to give the federal government jurisdiction over welfare programs.

Otherwise, provincial governments will continue to shortchange welfare recipients through a variety of unequal and inadequate laws.

These were the views of Walter Olszewski, president of the Victoria Low Income Group, upon his return Friday from an Ottawa conference of the National Council of Welfare.

The NCW, of which Olszewski is a British Columbia representative, is a federal advisory body created earlier this year by federal Health Minister John Munro.

★

Olszewski said he went to the Ottawa meeting to find out what powers the federal government has under the Canada Assistance Plan to regulate welfare programs in Canada.

What did he find out? "The federal government can't do a damn thing to force the provincial governments to abide by the Canada Assistance Plan except cut off funds."

What does this mean to Olszewski? "The act isn't worth the paper it's printed on."

He said federal deputy welfare minister J. W. Willard told him that the government sees the act primarily as a cost-sharing mechanism, not a policy document.

The Canada Assistance Plan was passed in 1967. Under provisions of the act, provincial governments may make agreements with the federal government to receive 50 per cent of social allowance costs from Ottawa.

★

But what upsets Olszewski, and other NCW members across Canada, he said, is the discovery that the federal government has no power to force provinces to live up to the spirit of the act except by withdrawing its money.

Munro once threatened to do that if British Columbia persisted in refusing welfare to locked-out workers. The issued boiled over on May 16, 1970 when Munro made his threat.

He told reporters in Ottawa that he was prepared to take "action" if B.C. had violated any federal law because of the policy.

"The fact that a person is involved in a labor dispute is irrelevant when considering whether a person is eligible for social assistance," Munro said.

But Olszewski says all that was empty talk because B.C. Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi made the no-welfare-to-locked-out-workers policy stick.

★

The reason he could do this, he says, is because the BNA act makes welfare a provincial responsibility. This view was confirmed Friday by an official in B.C.'s rehabilitation department.

Under provincial legislation, direct responsibility for welfare has been transferred to the muncipalities, though the provincial government pays 30 per cent of welfare costs.

(Municipalities pay 20 per cent and the federal government pays 50 per cent.)

Olszewski said NCW members agreed that a uniform welfare program is necessary in Canada, so they passed a resolution urging Munro to "institute a policy and program audit of all social assistance programs to establish the nature and extent of any violations of the Canada Assistance Plan Act."

★

Olszewski's own solution is, as usual, more radical than that. He wants Ottawa to withdraw Canada Assistance Plan money from British Columbia right now.

This would force the municipalities to demand better welfare policies for fear the poor will revolt.

"When a man is hungry and he sees no place to turn, what does he do? The first thing he does is get angry. Now imagine how he would feel if his allowance was cut in half once the Canada Assistance Plan money disappeared."

Olszewski isn't the only one who's been talking about "poor power" lately.

On Aug. 24, Reuben Baetz, executive director of the moderate Canadian Welfare Council, said the threat of violence by the poor often "seems to have more effect on changing public attitudes for the better than a logical argument."

And the same day Dr. John Frei, executive director of the Metropolitan Toronto Social Planning Council, said poor people will riot unless politicians step up welfare spending.

Olszewski's view is that welfare recipients across Canada are getting shortchanged because provincial governments set maximum benefits according to certain family sizes.

★

He says this contradicts federal welfare policy for the Canada Assistance Plan as described in Section Two of a government document, Social Security in Canada 1969.

The document states that the Canada Assistance Plan does not set maximum social allowance rates to permit the provinces to "adjust rates to local conditions and to take into account the needs of special groups."

During the NCW conference last week, Senator David Croll said Olszewski's charge is true "right across the country."

"The amount of benefits in most provinces leave these people just scratching to get by in the last week of the month." he said.

What frustrates Olszewski is that the federal government has specific policies about the way its Canada Assistance Plan money should be used but lacks the constitutional power to make its policies stick.

★

In addition to giving welfare solely on the basis of need and allowing flexible rates, government policy — as spelled out in Social Security in Canada 1969 — does not allow residency to be a factor in welfare eligibility.

But B.C. does not give welfare — except for emergency assistance — to persons who have lived in the province less than one month.

These examples are clear violations of federal policy, Olszewski says, But B.C. is not alone.

In Ontario, for example, an applicant for welfare must have a red Canada Manpower registration card stamped before getting assistance.

★

If Manpower refuses to stamp the card — and Toronto's Just Society Movement, a welfare rights group, says this often happens — welfare is denied.

Testimony at the NCW conference from Longueuil, Que. claimed that a Pandora's Box of abuse and harassment there was systematically demoralizing the poor.

A federally-sponsored meeting of Canada's low income and welfare rights groups will take place in Toronto in December.

Olszewski said he is on the planning committee for the meeting which may result in the creation of a national welfare rights organization.

Such a group, he said, will push for changes in federal and provincial welfare legislation by lobbying for the poor.

Hospital Deal Nearing

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is confident that an agreement can be reached in the dispute between the South Vancouver Island Hospital Society and the Capital Regional Hospital Board.

The dispute is holding up hospital construction.

The minister, after meeting representatives of the hospital society and the regional board in the Legislative Buildings Friday, said he hoped for a settlement within the next few days.

"We are just on the edge of having an agreement," he said.

Alex Wood, president of the society, was also optimistic.

Officials of the regional board refused comment on the meeting.

The main issue at stake is whether the regional board or the hospital society should have title to the property that might be acquired for expansion of St. Joseph's.

The regional board wants the title to the land and a guarantee that the 150-bed extended care unit planned for the site can be built within government guidelines.

Ask The Times

Q. A friend of mine recently died and left me an old picture which shows a pack of hounds with monkeys on their backs running along a road. The picture is titled "The Steeplechase" and the caption under it reads: "Tom baffles the pursuers and heads them down the road to Bedlam". I've been told it's a very famous painting. Can you tell me the author or anything else about it? M. B.

A. This appears to be a print, probably engraved in the late 18th century. If it is the name of the artist and the engraver would be in the lower corners under the caption. Officials at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria are often able to identify prints and could possibly help you further if you took the print to the gallery at 1040 Moss.

Questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

700 Teachers To Talk Math

Approximately 700 teachers are expected to attend the ninth annual Northwest Mathematics Conference Oct. 16 and 17 at Oak Bay Junior Secondary.

Local teachers and faculty members of the University of Victoria will be among the speakers.

STORES PLAN 6 P.M. CLOSING

New opening and closing hours for downtown stores are expected to be ratified at a meeting of the Downtown Merchants' Association on Oct. 6.

Under the new schedule, stores will open at 9:30 a.m. and close at 6 p.m.

J. D. Nixon, secretary-manager of the association, said the main purpose of the Oct. 6 meeting was to advise all downtown businesses of the change and to set a date for it to come into effect.

B.C. Hydro will be re-scheduling their bus services through the extra half-hour period, he said.

On Friday, stores will remain open until 9:30 p.m.

He also said merchants have ratified closing hours for downtown stores in December.

Starting Dec. 3, stores will be open until 9:30 every night until Christmas.

One Thing, Sloppy Driver: You Forgot the Computer

Drivers who flout authority with illegal turns, going too fast or too slow, and not quite stopping for stop signs have been getting some unpleasant surprises lately.

It comes under the label of future shock, and it is generated by a ruthlessly efficient IBM computer system that keeps tabs on drivers who break the rules.

By STEVE HUME

The eagle-eyed and ever-vigilant computer now compiles, stores and continuously scans drivers' records under the new no-fine demerit system of dealing with traffic offences.

It is the essential component in the B.C. government's driver improvement program, says Art Sharpe, administrative officer of driver licensing at the Motor-Vehicles Branch.

With the computer's lightning access to files, the motor vehicles branch is able to watch continuously how each driver's record develops.

As a driver accumulates demerits for each traffic violation, the record is stored on magnetic tape. The computer is programmed to read the tape, and when a record reaches six demerits a warning letter to the offender is automatically printd out bp the machine.

At nine demierits the computer automatically kicks out the record and the Motor-Vehicles Branch takes over.

Nine demerits, Sharpe points out, is the total at which an offending driver is given the opportunity to show just cause why his licence should not be suspended for 30 days.

"At six points our computer's letter recommends the driver register for a defensive driving course, but at nine points his record is reviewed and he is called in for an interview and told to submit anything he feels is pertinent on his behalf," Sharpe says.

Under the demerit system minor violations like failing to stop at a red light are worth two points, offences like speeding draw three, more serious charges like driving without insurance get six points, and offences which come under the criminal code automatically get 10 points.

"What we're trying to do is adjudicate each case on its own merits," Sharpe says.

Under this program, any violation which involves alcohol automatically draws a 30-day suspension, "they can get more but they can't get less," he says.

But for accumulations of nine points by way of lesser infractions drivers are given an option — they can take the 30-day suspension or take a defensive driving course.

The option is offered when the offender comes in for his interview.

"If he's belligerent the only thing we can do is carry on with the suspension. But a suspension is only a last resort. What can a person learn while he's off the road — one thing only, inconvenience."

"We'd sooner have him take courses."

Once a driver accumulates nine points on his record, his case is automatically reviewed with each subsequent violation. If it is thought necessary, the offender is called in for another interview.

"What we try to find out are the circumstances involved. We try to find out if they're trying to improve their driving habits — if so we'll go along with them. If they have a belligerent attitude—well they're going to be a danger to others. . . ."

Sharpe said any appeals go directly before the superintendent of the Motor-Vehicles Branch.

He said the system appears to please everyone, including drivers, because its efficiency lies in its flexibility.

"It's consciously flexible and it doesn't rely on the letter of the law."

"We have found a tremendous change in the people being interviewed over their driving record since the no-fine law came into effect. Everybody's pocketbook is exactly the same size now."

Those people who dispute traffic violation reports which result in demerits "really believe they didn't do it," Sharpe says.

"As a result people are more anxious about the points than they ever were about fines. We've had people come in and ask if they could pay fines to avoid demerits."

Under the new system the computer has adjudicated some 35,017 adult drivers' records to the end of August and 12,945 warning letters have been mailed, Sharpe says.

A total of 4,558 drivers have been given the option of a 30-day suspension or a defensive driving course, and a total of 4,376 licences were finally suspended.

Some 6,378 drivers were subject to court suspensions of driving privileges, and 1,221 were subject to mandatory suspensions.

The Motor-Vehicles Branch adjudicated 3,099 juvenile records in the same period of time, mailed 99 warning letters and sent out some 9,375 advisory letters to parents.

Only 169 juveniles finally had licences suspended by the branch, but 48 were subject to court suspensions and 310 faced mandatory suspensions.

While 62 juveniles were convicted on impaired driving charges between January and the end of August, 6,412 adults were convicted.

Police Roadblock Ticks Them Off

A seven-hour roadblock on Esquimalt and Tyee roads Friday by city police resulted in two arrests and two 24-hour roadside licence suspensions of the 1,320 cars checked.

Ten policemen and 15 auxiliary officers were involved in the roadblock that started at 5 p.m. and ended shortly before midnight.

One of the arrests was for impaired driving, the other for disobeying a summons.

Sixty-eight drivers were given summonses, including 42 for no inspection stickers and five for failing to change their address.

One driver was summonsed for speeding over 30 m.p.h.

Another 181, drivers were given warnings, including 82 to produce proof of insurance coverage, 44 to produce driver's licences and 38 to produce registration slips.

Fourteen drivers were told to report to the motor vehicle testing station on McKenzie Avenue.

ON A NORMAL DAY IN this newsroom, the tempo begins to slacken soon after noon. A typewriter or two continues to click, but a condition approaching calm sets in. The work-day is by no means over, but it has arrived at a breathing space.

This condition tends to puzzle and even disappoint people who drop in bearing club notices and the like. Where's the snap-and-crackle, the electric tension that is supposed to be a newspaper's working climate?

The editors and reporters who get out the paper know the answer to that question. This is the hour when anything can happen. Just often enough to make complacency hazardous, it does happen.

And happen it did on Thursday. The word came crackling in: bank alarm, shots fired. A cops-and-robber sequence that rivalled thriller fiction was unreeling on this peaceful peninsula.

The relaxed atmosphere shattered on the instant. Our three-star edition was away, and no hope of catching it even with a fast news flash. But the home edition would carry the account, or as much of it as was then available, on its front page.

Any number of times, we've been assured that the role of a newspaper has changed—that the dispensing of what my trade calls hard news is no longer our prime function.

Up to a point, that may be so. With a big, fast, multi-angle story breaking, however, men who cut their teeth on hard news aren't of a mind to deal in abstractions.

The voice of a newspaper speaks through its editorials. But its heart is its city desk, and, with a local story of first magnitude snowballing from one dramatic development to the next, that heart began to pump adrenalin.

It was a day for the city desk crew—the city editor, his assistant, the men on rewrite who tailored continuity out of the swift-shifting pursuit. It was also a day for the reporters, whether in the field or hunched over their phones.

For some of the younger men, it was the first big story, the one that will be remembered for a lifetime.

There's truth as well as corn in the observation that any newsman, no matter what his job, stays a reporter at heart.

It was a day when those of us who had no part in putting the story together entertained long thoughts and a certain amount of envy from the sidelines.

Please don't read from this account a lack of concern for policemen wounded and hostages subjected to a very grim experience. We shared the general concern, and it was good to know that the hostages were safe, and the prolonged, dangerous caper ended.

But it was a big story, and I felt you might be interested in a glimpse of a newsroom when the pressure is on.

In the aftermath, two facts emerge.

One is that there are easier places from which to escape under hot pursuit than a peninsula on an island. The suspect is one of a very few who made it—for what a flight that ended in American custody may be worth.

Another fact is that police efficiency as demonstrated throughout the chase was of a very high order. It would be hard to imagine a more ticklish situation for police than the one that developed in the seagoing stage of the episode.

Had Canadian officers pressed too hard, and placed capture ahead of hostages' safety, lives might have been lost.

IN LATE AUGUST, TRAIL-making volunteers from Shawnigan Lake Boys' School plugged six and a half miles from Buttle Lake to a choice location in Strathcona Park's Marble Meadows.

A helicopter under parks branch charter airlifted the makings of a cabin to the site. The boys got to work.

Result, a Batzer hut, designed to withstand heavy snows, and fitted with a stove and eight bunks for hikers. Any group willing to make the climb can shelter without charge in the parks branch-approved hut.

It's already been used and appreciated by families and hiking parties.

Materials were donated by a Victoria contractor who prefers to remain anonymous. The hut was prefabricated by the students under direction of Shawnigan manual arts instructor Ralph Hickling.

"From the parks branch viewpoint," says director Bob Ahrens, "there's much we like about this project. It shows a proprietary interest in the parks that we're glad to encourage. We'll welcome more direct involvement of this sort."

The hope may be fulfilled. Instructor Hickling and his handy student crew are willing to prefabricate and erect a second hut in Strathcona next summer, if another donor will supply the necessary materials.

Anyone willing to do so is requested to get in touch with the parks branch, Ralph Hickling, or me.

That's it, and home now to sample our new-crop chili sauce. Tomatoes have their virtues after all!
